Glendening Announces $6.3 Million Funding Package For Higher Education

Governor Parris N. Glendening this week proposed a comprehensive four-year, $634.5 million initiative to strengthen the state's colleges and universities and control tuition costs. The announcement took place in the Howard Hughes Medical Institute Lab at the University of Maryland Baltimore County (UMBC).

"This is a direct effort to raise the quality of our public colleges and universities," Glendening said. "I am particularly concerned about increased tuition costs closing the door of opportunity for many students, both at four-year institutions and at our community colleges.

"I was the first person in my family to go to college, and I am currently the father of a college freshman," he said. "The package that I am introducing during the upcoming legisiative session will improve the education of our children and it will ensure that the working families of Maryland can send their children to college."

The cost of the package in fiscal year (FY) 1999 would be $64.5 million. Glendening said the four-year package includes $98 million for community colleges, plus funding to limit tuition increases to 4 percent at University of Maryland System (UMS) campuses.

The governor proposed a Science and Technology Scholarship Program designed to meet the needs of Maryland businesses and encourage high school graduates to major in science, engineering, computer and technology fields in college.

"Science and technology education is very expensive, and increased support will help Maryland attract and keep many more of its brightest students and build the state's work force," said Dr. Freeman A. Hrabowski III, president of the University of Maryland Baltimore County.

Glendening announced that student financial aid would increase by $19 million over the next four years.

"This funding is crucial for the children of Maryland's working families," the governor said. "Without this increase, many would find the doors to higher education closed."

Raymond "Chip" Mason, chairman of the Maryland Business Roundtable, expressed support for the funding.

"I am impressed with the scope of this initiative," said Mason. "The message it sends is that we are committed to having one of the best systems in the country — and that is the message we need to send in order to create good jobs in Maryland."

The governor also said he will introduce legislation to make the pre-paid tuition program more attractive to parents of college-bound students. This legislation would completely exempt prepaid tuition program interest from state taxation, as opposed to only deferring taxation.

Some highlights of Glendening's proposal include the following initiatives:

A base budget increase of 3 percent to the University of Maryland System (UMS) in FY 1999 and 4 percent increases in each of the next three years, totaling $234.7 million. The system would also receive $110 million over four years for pay raises, plus an additional $5 million a year for faculty salary increases to help move toward the goal of the 85th percentile.

The UMS would receive $4.2 million in FY 1999 and $8.4 million in FY 2000 to limit tuition increases to 4 percent for two years.

The University of Maryland, University College, would for the first time receive $3 million in FY 1999; the appropriation would increase by $3 million in each subsequent year.

State support for community colleges under the new funding formula would increase by 36.3 percent — $80.4 million in four years.

New Fire Fighters Complete Basic Training Program

New volunteer fire fighters from Garrett and Allegany counties recently completed the University of Maryland Fire Fighter - I, training program. The program was provided by the university's Maryland Fire & Rescue Institute (MFRI) and taught by Jim Crabtree, Oakland, a nationally certified fire and rescue emergency services instructor for the University of Md., and a member of the Oakland VFD.

Students participating were from the Oakland, Bittinger, Deep Creek, Kitzmiller, Bloomington, and McCoole volunteer fire departments and also the Tri-Towns Emergency Medical Services, Westernport. The students received N.F.P.A. 1001 standards training in fire and rescue techniques, including the use of ropes, fire hose lines, ladders, breathing apparatus, and fire extinguishers. Also taught were techniques and skills involving search and rescue, structural and vehicle fire fighting, ladders, forcible entry, and forest fire fighting.

COMPLETE FIRE TRAINING - A number of Garrett and Allegany county volunteer fire fighters recently completed a Fire Fighter 1 training program sponsored by the Maryland Fire & Rescue Institute and instructed by Jim Crabtree, Oakland, emergency services instructor for the institute. Pictured from left above, kneeling, are: Crabtree; Russell Sines, Deep Creek VFC; Nuasali Tichinel, Kitzmiller VFD; Willis Boltzel, Bittinger VFD; Tina Kuhlmann, Tri-Towns Rescue; Greg Skiles, Oakland VFD; and Tristan McCrobie, Bloomington VFD. Standing, same order, are: Ron Bowser, regional coordinator for MFRI; Steve Gregg, also of MFRI; Leeann Abernathy, Bloomington VFD; Alex Mellott, Oakland VFD; Marie Spurling, McCoole VFD; David Burrell, Kitzmiller VFD; Oliver Aldre, Tri-Towns Rescue; and Jim Schell and Wayne Babb, also with the MFRI faculty. See story for details.

The internationally certified program consists of over 95 hours of classroom and practical training, which serves as a basic level training requirement for fire fighters in the state of Maryland. The program was held at the Oakland fire station and the Southern Garrett County Rescue Squad station in Oakland. Live fire and breathing apparatus field programs were held at the MFRI Western Maryland Regional Training Center at Cresaptown.

All students participating received high grade averages in both the written and hands-on portions of the final test session given by Univ. of Md. evaluators at the Oakland Volunteer Fire Department station last month, according to Crabtree.

Classes For Managers, Supervisors Slated At GCC McHenry Campus

"Managing and supervising employees effectively is critical to building and maintaining healthy, profitable businesses," said Sandy Major, a small business consultant for the Western Maryland Small Business Development Center at Garrett Community College. "Businesses that create a setting which motivates employees to maximize productivity and improve profits," stated Major, "are led by managers and supervisors who demonstrate leadership and team building skills."

A series of classes starting in February at GCC will offer the opportunity for employees to strengthen their skills in meeting the many challenges of supervision. These classes are designed to build the skills and knowledge that will be most practical and valuable in meeting the diverse needs of the employees, managers, and owners of area businesses.

Participants may choose to take one or all of the mini-classes being offered as part of the Leadership Skills Series. This series has been designed to meet the specific needs of those who manage or supervise employees in business, health, service organizations, or school settings. The content of each of these classes is interrelated to the content of the other classes. In order to address the individual needs of each participant, each class is limited to 12 participants.

The "Stress and Time Management" class will focus on ways to use time to enrich professional and personal lives. Major said, "The way we use time determines many essential things in our lives: how much work we accomplish, how much time do we have to relax, how we feel about ourselves, and whether life runs us or we run it."

The GCC class is designed to help those who need to control their time and learn the skills to do so. This class will help participants discover ways to become more effective in meeting various responsibilities. Some course materials are based on First Things First by Stephen Covey. Practical individualized learning experiences will be focused on values, goals, and priorities; time management techniques; getting past procrastination and personal time wasters; increasing and using prime time; and conducting effective meetings. The class will meet on February 4, 11, and 18, from 6:30 to 9:45 p.m., at the McHenry campus of GCC.

"Building Productivity Through Teamwork," a class designed to help supervisors and managers strengthen the productivity of their workforce, will be meeting on three consecutive Wednesdays, March 4, 11, and 18. The class focuses on developing leadership skills that will enable each participant to transform his or her workforce into a highly productive coordinated team. Supervisors and managers will learn: the dynamics of effective leadership; how to build commitment; how to use low-cost incentives; delegation skills; ways to empower employees to take responsibility; how to give meaningful feedback and measure results; how to get others to direct and motivate themselves; and ways to build confidence and self-esteem.

"Strengthening Your Assertiveness and Communication Skills," taught by Julie Yoder, will help participants build skills in communicating effectively, building trust, and empowering others. It is designed to help participants build confidence, personal power, and supervisory effectiveness by learning to communicate assertively. Managers and supervisors will learn to assess and strengthen assertiveness skills, use motivational communication techniques, focus on listening to understand, give and get positive feedback, and coach and counsel. The class will meet on three consecutive Mondays, starting March 30, from 6:30 to 9:45 p.m.

"Training, Coaching, and Counseling Employees" will focus on developing employees that are committed to delivering quality services and products critical to the success of any business. Skills in training, coaching, and counseling team members will be strengthened through "hands-on" practice during the class. The instructor for this class is Sandy Major. This class will be held on three consecutive Wednesdays, April 22, 29, and May 6, from 6:30 to 9:45 p.m. Classes will be held at the McHenry campus.

"Planning, Organizing, and Controlling for Quality" is designed to help managers in improving the quality of products and services, which requires supervisors and employees to focus on continually improving their planning, processes, control systems, and decision making. Participants will explore how to tackle these areas in this three-session course. Topics will include learning to develop strategic and operational plans, improving processes, implementing and measuring control techniques, and effective decision making. This class will be held on May 13, 20, and 27 and will be taught by Sandy Major.

"Making all customer contacts positive is the key to service excellence," said Lynne Glotfelty, instructor for the upcoming "Building Quality Customer Service" class. "While customers are seeking quality products, they also want to be treated well and will continue business with companies that emphasize quality customer service. The lifeblood of any company is repeat business," she added.

This class will meet April 20 and April 27. This customer service class is designed to equip managers and front-line employees with the skills they need to build a business that values customers and delivers customer-centered services. Some of the skills taught focus on: how to build and keep customer good will, using actions that can build trust, improving communication and phone skills, and dealing calmly with difficult people.

The "Negotiation Skills" class is designed for those whose work involves negotiating contracts or sales work. The instructor, Ken Perrin, will use videos, text materials, and "hands-on" interaction to help students strengthen their negotiation and sales skills. In this four-session course, participants will learn how to prepare for negotiations, use techniques for creating win/win results, get to "yes," and close sales. The negotiation skills class will meet March 24 and 31 and, April 7 and 14 from 6:30 until 9 p.m.

All classes are sponsored in coordination with the Western Maryland Small Business Development Center. To register or receive additional information, persons may call the GCC Small Business Development Center at 301-387-3080.

Q. I have a glass candy jar with a tin screw bottom. It's in the shape of a young boy and is 5 inches tall. The base has blue paint on it and says, "Jackie Coogan Productions Inc., copyright 1925." Can you tell me what it's worth?

A. The original pressed-glass Jackie Coogan candy container was made by the Westmoreland Glass Co. The Jackie shape was painted to resemble the actor as he appeared in the movie, "The Kid."

Reproductions were made from the original molds in 1984 by the Fenton Art Glass Co. The reproductions have the letter B under the toes on the inside of the figure.

An original is worth $1,300.

Q. I just found a cast-iron figure of a horse that is bolted to a box that opens. The horse measures about 17 inches long and 17 inches high. It is about 1 inch thick. The horse has a small hole drilled in its breast, with the word "Dempster" cast across its side. I think part of the tail is broken. What was the horse in the box?

A. Your bobtail horse is a windmill weight made by the Dempster Mill Manufacturing Co. in Beatrice, Neb.

In the 1880s, most farms had windmills that were used to pump water out of the ground. Windmill weights were used to slow the windmill and keep the workings from being damaged during high winds.

Windmill weights were made in many shapes. Roosters, bulls, horses, buffaloes, stars and crescent moons were favorites. Squirrels were not popular, because farmers considered the squirrel to be destructive.

Figural windmill weights sell for $200 to $3,200. Bobtail horses sell for $200 to $350.

MICHAEL JORDAN: ATHLETE OF THE MILLENNIUM

Through his incomparable skill, indomitable will and noblesse oblige, Michael Jordan has come to singlehandedly symbolize his sport. Over the last two seasons, he and his teammates have recorded 171 wins and 30 losses. Jordan's career average of 31.7 is a record. In the more difficult post-season, Jordan somehow increased this to 33.6 points, another peak. He owns nine NBA scoring titles, two more than Wilt Chamberlain, and was named to the NBA All-Defensive First Team eight times.

According to January's Biography magazine, in a survey of African-American children, Jordan tied with God as the most admired person after their parents. Fans have been spotted praying before Jordan's statue outside Chicago's United Center. In his movie debut in "Space Jam," he helped save the world.

After a stellar performance on the University of North Carolina's basketball team, he left before graduation and was drafted by the Chicago Bulls, where he won Rookie of the Year. But despite Jordan's prowess, the Bulls couldn't beat Detroit. Then came Phil Jackson, whose "Zen Christian" coaching style of selfless awareness led them to victory. Clutching the World Championship trophy that eluded him for six years, Jordan cried uncontrollably. The team became unstoppable.

In 1993, tragedy struck. After driving back from a friend's funeral, Jordan's father was killed while napping roadside. Press rumors tying the death to Jordan's supposed gambling debts proved false. The motive was confirmed as robbery. A disgusted Jordan, tired of incessant media glare, retired.

For a while he tried his other love, baseball, but the court pulled him back. A triumphant Jordan led his team to a record-breaking 72 wins, continuing the streak to today. As Miami Heat coach Pat Riley said, "Other teams will only be able to win after Jordan retires." Although Jordan turns 35 in February, he's still going strong.

The Small Business Development Center of Garrett Community College offers a variety of short classes for those who are starting or growing small businesses. These classes are designed to provide owners or managers with the skills needed for the basic operations of a business.

The first class in the series, "Starting and Operating a Home-Based Business," is scheduled for February 2 and 3. One out of three new businesses are started from home, and this course will help students understand the myths versus the realities of living and working under the same roof. Topics will include: licensing, insurance set-up, family issues, and marketing. The instructor, Beverley Williams, is president of the American Association of Home-Based Businesses and is a nationally recognized home business expert. Students will learn about start-up issues, setting up the office, finances, and growing in the business. This two-session class will meet from 6:30 until 9:45 p.m. at the McHenry campus.

In "Introduction to Small Business," the second class in the series, students will learn start-up considerations, marketing, financing, management, and various types of small business ownership. This is a one-day session to be held March 5 from 6:30 until 9:45 p.m. The instructor will be Madeline Collins, who has considerable experience in operating small businesses in Garrett County.

In "Records Management for Small Business," students will focus on record-keeping techniques that are essential for those who are operating a small business. This class focuses on how to set up the basic required records: inventory and personnel records, receipts and disbursements, and federal, state, and local tax forms. The class will meet on March 16 and 23 from 6:30 to 9:45 p.m. Yvonne Basemore will be teaching this class.

"Developing a Business Plan and Finances" will be taught by Clay Garland, a local CPA. "Whether you're starting a business or expanding an ongoing venture, a business plan will help you use your resources most effectively to achieve success," Garland said. It is also required by financial institutions for loans. A business plan helps in working out cash flow problems, budgeting resources, and planning for growth. This class emphasizes the elements of a good business plan and the essentials of finance necessary to run a small business. This class will meet on four consecutive Thursdays from April 23 through May 14 from 6:30 to 9:45 p.m.

"Accounting I for Small Business," a class designed to help small business owners understand their financial position, will be offered starting May 28 and will run through June 25 at the McHenry campus of GCC. This class, which will meet for five consecutive Thursday evenings, is designed for those who do the bookkeeping and accounting for small businesses. It will start with very basic material, but the Record Management class is a prerequisite for this class. Participants in the class will learn about the fundamentals of accounting, effective problem-solving techniques for accounting, and ways to develop and use financial statements. It will also cover various aspects of analyzing, classifying, and recording transactions and payroll and depreciation. It will be taught by Clay Garland, CPA. Class times are 6:30 to 9:45 p.m.

"Advertising on a Shoestring" will be taught by Mark Hucek, manager of the Wisp Resort Hotel. The class will focus on techniques for advertising a small business in a limited market. Participants will learn how to discover methods to make their advertising dollars work most effectively, planning and establishing image, the best ways to communicate benefits about a product or service, focus on various types of advertising media, and what it takes to get and keep a customer. This course will be held on three consecutive Mondays, May 4, 11, and 18, from 6:30 to 9:45 p.m.

All classes are sponsored in coordination with the Western Maryland Small Business Development Center. To register or receive additional information, persons may call the G Small Business Devel ment Center at 301-3 3080.

Route 219 Detour In Progress North Of Meyersdale

The Pennsylvania Department of Transportation (PennDOT) is in the process of placing steel girders on two bridges that will carry the new four-lane Route 219 Meyersdale By-pass over the existing highway north of the town. The construction work is necessitating two separate closures of Route 219 north of Meyersdale, and highway signs are in place along Interstate 68 in Garrett County advising motorists of the detours in Pennsylvania.

The road has reportedly been closed since Tuesday and will reopen around mid-day tomorrow, Friday, Jan. 23. This first closure was to place beams for the bypass bridge that will carry the new southbound lanes over the existing Route 219.

The second closure is scheduled to begin Tuesday, Jan. 27, and continue through Friday, Jan. 30, as beams are placed to carry the new northbound lanes of the bypass over the existing highway.

PennDOT assistant district engineer Dick Fox said that existing Route 219 about a mile north of Meyersdale will be closed to all traffic just prior to the start of each beam placement operation, and southbound traffic will be detoured over Route 160 south of Berlin and on to Pennsylvania State Routes 2017 and 2006 through Sand Patch and Glade City. Northbound traffic will be directed the reverse over the same routes.

Fox said there are eight steel girders that will make four girder lines for each bridge, and that the total distance spanned by the girders between abutment and piers is 154 feet. "Each of the girder lines involves the splicing of two beams at a point about directly above the existing Route 219," he said.

Fox noted that weather could be a factor in the schedule of the beam placement, and advised motorists to monitor local media for any changes in the operations.

New Enterprise Stone and Lime Co. Inc. of northern Bedford County is the contractor for the $53.1 million project, and overall completion is slated for this fall.

Social Workers, Legislators To Discuss Issues

Child abuse and neglect issues and concerns pertaining to insurance and managed care are among the topics to be explored and discussed when social workers meet with state legislators next week.

The Maryland Legislative Council of Social Workers will hold its annual legislative forum for state lawmakers on Jan. 29 at the Governor Calvert House in Annapolis. This annual event brings social workers from throughout the state together with their senators and delegates to discuss legislative priorities.

There are five professional organizations with over 5,000 members that make up the Maryland Legislative Council of Social Workers. The legislative priorities for 1998 identified by the group include child abuse and neglect, patient appeals and grievances, family violence, children's health insurance, and refundable earned income tax credits for the working poor.

Featured speakers at the forum include Sen. Jennie M. Forehand, Montgomery Co., and Del. Michael E. Busch, Anne Arundel Co. A reception will follow the forum.

Notes From Bittinger

by Joan Sussman

Dr. Ralph Buckel Jr., Chestertown, and Jeff Buckel, Ph.D., New Jersey, recently visited Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Buckel.

Visitors at the home of Martha Glotfelty last week were Audrey Brenneman, Ferne Beachy, and Becky and Dorothy Bowser.

Kendra and John Wells and daughters, Rockville, recently visited the Stanton/Beachy home.

Harriett Buckel recently fell on the ice and broke her ankle.

Arthur Itis, Painsville, Ga., recently visited Ferne Beachy and Ruth DiPaolo. He curtailed some of their winter activities for several days.

The "Flying Squirrel" family recently visited Mrs. Beulah Moon.

Martha Glotfelty and Audrey Brenneman had supper at Denny's Restaurant one evening last week.

Meredith Sussman celebrated her seventh birthday on Sunday with a swimming party. About 20 children romped, giggled, and played catch ball. Attending were Kelsey and Ben Morrison, Emma Bass, Jamie Haydel, Jessie Biser, Ashley Friend, Sara and Megan Vogel, Blakely Glotfelty, Tanya Devine, and Megan, Amy and Jennifer Shaffer. Several of her friends stayed as overnight guests. Sunday evening after the swim party, it was over to grandma's house (Ruth's) for a cousins' get-together birthday party. Assisting at the pool party were Beth Shaffer, Carol Bass, Mike Vogel, and Walter Haydel.

Emma Bass and Meredith Sussman attended a birthday party for Gracie Herpel at McDonald's Restaurant on Monday. How much fun can you have on a weekend?

A small gathering was held at the Rodney Glotfelty home for fans of the Maryland Terrapins on Saturday night to see if the Terps could come upon another win after trampling North Carolina earlier in the week. However, the Terps took a loss.

Barry Glotfelty was fortunate last week to be on hand for the Maryland and North Carolina game. ACC games are some of the most exciting in the country. Anything can happen.

Barry Glotfelty was a visitor of his mother, Ruth DiPaolo, and other brothers and sisters over the weekend.

Dance Alloy To Present Concert At Frostburg St.

The Frostburg State University Cultural Events Series will host Pittsburgh's Dance Alloy on Friday, Feb. 13, and Saturday, Feb. 14. The performances, part of the ongoing FSU centennial celebration, are scheduled for 8 p.m. in the Performing Arts Center Drama Theatre.

The evening with Dance Alloy includes an as yet untitled dance commissioned to celebrate the founding of FSU. Under the direction of choreographer and artistic director Mark Taylor, the group promises "an original, multifaceted work that weaves the spirit of a tenacious mining community together with the excitement and movement of dance." Evoking the history, heritage, and lives that have shaped the Frostburg community, the dance will surprise audiences as it challenges performance conventions, according to Taylor.

"The architecture of the FSU Performing Arts Center provides an exciting impetus for the creation of a performance event which explores connections between both the history of the university and movement and Dance Alloy and local performers," stated Taylor.

The Dance Alloy event will undergo a final intensive two-week rehearsal lasting from January 28 until opening night. The group will also include the appearance of over 40 individuals from FSU's own student and faculty population. Expected to perform are dancers from the FSU dance company, choir members under the direction of Dr. Karen Soderberg, Dr. Philip Allen, Dr. Greg Latta, and six student actors. In addition, eight faculty musicians will play a movement arranged and conducted by Dr. Jon Bauman, and seven students from the Adventure Sports program will entertain with feats of suspension and balance.

Dance Alloy has appeared at FSU in both 1995 and in 1997 as part of the University's Cultural Events Series. It was during the 1995 visit that an idea of a commissioned work celebrating FSU's centennial was born.

Tickets for these performances may be purchased at the Lane Center Information Desk, 301-687-4411. Seating is reserved.

This event is funded in part by FSU through the Centennial Committee and the Vira I. Heinz Endowment. The endowment's mission is to support progress and community development, the arts, education, health, human services, and the environment.

The 1997-1998 FSU Cultural Events Series is also funded in part by the Maryland State Arts Council and is presented in association with WFWM 91.9 FM.

FSU is committed to making all of its programs, services, and activities accessible to persons with disabilities. Persons may request accommodations through the ADA Compliance Office, FSU Library Room 228, 301-687-4102, TDD 301-687-7955.

Frostburg State University Ranked As "Safest Campus" In Maryland

Frostburg State University has been rated the safest campus among Maryland's four-year institutions of higher education, according to a recent study of safe college campuses.

The report, published in November 1997 by Healey Roman Associates, also ranks FSU as the 83rd safest college or university in the nation out of nearly 400 others.

FSU Director of Public Safety Brian P. Shanley says the rating is a reflection of the ongoing excellence of his officers combined with the assistance of those on campus.

"It's truly a team effort," said Shanley. "It's a combination of our crime prevention initiatives and the cooperation of our students, faculty, and staff."

Shanley adds that the FSU Residence Life Office excels in its efforts to provide a safe living environment for students. "Members of the Residence Life Office are first-rate. They run a professional program that emphasizes both freedom and individual responsibility," he said.

The rating was based on averaging crime statistics for the years 1993, 1994, and 1995. The primary resource used for the report was "Crime in the United States," published by the U.S. Department of Justice.

Since 1991 schools have been required by the Federal Campus Security Act to offer their students, employees, and applicants statistical summaries of crimes on their campuses. This data, in addition to the Justice Department's information, was used to supplement the report.

For more information on Frostburg State University, persons may contact the Office of Admissions at 301-687-4201.

Gasoline Prices Still Declining

Gasoline prices in Maryland are at the lowest point since February 1996, reports AAA. Regular, self-serve unleaded averaged $1.151 per gallon in this month's AAA survey. The last time gas prices were lower than that was in February 1996 when motorists paid $1.138 per gallon.

Prices are 2.6 cents lower than December's $1.177 average price and 14.7 cents lower than a year ago. The large decrease can mainly be attributed to continuing declines in crude oil prices (down by $3 a barrel in the past month and $9 a barrel below a year ago), an increase in inventory (crude oil inventory is more than 20 million barrels higher than a year ago and gasoline stocks more than 10 million barrels higher than in January 1997), and oil companies staying at high levels of petroleum production, with refineries operating at 96 percent of their operable capacity, up from 92 percent a year ago.

In Memory Of
Harriet Virginia DeBerry

During times of sorrow, it's hard to name each and every friend. We will say Harriet had many friends. The overwhelming support for Harriet and our family through prayers, meals, and friendship is what every great American dreams of. Friends rearranged their schedules and gave up their time to take Harriet to Cumberland for daily chemo/radiation treatments. Friends gave their time to cook meals for our family when Harriet was not able, and made time to visit and time to pray. To these friends who prayed, cared, cooked, listened, drove, and helped at the store, or who fit into the "God Bless" category, may those favors be returned to you ten-fold.

A special "Thank You" for the TLC that Garrett County Hospice and Sue Teagarden, R.N., provided. Also thanks to Dr. Thomas Johnson, Dr. John Porcaro and staff, St. John's Episcopal Church, for all the prayers from other churches, ministers and prayer groups, Deer Park Community Group, Durst Funeral Home, and all our wonderful neighbors.

A big "Thank You" to Rev. Thomas Staup, Frederick; Rev. John Grant, Oakland; and Rev. Chip Lee, Deer Park.

LWV THE LEAGUE OF WOMEN VOTERS

MEASURING THE HEALTH OF AMERICAN DEMOCRACY

Is the United States a healthy democracy today? The League of Women Voters believes it is not. We have selected five key indicators to measure the health of American democracy. Each of these indicators, in its own right, tells us something basic about how our system is working. Together, they tell us about the overall structure, about the foundations of our democratic system. The indicators are:

• Voter turnout: In a healthy democracy, citizens vote. Democracy is weakened and government is less accountable when people don't vote. Low voter turnout suggests that citizens no longer see the relevance of government to their lives and that they are choosing to withhold their consent.

• Campaign finance: In a healthy democracy, citizens have more influence on public policy than do special interests. The campaign finance system is an indicator of the influence that special interests have over the legislative and election processes. It is also a gauge of the openness and fairness of the political system to new ideas and new faces.

• Civic education and knowledge: In a healthy democracy, citizens understand how government works and hope to make their voices heard. Citizens must have a basic level of knowledge and the skills to participate effectiveiy. In a real sense, civic education and knowledge measure the capacity for self-government—the capacity of citizens to play an informed and active role in American democracy.

• Diversity of representation: In a healthy democracy, elected officeholders reflect the diversity of the citizens they represent. Diversity of representation measures both how open the system is to women and minorities and how well the government represents the needs and concerns of all its citizens.

• Civic participation: In a healthy democracy, citizens come together through civic institutions to resolve problems for the common good. Participation gives people a sense of belonging and ownership. Participation builds and draws on citizens' energy, ideas, understanding, and skills to create better, healthier communities for the future.

THE DIAGNOSIS: WEAKENING FOUNDATIONS

Democracy cannot thrive in the conditions portrayed here. Each of the key indicators points to a continuing, significant, systematic loss of vitality. Taken together, the indicators present a picture of a democracy in trouble.

• Voter participation: Voter turnout fell to 49.4 percent of eligible voters in 1996. This was the lowest voter turnout in a presidential election since 1924 and continued a long-term downward trend that began in the early 1960s, when turnout was nearly 63 percent.

• Campaign finance: In 1996, the two major political parties more than tripled the special interest contributions they received in the form of "soft money" over 1992 levels. The "soft money" loophole is used to circumvent campaign finance laws and allows unlimited special interest contributions from corporations, unions and others. The major Democratic campaign committees increased their soft money contributions by 242 percent, to $124 million. Republicans raised even more, $138 million, for a 178 percent increase. Overall, candidates relied on private money to compete in a system where the average winning House campaign costs $684,000 and the average winning Senate campaign costs almost $4 million.

• Civic education and knowledge: More than three out of four Americans (76 percent) believe they do not have "enough accurate information" to participate at the voting booth, according to a survey done for the League of Women Voters. Fewer and fewer citizens have an adequate understanding of how democracy works: Only 38 percent of American eighth graders know that Congress makes laws.

• Diversity of representation: The percentage of women and minorities serving in Congress has remained stagnant at levels well below their numbers in the population. Women make up more than 51 percent of the voting-age population but held only 11 percent of the seats in Congress in 1997. African Americans made up 11 percent of the population at the time of the 1990 census, but only seven percent of the members of Congress in 1997 are black. Just three percent of current members of Congress are Latinos, a group that comprised nearly eight percent of the electorate in 1990.

• Civic participation: The number of Americans report-ing that they had attended a town meeting on town or school affairs fell by one third between 1973 and 1993. Vir-tually every public institution from religious organizations to schools to the media has suffered a decline in trust just since 1990.

The League believes that the trends demonstrated by these indicators are interrelated and mutually reinforcing. Low voter turnout, for example, increases the power of special interests in the system and reduces the likelihood of campaign finance reform. The failure to enact campaign finance reform ensures, in turn, that the money barrier remains too high for many women and minorities who might otherwise consider running for office. And the continuing disengagement from citizen participation raises the danger that too few Americans have the experience and knowledge needed to help their communities resolve problems for the common good.

Countering the discouraging trends, however, are encouraging successes that prove American democracy can be revived through concerted citizen action. These examples help point the way to solutions by showing what works. For example,

• Voter turnout actually increased in 1996 among certain minority groups and in communities where community-based organizing focused on get-out-the-vote activities.

• Citizens in many states have decided to carry the banner for campaign finance reform themselves, putting initiatives on the ballot and campaigning successfully to get them passed.

If the problems now confronting our democratic system are special, or especially difficult, the fact that we have such problems surely is not. Democracy is not a thing, it is a process. Self-government cannot be put on automatic pilot. As citizens, we need to engage in the process of making democracy work.

Eastern Shore Conference Aims At Impact Of Phiesteria Scare

What's really in the Hughes Commission report? What do we know about the relationship between pfiesteria and animal waste? How can farmers lessen the perceived impact on Maryland agriculture?

These are the major questions to be addressed during a day-long conference being sponsored on January 29 by the University of Maryland's Cooperative Extension Service. The event will run from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. in the Richard A. Henson Center at the University of Maryland Eastern Shore.

Program speakers will include members of the Hughes Commission "Blue Ribbon" panel appointed by Governor Parris Glendening, spokespersons for the environmental and agricultural communities, University of Maryland agricultural researchers and Extension specialists, and administrators from the Maryland Department of Agriculture and state Department of Natural Resources.

James Hanson, agricultural economist, will give a closing wrap-up presentation. Based at College Park, Dr. Hanson is coordinator for agriculture and natural resources programs of the university's Cooperative Extension Service.

He notes that most of the afternoon program will be devoted to management techniques and alternative uses for poultry manure that are environment-conscious and economically feasible—with possible state government cost-sharing opportunities.

There is no charge for the program, and lunch is free. All interested persons are invited. However, pre-registration is required by January 22. Interested persons may call either Joe Trumbauer at 410-651-1350 or Turp Garrett at 410-632-1972.

Farming In Maryland.....

Wildlife Fund For Conservation Sign-Up Open

"Farmers and landowners can now participate in a new conservation program, the Wildlife Habitat Incentive Program (WHIP), designed to develop and improve wildlife habitat," said David Doss, state conservationist for the U.S. Department of Agriculture's (USDA) Natural Resources Conservation Service (NRCS). "Maryland expects to receive $150,000 in WHIP funding to provide cost-share assistance to landowners to install conservation practices that will restore and manage upland grass habitat to benefit groundnesting birds and associated wildlife."

Applications and information about WHIP are available at local NRCS or Soil Conservation District offices, both located in USDA Service Centers. The first sign-up period runs from January 21 to February 20. Applications will be ranked according to criteria which will determine which proposals offer the most environmental benefits at the lowest cost.

Conservation practices eligible for WHIP funding in Maryland are the restoration of grassland habitat in field borders and entire fields, the restoration of riparian buffers with trees, shrubs, or herbaceous plants, and the stabilization of adjacent streambanks with trees and shrubs. To qualify for WHIP, the area must contain at least one acre of grassland, shrub or tree plantings, or at least 150 feet of streambank stabilization plantings. Outdoor classrooms or educational projects may be exempt from the minimum size criteria.

"The use of native plants, especially grasses such as switchgrass, little bluestem, and indiangrass, are encouraged because they are well adapted to the area, less invasive, and more likely to provide a higher quality habitat with lower maintenance costs," said Anne Lynn, NRCS state biologist and WHIP program manager. "Native plants provide additional benefits by protecting soil from erosion and improving water quality. WHIP is important because it restores habitat that was lost because of intensive farming and urbanization. Reduced habitat is the primary reason for species decline. In Maryland, these land uses have resulted in declining populations of quail, meadowlarks, field sparrows, goldfinches, and pheasants, as well as other small animals, such as rabbits."

WHIP participants enter into a cost-share agreement to install specific wildlife conservation practices, as established in their conservation plan. Conservation plans are developed together by the landowner, the Soil Conservation District, and NRCS. The WHIP agreement lasts from five to 10 years with NRCS providing technical assistance and paying up to 75% of the cost of installing the conservation practices. Cost-share generally cannot exceed $10,000 per contract. Cooperating state wildlife organizations or nonprofit agencies may provide expertise and additional cost-share funding to help the landowner complete the project.

"WHIP funds are primarily targeted toward restoration of wildlife habitat on private lands and are an excellent resource for developing outdoor educational classrooms for local schools where wildlife habitat can be studied and managed," said Doss. "WHIP funds can be used to plant buffers along streams, which ultimately protect water quality and the Chesapeake Bay."

A voluntary conservation program, WHIP was created in the 1996 Farm Bill. WHIP is currently budgeted nationwide at a total funding level of $50 million through 2002. Funds will be targeted to wildlife and fishery areas currently experiencing significant declines in wildlife habitat.

NRCS, formerly the Soil Conservation Service, is USDA's lead conservation agency.

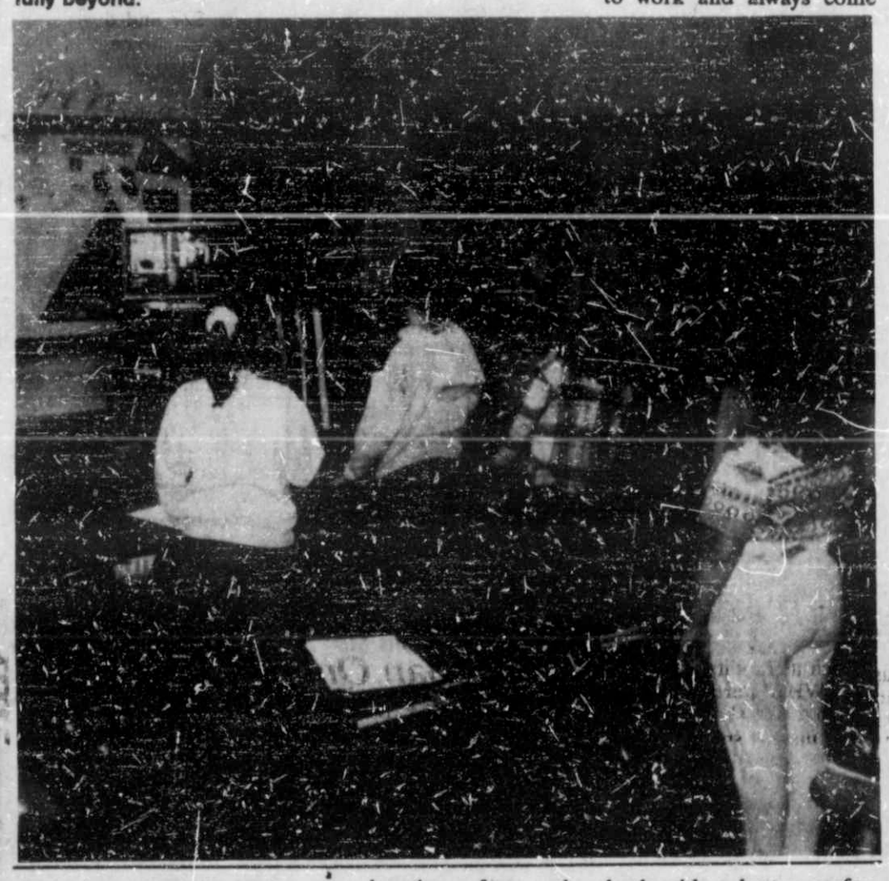
BEHIND EVERY GREAT NEWSCAST IS A GREAT CREW, and the Grantsville School's Morning News is no exception. The daily program is viewed by the students who volunteer to produce it "as a job," according to sponsoring teacher Mike Warne, "which they freely give of their time to do." These photos show some of the crew that made Monday's broadcast happen. Above, seen from behind the camera, are equipment manager David Fletcher, who is partially obstructed at the far left, cameraperson Cynthia Brenneman as she operates the filming equipment, newscasters Jackie Folk and Ryan Wengerd, and Claresse Frazee, who is cueing up the news script for the announcers to read. Above right, shown from the vantage of the newsdesk, are Ashley Boylan, Lucas McMillan, Erik Woods, Frazee, Brooks DuBose, Brenneman, Kara Bowser, and Warne. Preparing to deliver the day's weather statistics, but not shown in these photos, was weatherman Zachary Cupler. (Sorry, Zachary.) Below right, a class joins the news team in the morning recital of the Pledge of Allegiance, a ritual that endures into the video age and hopefully beyond.



Grantsville School's Morning News: Where Students Tune In And Turn On

by David Foster

Of all the various adjectives tossed around to describe the news media, some complimentary, some not, one that everyone can certainly agree on is "dependable." A click of the television at the same time every evening brings Rather, Brokaw, or Jennings to let us know what's going on in the world; Paul Harvey's radio show is a daily institution in households across the county; The Republican newspaper you are holding in your hands comes out every week, rain, snow or shine.

Just like those icons of journalism, the Grantsville Morning News is there at 8:55 a.m. every morning to inform the students, teachers, and staff of Grantsville Elementary School of the important events in their world. Day in and day out for the past 17 years, the student-produced closed circuit television broadcast has been piped into each classroom, as hundreds of students have participated in bringing the news to the people who need to know — their classmates.

Following an introductory welcome from the announcers, the Morning News opens each broadcast by inviting the entire school population to stand with the news crew, hand over heart, for the Pledge of Allegiance. Then the audience settles into their desks to catch the news of the day from their peers. School announcements, birthdays, contest winners, community events, and a weather report make up a typical broadcast. At times the students have also written and produced commercial spots on location from the school's student-run bookstore, and campaign commentaries for their favorite candidates during a presidential election year.

A dozen students work as a team to produce the broadcast each morning, and as the crews rotate throughout the school year practically every student in the third, fourth, and fifth grade participates. "All the kids who sign up to work on the News are accepted," fourth grade teacher and News sponsor Mike Warne said. "We never turn anyone away, and there's something for everyone to do. We need students to set up the studio, run the camera, produce computer graphics and cue cards, and do the actual news announcements and the weather. They sign up for their jobs a month in advance, so they are doing what they want to do and know what's involved to make it happen," he said.

The dependability of the Grantsville Morning News, and all news productions, is a result of a great deal of hard work behind the scenes that goes into each five-minute broadcast. "Putting on the News every morning teaches the kids responsibility," said Warne. "They see that everyone's job is interdependent on the others, and that working as a team is the only way they can get everything done. It's a group effort."

Experience, and sometimes mistakes, can often be the best teachers. "The kids who work on the program know that they being seen by over 300 people," said Warne. "Kids who are new to the program sometimes make mistakes on their first day because they're not prepared; then when they see the results of their lack of preparation, they get down to work and always come back with a better performance the next time," he observed.

As students take on more responsibility, their confidence grows accordingly. "While some kids take to the broadcasting right off with real poise, others start out nervous and a little bit scared; then they start to develop confidence over time as they see themselves improving with more and more practice," Warne said.

It's also been a logical progression to the video age for the school, and student involvement and responsibilities have evolved accordingly. "Before we had the Morning News on television," said Warne, "the announcements were on the public address (PA) system following the Pledge of Allegiance," as many of us can recall from our school days.

"The next step occurred when teachers were encouraged to send kids to the office to lead the school in the pledge on the PA system," Warne said. "Then, 17 years ago, we decided to try and make a televised production of the Pledge and the morning announcements."

In the years since the broadcast began, perhaps over 1,000 students have participated, creating a five-minute program leaving them with memories that endure beyond their school years. "Some of our early news crew members are getting close to 30 years old now," Warne laughed. "Once in a while a former student will come by and ask, 'Do you remember me?' They'll say they were on the Morning News years ago and that they've never forgotten it. Some of them even ask to see the newsroom," he chuckled.

The news about the News has spread beyond Grantsville. Hagerstown's WHAG-TV covered the Morning News from the school's studio several years back, and The Cumberland Times-News featured the program in an article by Grantsville resident Esther Bender.

Grantsville School principal Dale Garlitz, who sometimes uses the program to address the student body with special announcements of his own, summed up the value of the Morning News as he said, "It's much more than having students just watch the announcements on TV; it gives all students the opportunity to participate, work together, and be successful. It also capitalizes on the experience of older students who help out the younger ones just beginning to learn the ropes of the program," the principal said.

Fifth-grade camera operator Cynthia Brenneman summed up the philosophy of the students who work to make the program a success, sometimes giving up their recess time to volunteer for the Morning News: "It's more interesting to do the News than just watch the news," she said.

And that's the way it was — and is.

Hummel Named AHEC Director

Kery Hummel will join the Western Maryland Area Health Education Center as its new executive director on January 26. Hummel has over 20 years of health care experience in administration, planning, and policy development. He leaves his post as director of executive operations at the Maryland Health Resources Planning Commission in Baltimore, where he has been since 1989, to take the leadership role at the AHEC. Previously, he was the executive director and the director of planning at the Health Systems Agency of Western Maryland in Cumberland.

"While we had numerous qualified applicants for this position, Kery far surpassed the requirements that we had set up," said Dr. Gail Mazzocco, member of the AHEC's board of directors and its search committee. "He will be a strong addition to the AHEC staff.

"The Western Maryland AHEC is a health personnel development organization working to improve access to and promote quality in health care in Western Maryland through educational partnerships with centers for higher education, community health professionals, and other vital supporters and advocates. "I have seen firsthand the role that ensuring the appropriate number and kind of health professions plays in improving access to health care and the health status of the population," Hummel stated. "I am excited to be part of furthering health professions education in western Maryland."

Hummel, who hails from Texas, received a master of science in health care administration and a bachelor of arts in biology and sociology from Trinity University in San Antonio.

CIVIC CLUB PROMOTES FIRE SAFETY FOR KIDS - Dorothy Cathell, president of the GFWC Civic Club of Oakland, is shown delivering 1,267 "Fire Smart Kids" brochures to Dr. Brenda McCartney, director of curriculum and instruction for Garrett County's public schools, grades pre-K through 8. A joint project of the Deer Park Community Volunteer Fire Department and the Civic Club, the brochures will be distributed to every child in pre-K through second grade throughout the public schools. Club member Pat Flisinger designed the caricatures for the brochure, the layout and text were developed by Alden Andersen of the Deer Park VFD, and printing costs were borne by the Civic Club. "I've really enjoyed the Army so far," said Tasker, who is trained as a chemical operations specialist. "It's really been fun. I especially like what I've been doing with machinery and doing things like decontaminating vehicles."

Following this assignment, she will report to her first permanent duty station, Fort McClelland, Ala., where she took both basic training and the 10-week advanced technical training which prepared her for her job.

The daughter of Christopher Tasker, Oakland, Tasker has enlisted for three years and will receive the Montgomery G.I. Bill to help her with her education following her tour of duty.

Patrick Morley Will Speak At Mountaintop '98

Living for Christ Conferences has announced that Patrick Morley, best known as an author and speaker, will be featured at their 12th annual get-away conference, Mountaintop '98, to be held at Lakeview Resort in Morgantown on March 6-8, 1998.

Morley began his career as a businessman. He founded Morley Properties which, during the 1980s, was one of Florida's largest privately held companies. His conference topic for this event will be "Finding God's Purpose for Your Life."

"In very practical ways, he will explore character studies of Adam, Eve, Joseph, Abraham, and Sarah to illustrate how God uses us for His own glory, while at the same time filling our lives with a deep sense of purpose and meaning. This will be especially helpful for Christians who are tired of just 'going through the motions' spiritually," said Anne Gibson Robinson, co-founder of the sponsoring organization and a native of Garrett County. "We are very pleased to offer such a dynamic and sought-after speaker. He usually speaks at much larger gatherings, but really feels drawn to be a part of Mountaintop."

Morley's work is known for "its common sense, Biblical wisdom, and helpful candor." Among the many books he has written are The Man in the Mirror, Two-Part Harmony: A Devotional for Couples, The Seven Seasons of a Man's Life, Walking with Christ in the Details of Life, and soon-to-be-released What Husbands Wish Their Wives Knew About Men.

In addition to Morley's teaching, Richard Allen Farmer, award-winning pianist and vocalist from Dallas, will lead in musical worship and appear in concert at A Festival in Celebration of the Joy of the Lord.

Several seminars will expand the weekend: Margin, presented by Mark Elfstrand of WORD-FM's "Pittsburgh Talks"; The Joy of the Lord is My Strength, with New Martinsville businessman Bill Forbes; Mathematical Design in the Bible? An Engineer's Dream Come True, led by Rick Ferguson, Bible teacher, also of New Martinsville; and Rising Above the Magnetic Pull of the Refrigerator, presented by Rhonda Elfstrand, Weigh-Down Workshop coordinator. WTOV-TV anchorman Jim Forbes will join with the younger attendees for an "age-limited" time.

Also to be shown is the film The Woman Who Willed a Miracle, a true story about a mother's hope and her blind, mentally handicapped son.

"Everyone needs time away—from work and home responsibilities, from telephones ringing, from daily pressures—to stop, rest, take a look at priorities and to be renewed, refreshed, and readjusted," said Robinson. "With good teaching and a great atmosphere at a wonderful site, Mountaintop is the perfect place for that to happen!"

Registration fees, including all programs, two nights' lodging, and four meals, begin at $157 per person. Registration brochures and information are available through Living for Christ Conferences, P.O. Box 217, New Martinsville, WV 26155, 304-455-5322, e-mail: mtntop@ovis.net.

Devotions were presented by Kaylen Fike and Hannah Myers. Kaylen read the poem "Snowman," and Hannah read the poem "Silence." The minutes and roll call were taken by Becca Fint, secretary. Treasurer Jessica Callahan also gave a report.

Stacy Fint presented a program telling how to correctly make posters to be entered in the county competition. Members were then assigned to various categories for the poster entries. Completed posters must be given to leader Stacy Fint during the next week. Members are asked to bring baked goods to the February meeting for a Valentine bake-off contest.

Kendra Durst led the "Watermelon Song" as the closing number. There were 19 members and three leaders present. Kaylen Fike, reporter.

MOUNTAINEER 4-H

On January 12, Eglon Mountaineer 4-H Club met at the Eglon Memorial Building, with Ashley and Matthew Bachtel, Dana Feather, Grant and Maria Harsh, Sara Lewis, Christopher and Josh Mullenax, Craig and Shawn Rembold, Sarah Snyder, Bridgette and Leslie Strawser, Lindsey and Tom Teets, and Tracy Teets attending.

The music committee took its devotions from Chicken Soup for the Soul with Maria Harsh, Tracy Teets, and Sara Lewis reading. Sara Lewis led the pledges.

Tracy Teets reported that the group sang for Courtland Acres residents, read poems, and visited patients in their rooms during their Jan. 2 visit. The music committee led in a song.

Dates announced by the leaders were in a Jan. 26 Preston County 4-H Foundation meeting to be held at 6 p.m. at the Extension Office, and a February 9 deadline to drop or add projects.

An ad slogan game was led by Shawn Rembold and Grant Harsh.

Fire Rekindles, Destroys House On Wednesday

A fire believed to have been caused by an electrical or wiring problem first caused an estimated $35,000 damage to a Grantsville area house Wednesday morning, but when the fire rekindled last evening, the structure was destroyed and the loss was increased to $150,000.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Howe, whose house was located at Peapatch Lane off Fairview Road and off New Germany Road, were not at home when the fire originated and was reported by a neighbor at 10:55 a.m. Some 30 volunteer fire fighters from Grantsville, Bittinger, Deer Park, Salisbury, and Eastern Garrett VFDs responded to the residence, along with the Northern Rescue Squad and the county air cascade vehicle from Deep Creek VFD.

Since the house was located about three miles off the main road down a lane, mud and about a foot of wet snow made access difficult for the volunteer personnel.

The fire was brought under control and units left the scene around noon. However, several hours

ICE ON THE SUN — These sunflowers, adorned with teeth of ice, have certainly seen sunnier days. Garrett County has, too, as Sol was hidden for too many days in a row. However, the skies are clear today, at last, and the 11 inches of snow that fell Tuesday night are melting down to a soft three or four as the temperatures rise into the lower 40s. School was canceled in the county yesterday because of the snowfall. This was the third official day of closing for the school system; two allowance days remain. All in all, the weather has been strange this year, with more ice than usual and less snow. El Niño, perhaps?

Company Gives Computers To Local School

A corporate donation to Dennett Road Elementary School recently added to the number of classroom computers available for student use.

The school received eight Macintosh computers, 17-inch monitors, a laser printer, and computer software. The donation, valued at approximately $12,000, was made by Bell Atlantic Video Services Company, Reston, Virginia.

Aleta Glotfelty, Dennett Road PTO president, was instrumental in bringing the equipment into the school. Glotfelty explained that she arranged the donation of the computers through a former Oakland resident, Mandy Bosley. "Ms. Bosley has been with Bell Atlantic Video Services for 10 years and now serves as manager-performance analysis," she said.

The donation was made possible as a result of the company's transition from Macintosh computers to a PC-based environment, she continued.

This donation enabled Dennett Road School to place a Macintosh in every classroom for grades 3, 4, and 5. "Internet access to these classrooms will be forthcoming in the next few weeks," Glotfelty said.

Tractor Trailer Flips In Snow; Driver Charged

A tractor trailer driven by a Uniontown, Pa., man overturned yesterday on Gorman Road, sending the driver to the hospital and spilling a load of rock salt along the roadway.

According to a report filed with Maryland State Police, Barrack W, McHenry, Richard Powell, 49, was southbound on Route 560 (Gorman Road) north of Steyer-White Church Road around 9:43 when the incident occurred.

Police reported that the tractor trailer slid on the snowy road surface, traveled across the northbound lane and struck a guardrail before overturning. Southern Rescue Squad responded to the scene and transported Powell to Garrett Memorial Hospital. He was treated and released.

Powell was charged by police with failure to reduce speed in response to the road conditions.

Car Overturns

A single vehicle accident on North Glade Road last Friday sent the driver to Garrett Memorial Hospital.

State police reported that around 4 p.m. Thomas E. Lynch III, 52, Frederick, was traveling on North Glade Road at Harvey's Peninsula when he lost control of his car in icy road conditions, skidded off the shoulder, struck the embankment, and flipped over.

Southern Rescue Squad and Deer Park VFD responded to the scene. Lynch was treated at the hospital and released. Two passengers in his car did not require treatment.

Grant To Fund Water Quality Projects In Two Municipalities

Two Garrett County municipalities will benefit from funding granted recently by the state Board of Public Works to ensure water quality and to control flooding.

The office of Gov. Parris Glendening announced the funding of town water projects for Grantsville and Friendsville.

The project in Friendsville will include the design and construction of a concrete flood barrier to protect the town's water and wastewater treatment plant. The barrier will be installed to contain flood waters that can hamper functioning of the plant's operation, a spokesperson for the governor explained.

The Friendsville Elementary School will also benefit from this barrier in high water situations. "On behalf of the town council, we are elated that once again the state has helped the town resolve problems with its water and wastewater facilities," said Friendsville Mayor Spencer R. Scholsnagle.

The public works grant of $3,906 will be added to $23,437 from the Federal Emergency Management Agency and $3,906 from the county. The total cost of the Friendsville project will be $31,249.

The spokesperson for the governor's office also announced that residents of Grantsville will benefit from a grant of $185,250 from the state Board of Public Works.

Funds will be used to construct two stormwater management retention ponds to help correct water quality problems that can arise during periods of heavy rainfall.

"The project is important because the existing network of storm drains is unable to prevent considerable erosion during periods of intense rainfall. The project will also benefit the Casselman River by reducing the flow of sediments and pollutants," the governor explained.

Project construction is slated to begin in Grantsville in April and will be located adjacent to the Grantsville Senior Center and in the Meadowview area.

Mayor Frederick A. Holliday said he is pleased about the funding. He referred to stormwater flooding as "a consistent problem" for Grantsville. "The proposed retention pond also will improve water quality even during minor rainfall and will benefit the Casselman River as well as the town," he stated.

In addition to the funding by the state, the town contributed $61,750 to meet the total project cost of $247,000.

Four Charged With Assault On Fellow Inmate

Four subjects who were being held at the Garrett County jail face felony assault charges stemming from an alleged assault on another inmate that occurred Tuesday afternoon.

According to the Garrett County Sheriff's Office, Shaen Michael Blackwell, 21, David Allen Smith, 31, and Jeffrey Alan Koton, 19, all of Oakland, and Arlington Craig Shelton, 31, Loch Lynn, were each charged with one count of first-degree assault on an inmate and one count of second-degree assault on an inmate.

Initial reports said that the assault stemmed from ongoing disputes between the victim, Umar Alhassan, 27, Laurel, and the others regarding the noise level of the television, disputes over bed space among the men, and other similar matters.

The alleged incident was reported to correctional officers by Alhassan immediately after it occurred. Alhassan, who was being held on bad check writing charges, claimed that while he was showering in the jail's bathroom the four suspects entered and began beating him. Sheriff's Office personnel later stated that Blackwell used a bag of oranges to club the victim, while the others held him and hit him with their fists.

The alleged assault lasted less than two minutes, and when it ended Alhassan reportedly ran to the jail's main desk for assistance.

Alhassan reported pains in his head and arm upon notifying correctional officers of the assault, and was transported by sheriff's deputies to Garrett County Memorial Hospital where he

Staff Leaders Give Reports To Commissioners

The regular monthly meeting of all Garrett County staff leaders was held at the county commissioners' office Tuesday. Only six of the approximately 15 county departments were represented at the meeting, although no explanation was given for the absence of the remaining nine.

The commissioners did hear reports from the education board, the roads department, general services, the planning office, solid waste and recycling, and the chamber of commerce.

Education Board

Dr. Wendell Teets, superintendent of Garrett County schools, reported that the new Yough Glades Elementary School will open on Feb. 10.

"And the students will enter an excellent facility," Teets said of the new school. "We're very excited about it."

The superintendent also noted that Governor Parris Glendening's visit to Broad Ford Elementary School on Jan. 16 was a success.

"The governor said that Garrett County has done more to promote reading than anywhere else," Teets said, referring to the participation of several local businesses in Glendening's "Be a Rising Star" reading initiative. The businesses had placed phrases on their marquees, encouraging children to read, and the governor noticed them as he traveled through the county.

"This was not only beneficial for the governor to see," Teets said, "but, more importantly, it sent a good message to our students."

Teets reported that Accident Elementary School was completely wired for computers recently and the task was completed by numerous

Smart Growth Meeting Reflects Evolving Nature Of Legislation

"Of all the issues Governor Glendening is involved with, second only to education is Smart Growth; nothing else, in his view, will have a greater impact on the future of Maryland." — John Frece, special assistant to the governor for Smart Growth.

So opened the informational meeting held at Garrett Community College Tuesday night regarding the Governor's Smart Growth program, in short a legislative response to increasing population growth and the accompanying increasing use of land to provide housing, workplaces, shopping facilities, and infrastructure as these growing uses compete to take up an unchanging amount of space.

Simultaneously, Smart Growth, which passed the Maryland legislature last year, was described in the meeting as a means to provide a mechanism to harness economic growth patterns and direct them in what the state, in conjunction with local communities, determines as the most efficient balance between economic development and land conservation.

Smart Growth is "not a no-growth, not a slow-growth program, but an incentive program to guide economic development in the state in a controlled and sustainable way," Frece told the gathering of 50 area residents, some of whom expressed reservations about possible state intervention in the affairs of local communities, presumably in the form of zoning-type regulations.

"In no way can the Smart Growth program prohibit growth," Frece said on more than one occasion. "It can only hold back state funding from projects that do not meet outlined Smart Growth criteria. Development projects could still go on even if they don't meet the criteria," Frece said, "although they would have to find other funding sources to make up for the lack of state funding, and there are exceptions to the criteria that would allow state funds to be used for areas not designated as priority funding areas."

As he outlined the background and provisions of the legislation, Frece and several other state planning officials present, two of

Routine Water, Sewer Plan Update Culminates In Heated Discussion

Approximately 25 people came to the Garrett County Commissioners' office Tuesday to hear Sanitary District administrator Wendell Beitzel's update on the county's water and sewer master plan. While Beitzel touched upon 19 different projects either completed or underway, he was mainly called upon to defend one — the Funny Farm development in Friendsville.

In his opening statements, Beitzel explained that the master plan is a "working document" of water and sewer projects in the county. While items are added and adjusted on a regular basis, these items must be formally included in the plan every three years. This meeting was for that purpose — for the commissioners to approve the additions, clarifications, and changes in the master document. A complete rewrite is then done, Beitzel said, so that the plan is up to date.

The commissioners are not to vote on the plan until 10 days have passed since the public hearing. The plan is available for public perusal at Beitzel's as well as at the commissioners' offices.

Beitzel began to explain the 19 projects in the county, which have been either completed or are in progress in towns such as Kitzmiller, Gorman, Deer Park, McHenry, Jennings, and other areas. He detailed some problems and many successes in those areas.

The topic of interest to the audience, however, was the construction of a sewer line to Terry Spear's Funny Farm Citgo, which is currently under construction near the I-68 exit at Friendsville. Beitzel went over his office's actions in this project step by step.

"The Sanitary District took over Friendsville's water and sewer system in June 1996 at the request of the town council," he began. "We have been working since then to make improvements. There is an infiltration problem in the town and the system is not fully up to compliance. The town has been working hard on this problem.

"In June 1995, Terry Spear asked for a sewer connection to the Funny Farm location. The town was favorable to his request. Then the Sanitary District took over the system in July 1996. A formal application came from Mr.

Grantsville Mayor Fred Holliday Enters GC Commissioner Race

Fred Holliday, mayor of Grantsville, recently announced his candidacy for Garrett County Commissioner representing Commission District Two. His announcement was made to the Greater Grantsville Business Association at the monthly meeting Tuesday morning. "I think I am the first candidate to announce," he said.

A lifelong resident of Grantsville, Holliday graduated from Northern High School in 1961 and served three years in the United States Army.

Along with his wife Joan, Holliday owns and operates H&H Hardware in Grantsville.

For 15 years he has served as mayor to the town of Grantsville. Under his administration a state-of-the-art, innovative waste water treatment and collection system were installed; a new water source, main transmission line, and water filtration treatment facility which emphasizes high iron removal were installed; and a storm water management project incorporating a nature walk with bird sanctuary was designed.

Holliday was instrumental in hiring a full-time, professional engineer to help design many of the projects completed by the town. He also worked with the State Highway Administration to update Route 40 through the town. This upgrade included the installation of many new sidewalks.

A fitness walking track was installed at the Grantsville Park during his administration. He worked with the Grantsville Lioness Club to install a new playground, partially constructed of recycled milk cartons, and was awarded Honorary Lioness member status by the club for his help.

Oakland Police Arrest Minors In Vandalism Case

Oakland police have charged two male juveniles with vandalism and destruction of property in connection with damage to grave markers in the Oakland Cemetery.

The charges were filed last week following an investigation of damage to approximately 36 monuments, which occurred in the early morning hours on Nov. 28 or 29.

Chief John K. Sines of the Oakland police said the damages have been estimated to be worth several thousand dollars. Sines also stated that anyone who wishes to submit an estimate of damages to a family grave site may do so by contacting him at the police department at 15 S. Third Street, Oakland, or by calling 301-334-2100.

A court date is set for Feb. 23.

Car Strikes Pole

In a two-vehicle accident Monday morning in Oakland, one vehicle came to rest against a stop light support pole on Route 135.

The Oakland police reported that around noon Randall Storey, 42, Oakland, was driving southbound on Ninth Street toward the intersection with Route 135 to continue south on Route 219.

At the same time Inez M. Tyler, 63, Kitzmiller, was eastbound on Route 135. According to the report, a witness saw Tyler drive through the red light and strike Storey's vehicle in the left door, causing the car to spin around.

Both vehicles came to rest in the eastbound lane, with Storey's car against a traffic light support pole.

Tyler was transported to Garrett Memorial Hospital, where she was treated and released. She was charged in the incident.

Storey and his passenger, a 4-year-old child, were not injured.

GOBA's Annual Meeting Slated

The annual meeting of the Greater Oakland Business Association (GOBA) will be held Feb. 10 at 7 p.m. in the Oakland City Hall. All individuals interested in the business climate in Oakland are invited to attend.

One topic slated for discussion is the Main Street Maryland project. Retailers will be sharing the benefits they received from a visit with consultant Robert Gibbs.

Officers for GOBA will be elected as well. Currently, the nominees are as follows: Mikal McCartney, president; Amy Rudy, vice president; Scott Hollingsworth, secretary. Other nominations will be taken at the door, or persons may contact Connie Margison at 301-334-5747 to add names to the ballot.

GGBA Begins Second Year Of Promoting Area

The Greater Grantsville Business Association Inc. launched into its second full year with its January meeting this week. Organized to promote the area and stimulate growth of Grantsville businesses, GGBA was initiated through the efforts of local businesswoman Candy Fetterly.

Noting the need for an organization through which the local business owners could network, Fetterly facilitated the initial meeting of several business people. "There were six or seven of us who got together. We wanted to find out if others were interested in forming such a group," she said.

They did find interest in the community and the wheels were set in motion. "We had our mission statement. It included the goal of cultivating the historical importance of community and keeping the flavor of the past," Fetterly explained.

The business association was formed as a result of this first meeting to "test the waters." Originally 12 members formed the fledgling group.

Charter members of GGBA the first year were Walnut Ridge Bed and Breakfast, Dream Weavers, The Spinning Wheel, Bietschehof Farm, Casselwood Furniture, MuttWorks, Good Scents Parfumerie, The Republican, Four Seasons Stitchery, The Flower Loft, Grantsville Market, and Spruce Forest Artisan Village. The group has since grown to include more than 50 businesses, Fetterly stated.

During the its first full year of operation, GGBA undertook a variety of efforts to spotlight Grantsville. A Grantsville brochure was created that features member businesses and local attractions. A display was set up at the Yough Overlook to generate sales in local businesses, and a hospitality packet containing information, advertising, and discounts was distributed.

Two seasonal events coordinated by GGBA, Cornucopia Days and Old-Fashioned Grantsville Christmas, offered low-cost advertising to participants. The group has represented the area in regional planning efforts and offered educational programs at the monthly meetings.

A Grantsville homepage was also created which provides online storage space for members.

Fetterly, who is the current president of GGBA, said the group is seeking new members. "On our homepage we want to put some information about membership and its benefits," Fetterly said. "It's a great value for the cost," she added. "We can accomplish more when we are working together," she stated.

GGBA meets at 8:30 a.m. for breakfast at Penn Alps Restaurant on the last Monday of each month. These meetings are open to the public.

The fee for each business membership is $25. Anyone wishing more information may contact Candy Fetterly at 301-895-4248 or Debbie Klotz at 301-895-5983 or 301-895-5927.

Park Planning Experts Speak In Friendsville

A town forum was held recently in Friendsville to address ideas for upgrades in the town park. Experts in land conservation and park planning were present to speak with the three dozen or so town residents who attended to give input on the project.

Clyde Braun Jr., a resource manager, and Ronald Wazenegger, a landscape architect, both with the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, Deidra Ritchie, Department of Natural Resources Program Open Space, and Ursula Lemanski, a river, trail, and conservation specialist with the National Park Service participated in the feasibility discussions.

The meeting began with suggestions from the floor for improvements for the town park. The merits and plausibility of the suggestions were then explored through discussions between the residents and the park professionals.

Among the suggestions brought to the floor were more ball fields, including softball, soccer, and volleyball. A walking path in the park, which has been requested previously by residents, was again introduced. Expansion of the parking lot and an increase in rest room facilities were also addressed.

Most concepts brought to the floor met with the approval of the experts on grounds of feasibility and acceptable use of park land.

During a brainstorming session with the experts, some possible starting points for the project were selected, Sara Sines, town clerk, said. "We need to develop a master plan before we really get started," she explained.

Such a plan would define maximum use of space in accordance with principles of park resource management, Sines noted. However, the expense involved in developing a master plan is not covered by funding through Program Open Space, she explained.

Sines identified several upgrades that can be accomplished without the master plan. "There are a number of things we will be able to do. We can install the walking trail, move the horseshoe pit, re-sand the volleyball area, and put rest room fixutures in an existing building," she said.

Among suggestions from the park development specialists was the idea of raising funds. "They said it would be a good idea to have something there that would generate some income for the park," Sines explained, adding that nothing specific has been considered yet.

The addition of tennis courts to the park is on the list for future installation. "We talked about having a tree donation program in the park through which trees could be planted in memory of someone," she said.

The town will re-apply in the spring for future funding from Program Open Space.

Three Convicted Of CDS Crimes Are Sentenced

Three individuals faced Garrett County Circuit Court Judge James Sherbin last week in cases involving controlled dangerous substances. Two received jail time, while the third was charged a fine.

Robert W., 29, and Sonya D. Sweitzer, 25, Oakland, were indicted by the Grand Jury last year and faced drug charges. Mrs. Sweitzer pleaded guilty to marijuana possession and Sherbin sentenced her to one year in jail. The judge then suspended all but 60 days and ordered her to be on one year of supervised probation following her release.

Robert Sweitzer pleaded guilty to possession with intent to distribute marijuana, and the judge sentenced him to five years in the Maryland Department of Corrections. He then suspended all but 18 months of the term. The defendant will serve the time in the local jail, according to the court report. He was also fined $1,000 plus court costs.

A search and seizure warrant was executed at the Sweitzers' home in February 1997, and suspected drugs and drug paraphernalia were reportedly found. This was the second search done at the residence by the Garrett County Narcotics Task Force, with the first occurring in May 1996, according to the court report.

Joseph A. Silberstein, 36, College Park, entered a guilty plea to possession of drug paraphernalia. Sherbin fined him $500 and court costs.

Silberstein was arrested in August 1997. He was a passenger in a car in which the driver was charged with driving while intoxicated. The defendant was found to be in possession of drug paraphernalia, according to the report.

Food For Thought

What's new: burgers made from ground ostrich. The meat tastes like beef, they say, but it's lighter in fat.

Rich egg bread, panettone or raisin challah, makes sensational french toast—especially when the egg-and-milk soak boasts a healthy splash of rum.

Lacy cheese wafers—called frico in Italy—are just melted cheese, baked lightly and not browned. Spread out level tablespoons of coarsely grated parmesan on a nonstick liner, bake 6 to 7 minutes; cool on liner for 2 minutes, then drain on paper towels.

Here's how to give couscous the flavor it needs: cook chopped red onion in olive oil and add a splash of balsamic vinegar. Then add couscous and boiling water and let stand five minutes. Fluff.

What's even better than classic Caesar salad? Adding a tapenade of black olives, raisins, anchovies, shallots, fennel seeds, lemon juice and olive oil—and add meaty strips of prosciutto.

New Law Should Speed Drug/Device Approvals

This past November a bill was passed into law that should speed up the approvals of some drugs and medical devices. The new law, which is called the FDA Reform Act, represents years of effort by legislators, various government workers and consumer advocacy groups. The new law resulted from numerous compromises by both political parties. Some provisions of the FDA Reform Act include:

- Emergency access: In life threatening situations, it will be easier for patients to get medicines which have not been FDA approved.
- Extended use of user fees: Companies that request drug approvals will continue to pay fees to help speed up safety and effectiveness reviews. It is felt that such fees have cut approval times in half.
- Off-label use: If physicians prescribe medicines for new uses that are not FDA approved (off label use), companies can now distribute information about such uses. However, companies must also apply for regular FDA approval.
- Fast track: The "fast-track" approval allowed for some cancer and AIDS drugs will be extended to other serious and/or life-threatening illnesses.
- Device review: Outside reviewers will be used for low-risk medical devices. Complex devices will still require FDA review.

Morgantown Trio Jailed Following Wisp Drug Bust

Three Morgantown men face charges of marijuana possession and possession of drug paraphernalia after a hotel security officer spotted drugs in their room at the Wisp Resort Hotel and alerted the Garrett County Sheriff's Office late last Wednesday night.

Robert Alan Davis, 21, Scott Matthew Adams, 20, and Nicholas Eugene Panico, 19, were staying on the sixth floor of the hotel when the security officer was reportedly called to their room in regards to a complaint of a broken teievision remote control. While in the room the security officer noticed what appeared to be a plastic sandwich baggie containing what he suspected to be marijuana lying on the bed in plain view. He seized the bag and called sheriff's deputies for assistance.

Upon their arrival, the deputies and the security officer conducted a room search that uncovered two additional bags of marijuana, a small quantity of loose marijuana, one intact handrolled marijuana cigarette, five partially burned marijuana cigarettes, a number of rolling papers, and two pipes commonly associated with marijuana use. The items were hidden in various articles of clothing, backpacks, and other locations throughout the room.

Following their arrest and subsequent appearance before the district court commissioner, all three suspects were released on their own recognizance.

In other sheriff's news, several domestic incidents resulted in the arrests of three men for assault and related charges.

Christopher Lee Guthrie, 19, Oakland, allegedly assaulted his father and broke the front door of his home in the 1200 block of Hutton Road during an incident in which he was reportedly intoxicated. His family had called the sheriff's office shortly after 10 p.m. on Sunday night when Guthrie allegedly came home drunk and belligerent.

When his father, Junior Lee Guthrie, refused to grant him admission to the home, Guthrie allegedly shoved him in the doorway in an attempt to gain entry, then punched the door with his fist, causing nearly $300 worth of damage. As deputies apprehended Guthrie at the residence, they noted a strong smell of alcohol on his presence. They also reported that he grew belligerent and used a great deal of loud profanity when being place under arrest, and continued such behavior even as being placed in the cruiser for transport to the jail. The report noted that Guthrie threatened both the deputy and his canine partner, at one point even challenging the dog to a fight.

Guthrie faces charges of second-degree assault and disorderly conduct, and a misdemeanor charge of malicious destruction of property. He was released from jail after posting a $1,000 bond.

A Grantsville man was arrested after a reported domestic assault in the 100 block of Meadowview Drive in Grantsville on Saturday.

Glenn Cuppett, 31, faces charges of second-degree assault and false imprisonment after his wife, Linda Cuppett, reported that her husband, while intoxicated, grabbed her by the arms and refused to allow her to leave their apartment. She eventually freed herself from her husband's grasp and went to a neighbor's apartment to call for assistance. Glenn Cuppett is still being held in jail on a $10,000 bond.

Franis Wade Hinebaugh, 49, Oakland, was served with a warrant this week charging him with assault in the second degree stemming from an incident that occurred earlier this month.

The alleged victim, Cathy Skipper, reported that Hinebaugh had pushed her from behind in their driveway in the 400 block of Coolidge Avenue, causing her to slide across the pavement. She told deputies that the assault occurred as she was trying to get into her car and leave the residence because of a domestic argument they were having. After the warrant was served, Hinebaugh was released on his own recognizance.

A case of alleged mistaken identity of a house garnered Randall Eugene King, 45, Oakland, a charge of fourth-degree burglary. The complainant told deputies that as he was sleeping on the couch in his home in the 2200 block of Bethlehem Road at 2:30 a.m. Saturday morning, a man whom he didn't know came in through the front door and said he was looking for "Fred." When the complainant informed his uninvited caller that he must have the wrong house, the subject reportedly began arguing with him before eventually leaving the premises.

Deputies checking the area subsequently found King walking along Bethlehem road, and questioned him as to his destination. When King replied that he "was on the way home," they noted that he was walking in the opposite direction from his actual residence in the 2700 block of Bethlehem Road. The report also states that King appeared intoxicated. He was arrested and subsequently released on his own recognizance.

A citizen's band radio was stolen from a pickup truck parked outside the Long Branch Saloon on Maryland Highway Saturday night. The Cobra brand CB is valued at $360.

A Dodge Shadow parked at the Oak Park Church on Oakland Drive, across from the Southern School complex, sustained $500 worth of damage sometime during the daylight hours on Monday. It appeared that a quarter panel had been violently kicked twice.

Finally, at least five mailboxes on Blueberry Lane in Oakland were damaged Friday night by suspect(s) wielding either a pipe or a baseball bat. Damage to the mailboxes is estimated at $30 each.

If a citizen has any information on these or other incidents of criminal activity, they are encouraged to call the Crime Solvers number at 301-334-1975. Anonymity is guaranteed.

later a neighbor noticed smoke and flames coming from the house once again and called 911 at 5:14 p.m. This time the structure was fully involved in flames upon arrival of the fire units.

Board Of Ed. To Meet With Md. Legislators

Members of the Garrett County Board of Education will meet with Sen. John Hafer and Del. George Edwards at the Maryland School Board Association Legislative Day in Annapolis.

The meeting is scheduled for Thursday, Feb. 5. According to information from Dr. Wendell Teets, superintendent of schools, the purpose of the the meeting is to discuss matters concerning operation of public schools.

The public is invited to attend this meeting.

Groves Honored For Service On Sanitary Comm.

E. Lawrence Groves, Mtn. Lake Park, was recently recognized by the Garrett County Commissioners for three decades of service with the Garrett County Sanitary Commission. Groves, who was first appointed to the Sanitary Commission in 1963, initially served a three-year term, then was reappointed as secretary-treasurer in 1970 to a term that continued until his retirement last January.

Groves was presented with the seal of Garrett County, along with a lapel pin and honorary lifetime membership award from the county commissioners. Dorothy R. Leuba, chairperson of the sanitary commission, also presented Groves with a plaque of appreciation for the dedication and leadership exhibited during his years of service. Leuba added that Groves's "participation on the Commission will be greatly missed. For the past 30 years he has been an instrumental part of the Commission's strive to construct and operate public water and sewer systems in order to enhance the quality of life for residents of Garrett County."

Looking back on his service, Groves recalled, "I first became involved in sanitary issues when I was mayor of Loch Lynn Heights in the 1950s, and I always enjoyed working on sanitary and water projects. There are still some major projects in progress, around Deep Creek Lake and Chestnut Ridge," he continued, "and Deer Park's line is completed and will be tied in soon.

"We didn't do too bad for a county that didn't have much in the way of our own money," Groves commented, "and we have to thank the federal and state governments for helping us with funding to develop our water and sewer infrastructure," he said.

"We've had a lot of changes, but we've taken care of a lot of problems."

Just the Facts...

There has probably never been a media frenzy in this nation of greater magnitude than the current one being generated by the controversy surrounding President Clinton. It is quickly surpassing even the Watergate case. Investigative reporters, television news anchors, and particularly the owners of the various forms of media are all literally frothing at the mouth and working at near light speed to uncover the truth. Or are they?

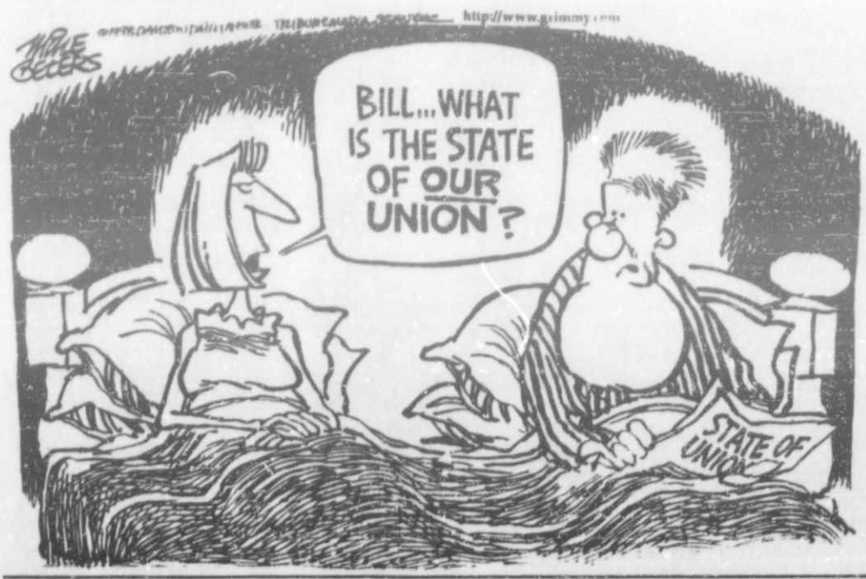
Is their primary goal to uncover the truth and report it to the American public? Or is their primary goal to draw more viewers/listeners and thus get a leg up on their competitors? We fear it may be the latter.

Already, with the controversy only about two weeks old, many citizens are saying that they are sick and tired of hearing about the president and his alleged behavior, and that there are far more important things going on in the nation and in the world that deserve the media's attention.

Being in the media business, we support and strongly believe in the search for the truth, and the subsequent reporting of it to the public. The power of the media is immense, and when used appropriately it can bring about positive change by shedding light on situations that the general public would never know about otherwise. However, we too are getting tired of having to listen to so much information that is not fact, but conjecture, rumors, possibilities, rehashing, and "what-ifs." Competition, not only among the networks, but also among the various reporters within the same news organization, is superseding basic, responsible reporting.

Of course, as long as there are hundreds of thousands of listeners who continue to tune in, there will be no incentive for the media to handle this issue any other way. More listeners means higher ratings, and higher ratings means greater profits. So we discover once again that the pursuit of money lies at the root of yet another form of human behavior.

"Just the facts, ma'am." How about it, TV media?



Letters to the Editor

To the Editor:

On behalf of the Garrett County Community Action Board of Directors and staff, I want to thank you for the support given to our First Time Home Buyers Program. The value of home ownership to a family is highlighted every time we interact directly with a buyer.

The First Time Home Buyers Program is made possible because of partnerships. American Trust Bank and the Local Initiatives Support Corporation are key partners. The Rural Housing Services (RHS) is another important player. Representatives from the RHS national, state, and local level helped make the program possible. Tim Taylor from the Garrett County RHS office provides tremendous support and leadership to the effort. Without these partners the program would not exist.

Sincereiy,
Duane Yoder

To the Editor:

I do not have anything against Mr. Wayne R. Johnson. He was asked to serve the rest of the term of Mr. Roger Glotfelty. After all, this is a Republican county and to me it looks like Gov. Parris Glendening passed over the most likely person, Mrs. Brenda Butscher. She ran for this office and spent time and money to be re-elected. It seems to me she should have been in line for the job.

How much did the people of Garrett County have to say in this appointment? Mr. Johnson has had the best of Garrett County, retired teacher, retired from the bank, you name it.

Fair is fair, and I think Mrs. Butscher did not get a fair deal in this appointment. Maybe you and yours do not agree, but it's all in being fair and what is right, O.K.?

Mrs. Butscher, I hope, will run for commissioner again, and show people really what power is in politics, and how rough and dirty it can get.

To sum this all up, I personally don't have anything against Mr. Johnson and I think he has earned everything he has, and I admire him for this and always will.

Just say you put yourself in Ms. Butscher's position; how would you feel? I think she got a bad deal. Of course everyone is entitled to his opinion; this is mine.

Thanks,

To the Editor:

To the human being, a relatively small bit of woodland, an unspoiled mountainside, or a stroll along a remote country road may present a picture that there is plenty of natural, undeveloped land left. From oneself, everything from here looks so big. You and I from there look so small.

There is not the vast amount of wildland left that there might appear to be. What we think is a lot is in reality not much at all. Many other species share this earth with us. Some need tremendous areas of wildland in order to survive. If we keep taking the land for highways, subdivisions, and various other forms of development beyond modest need, where will these other creatures go? How will they live?

Eventually one must ask: without other species, how will we live? We are all interdependent. The destruction we bring on the earth and other creatures, we ultimately bring on ourselves. The goodness we bring on the earth and other creatures, we also bring on ourselves. There is no way to avoid it.

Each generation says to themselves, "We will take just a little bit more for our own purposes. It will be OK. There is so much." That is a delusion!

Those of us in Garrett County who recognize the value of and need for lots of wildlands and rural communities have the opportunity now to determine, restrict, and limit the development here. Act! Hopefully the public officials will open their minds to the many thoughtful and creative ideas offered by others.

Truly,
Ken Bauer

To the Editor:

President Clinton on September, 11, 1997, by executive order, signed his American Heritage River Initiative scheme. He plans to designate 10 rivers annually, not just 10, as AHRs and name a "River Navigator" to each river as an overseer. The first 10 are to be named in early 1998. The purpose is economic and ecologically sustainable approaches to river restoration and protection.

AHR is a political scheme by Clinton to get Democratic votes in 1998. I will name four of the first 10 rivers to be designated: Potomac, Mississippi north of St. Louis, Willamette in Oregon, and the Yellowstone.

The U.S. Congress, not the President, regulates navigable waters and local governments control land-use planning. Government claims it will respect private property with no new regulations. Black Kettle, Red Cloud, and Sitting Bull heard that same line years ago. Much remains to be decided and the language is vague.

Idaho was the first state to request that none of its rivers become a part of the American Heritage River Initiative.

To get federal money that will start flowing, local government will be willing to set new restrictions on

THE POPE AND CASTRO

What a picture it made to see the bearded Castro in business suit looking genuinely solicitous when welcoming the Holy Father! It was such a human scene and yet was emblematic of the political contradiction which this visit has seemed for so many.

This is the same John Paul II who saved the liberty of Poland and who—it can and has been argued—did more than any other single person to bring down the totalitarian Soviet state. Churchill recorded that Stalin asked of John Paul's World War II predecessor, "How many divisions has he got?"

Commanding no more soldiers than his Swiss guards dressed as if going to a costume party, John Paul II defeated Stalin's successors and Stalin's system. So what was he doing in Cuba, that former puppet state of the Soviet regime?

To answer that question we need to travel back to Christmas Day, not of a few weeks ago, but to the year 800 A.D. The circumstances of the story we need to recall were very different from those of the pope and Castro today, but something of the genius of the papacy remains the same.

In those days Charles the Great—Charlemagne—was the most important political figure in western Europe. Pope Leo III was so insecure in the city of Rome itself that his physical safety was endangered. His predecessor had engaged in conflict with Charlemagne, a policy which Leo did not think he could afford to pursue. Historians have generally agreed with his assessment.

Leo extended the hand of peace to Charlemagne, who, being a sensible man, took it. As a result, when Leo got into deep trouble he was able to ask Charlemagne for help, and got it. The problem for Leo was how he could prevent the reduction of big own status to a kind of very senior royal chaplain.

I won't go into the details of the political situation in those days, except to say that there was a potential to unite eastern and western Europe in a way that had not existed for over 300 years and would not exist again until the rise of Napoleon a thousand years later.

This potential was expressed through the memory of the Roman Empire. There must have been discussions about making Charlemagne the "Roman Emperor," but the issue must also have remained unresolved. Again historians generally agree that Charlemagne probably wanted to declare himself "Roman Emperor' and set the crown upon his own head.

Against this background, Pope Leo III performed one of the great political acts of human history. On Christmas Day, as Charlemagne had been kneeling in prayer and was just getting up, Leo set the crown upon Charlemagne's head, and proclaimed him Holy Roman Emperor. The shout went up among the people, acclaiming their new emperor. What mattered was that it was the pope who made the emperor.

The point is this: when Castro had hardly a friend in the world, his enemy, the Pope, befriended him. I am sure Castro wishes there had been somebody else to do this work of befriending, but there was not. As loathe as he must have been to receive help from the pope, he was in no position to refuse it.

Having accepted that help, he is not likely ever to forget it. It may be that he will not be able to forget it even if he wishes to do so. There is always, too, the possibility of Castro's conversion, which—guessing as one pastor about the work of another—I think must be very near the pope's heart.

The pope commands no divisions of infantry or armor, but he is much more to be reckoned with than Stalin realized. There are many facets to the political genius of the papacy, one of which is the genius of generosity. The generous heart is a weapon which this world finds difficult to combat.

Thank You, Western Maryland

by Parris N. Glendening

A governor has no greater joy than to travel the state meeting citizens face to face in their neighborhoods. Last weekend's (Jan. 16-17) visit to Western Maryland was no exception. Through the cold, hard drizzle and dense fog, I saw rays of sunshine in the faces of the people, who greeted me with hospitality and graciousness at every corner and along every sidewalk.

While driving to Broad Ford Elementary School in Oakland on Friday, I passed many businesses, including Long and Foster Realtors in McHenry and Naylor's Hardware Store in Oakland, who proudly displayed "Read 10 Books, Become a Rising Star" on their billboards and marquees. I commend their overwhelming dedication to the education of our students, which will help all of our children to succeed and reach their full potential.

At the school, second-grader Stephanie Lee dazzled me with her exceptional reading skills. As the children read, I saw pride in the eyes of their parents, teachers, administrators, and community leaders. Thank you, students, for so eagerly reading your 10 books and becoming "Rising Stars."

The Messenger family led me on a tour of the production lines at Wood Products Inc., where I met Robert Keener. It was his first week on the job. He had moved his family to Oakland to start a new career at Wood Products. Robert, like the 17 other new employees at Wood Products, is why we continue to offer businesses low-interest loans and grants, to expand or locate in Maryland. These are the faces behind the decision-making of state government.

I ended the evening by swearing in Garrett County Commissioner Wayne Johnson, who continues his notable career in community service. On such an historical occasion for Wayne and his family, we remembered another impressive career, that of the late Roger Glotfelty, who passed on last year. My thoughts and prayers go out to his family and the community he served in Garrett County. I am confident that Wayne will continue this tradition and further support the future of the county and education of our children.

On Saturday, I joined my wife, Frances Anne, in her hometown of Cumberland to read to a standing-room-only crowd at South Cumberland Library. The children eagerly volunteered to take turns reading, demonstrating the skills achieved in their classrooms.

At CSX's maintenance facility, I commended the employees for their outstanding safety record in 1997. I talked with engineers and maintenance employees about their job duties and daily challenges. The old jobs associated with the railroad are now replaced with high-tech machinery, demanding a highly trained workforce. CSX demonstrates why we need Advanced Technology Centers in communities across Maryland.

I climbed aboard CSX's state-of-the-art locomotive, "The Spirit of Cumberland," and as Speaker of the House Cas Taylor said during the visit, "The true spirit of Cumberland is in the hearts of her people." CSX continues its investment in the Cumberland facility not only because of its spotless safety record, but because of this spirit and pride in the community.

One of the most rewarding stops on my weekend visit was touring Westernport with Mayor Bob Lyons. In 1996 after the devastating floods, I visited this small town with Senators Barbara Mikulski and Paul Sarbanes. We witnessed the destroyed homes and felt the community's despair. What a phenomenal change I encountered during my visit this weekend. I spoke to citizens in a packed town hall, who explained the need for further assistance in order to make Westernport even better than before. I walked along the river as Mayor Lyons showed me how they are building a park in the flood plain where homes once stood. A young boy along the banks tried to point out his old back yard to me. The children were eager to tell me how they are helping to design the new park.

As we traveled along the roads and bridges, noting homes still vacant and in need of repair, I was amazed how this ravaged town had bounced back. A lot of work remains to be done, but I am confidant the community will continue to persevere.

Departing on Sunday, I flew over the mountains and looked down at Cumberland and the surrounding small towns, remembering fondly the people I had met there. I remembered the children reading with enthusiasm, the business people encouraging children to become rising stars, and the faces of the employees who value their jobs. With our economy stronger and our priorities firm, the work can continue to rebuild more flood-ravaged homes, rebuild our precious neighborhoods, attract well-paying, family-supporting jobs, and improve and modernize our classrooms. It reminded me what it really means to be governor and how great my job can be.

Thank you, Speaker Cas Taylor, for showing me "your town." Thank you Senator John Hafer and Delegates Betty Workman and George Edwards for joining me on the many tours and visits. Thank you, Western Maryland, for your hospitality and showing me your spirit.

Discussion

Spear in April 1997. We sent him a letter that included a list of conditions that he would have to comply by, and notices were sent to the town about the issue," he said.

Beitzel said persons could discuss the issue and give comments until May 12, 1997. Creole Calhoun, a resident and business owner in Friendsville, then voiced his concern about the sewer line and asked for a formal hearing. According to Beitzel, the Maryland Department of the Environment was consulted, and he received word that a formal hearing was not needed. Beitzel went on to say that both the town council and the town's planning commission had no objection to the project.

Beitzel went on to explain that the proper permits were then obtained and that the Sanitary District charged Spear $10,000, which would equal the cost of 10 hook-ups, the number the sewer line will be able to service. The Garrett County Planning Commission reviewed the project in January of this year and, Beitzel reported, proclaimed it consistent with the development plan of Garrett County.

Beitzel noted that the sewer line has not been taken over by the Sanitary District and that is has not been connected yet.

Calhoun then expressed his concerns to the commissioners, which mainly consist of a lack of public notice and input in the project. He maintained that more public meetings should have been held on the subject, and that one meeting slated by the MDE was unattended by Beitzel and John Nelson, two individuals he had hoped to speak with. Calhoun contends that the sewer line was placed outside a designated development area and that it is too close to the Andrew Friend Cemetery. He also expressed concern about gas tanks of the Citgo being too close to the Youghiogheny River.

"I'm really upset that the county has abdicated the decision-making to the Sanitary District in this case," Calhoun said. "What good does it do to have this meeting now? The line is already in place. Why are we holding a meeting about something that has already been done?"

Beitzel reiterated that his office had followed protocol and had been given the approval of the town and the town's planning entity.

Ray Anderson of the MDE spoke on behalf of his agency, defending its actions in the Funny Farm matter.

"We have answered every accusation of Mr. Calhoun," Anderson said. "Several opportunities for public input have been given. The government has reacted responsibly in this case."

Mary Walcek, a Friendsville resident, expressed her concern about the recently issued allocation tables, which report on the sewage output of the town. The tables apparently note that the output from the town is at 200-plus gallons, while the capacity of the plant is only 120. She urged the commissioners to disallow the 10 new hook-ups in light of the overworked system. Beitzel maintained the tables do not give an accurate picture of the work being done in Friendsville.

Beitzel said that when he became the head of the Sanitary District 17 years ago, there were very few working sewer systems in the county. He reported that $50 million has been spent over those years to provide water and sewer systems to several towns and areas.

"We are working in Friendsville, just like we have everywhere else. We have made great strides over the past several years," he said.

Calhoun informed the commissioners that he and others are planning a "massive legal battle" with the MDE over these issues.

istration, Grantsville constructed a new town hall, complete with garage bays for town trucks, a meeting room, and offices.

When asked why he entered the race for commissioner, Holliday stated that he would like to see a continued leadership from District 2 in the commissioners' office. He said his goal is "to unify the entire county and to remove imaginary divisions that have been found in the county for many years."

He also noted that he is "anxious to continue the positive direction and goals of education in Garrett County."

Maintaining what he sees as the high standard of roads maintenance is another of his stated goals. He would also focus on the upgrading of county roads wherever possible, he stated.

Holliday said he believes that continued growth in economic development is vital to the creation of jobs for young people, many of whom now leave Garrett County "to find good jobs."

A member of St. Paul's Methodist Church, he chairs the parsonage committee, serves on the administrative board of the church, and is a member of the Methodist Men.

An active member of many local groups, Holliday is past president of the Grantsville Lions Club and has been an active member for over 15 years. He also serves as chapter president of the Grantsville Area Jaycees, and is a member of the Greater Grantsville Business Association.

He is a member of the American Legion Post 214, the Casselman Valley Sportsman's Club, the Grantsville Cemetery Committee, and the Garrett County Economic Development Corporation.

Holliday was one of the founders of the annual Grantsville Days celebration, which is now in its 21st year.

He and his wife have been married for 29 years and have three children and four grandchildren.

His campaign slogan is "Vote for Fred Holliday — your trustworthy candidate for county commissioner." Gerald E. Beachy, Grantsville, will serve as campaign treasurer.

Governor Proposes $801 Million Capital Budget; County To Benefit

Maryland Governor Parris N. Glendening Tuesday submitted a comprehensive $801 million capital budget for Fiscal Year 1999 that focuses on schools, the environment, jobs, and public safety, according to a spokesperson, who said that the proposal includes $222 million for school construction and renovation (the highest amount in 25 years), $168 million for environmental projects, $120 million for higher education improvements, $78 million for economic and job creation initiatives, and more than $78 million for public safety.

District 1-A Delegate George Edwards reported that Garrett County will benefit in various areas from this proposal but noted that the budget will have to go through the usual legislative mechanisms before it is finalized.

Among the Garrett County projects included in the governor's proposal is the Jennings sewerage project, for which the Maryland Department of the Environment has requested $749,739 to construct a sewerage system for the town. Edwards said the latest information about the project indicated that Jennings would probably be connected to the existing Grantsville system.

The governor's proposal has also earmarked $637,000 for the construction of an amphitheater and nature center at Deep Creek Lake State Park. The state has already provided $1,611,000 for the projects in previous years, Edwards said. He noted that bids for the amphitheater project will go out in March and will be opened in June. Construction is scheduled to begin in August and be completed in 120 days, he said.

A total of $285,000 of the budget would be used for the planning phase of renovations at Meadow Mountain and Backbone Mountain youth homes, and $42,000 would go to Savage Mountain Youth Home for various improvements.

Garrett County Memorial Hospital is expected to receive a total of $361,000 for the construction of a new intensive care unit, according to reports, and $263,000 will be provided for county school projects, which include a $112,000 systemic renovation at Grantsville Elementary School and $151,000 for wiring projects at various schools.

Also in the plan, Garrett Community College would receive $200,000 for the first phase of campus accessibility improvements, and $59,000 would be provided for flood management in Garrett County.

Edwards noted that the list of projects expected to receive funding in the county may not be complete since he had just received the list late Wednesday and had not had a chance to read it comprehensively. He also stated that bills he has drafted pertaining to the county have been sent to the appropriate county officials to be proofread before he submits them.

During the announcement this week, Governor Glendening said, "This capital budget is targeted to our priorities that will make a real difference in the lives of Maryland's residents. Our budget also implements our nationally recognized Smart Growth and Neighborhood Conservation Initiative to reverse costly and inefficient sprawl development.

In that vein, school construction funding is focused on modernizing schools in existing communities rather than building new schools that support sprawl, he said.

"Our Smart Growth and Neighboorhood Conservation Initiative strengthens and revitalizes older towns and cities, and permanently preserves the most beautiful natural landscapes and most valuable environmental resources in Maryland," Glendening said. "Equally important, we are prudently managing taxpayers' money by saving millions of dollars that would be needed to build new sewer lines, roads, and other infrastructure to support sprawl development."

The governor also said a comprehensive program has been developed to improve water quality in the Chesapeake Bay and its tributaries and to fight the microorganism pfiesteria. The proposal would help farmers reduce run-off from farmlands and implement an aggressive program to upgrade the 14 remaining Eastern Shore sewage treatment plants within three years and improve all sewage treatment plants statewide within five years.

The capital budget also provides $120 million—part of a four-year, $634.5 million plan—to strengthen Maryland's colleges and universities and expand higher learning opportunities by funding modern research and science laboratories, state-of-the-art information technology, and new classrooms to accommodate the anticipated growing student enrollment.

In the area of economic development and job growth, the budget includes $24.5 million for the Sunny Day Fund, $30 million to help small and minority businesses and high tech companies, and $4.6 million of capital projects to support Maryland's tourism industry that employs 87,700 people and generates $391 million of state and local tax revenue.

"It is important to emphasize that this proposed capital budget is consistent with the recommendations made by the Capital Debt Affordability Committee, thus enabling the state to maintain its coveted Triple-A bond rating," said Glendening, who noted the bond rating has saved the state $131 million in interest payments since 1975.

Volunteers To Help Seniors File Tax Forms

For the eighth year help is available to senior citizens facing the task of reading, understanding, and filing Internal Revenue Service tax forms.

Volunteers line up each year to help reduce the anxiety that some older citizens can experience when filling out tax forms.

"These volunteers are all retired people who like to get involved and help others," said Bea Crosco, coordinator of the program in Garrett County.

The tax assistance program has been co-sponsored nationally by the IRS and The American Association of Retired People (AARP) for 30 years, Crosco explained. "But we've only had it in Garrett County for eight years," she said. She has coordinated it since its inception here.

Community Action's Area Agency on Aging is a joint sponsor in the county. The AAA provides program space and support services.

This year 11 counselors will be available to offer assistance. "Five or six of them have been with the program since it started here," Crosco noted.

The volunteers receive a week of training from IRS representatives. "They must also pass an exam given by the IRS," she said.

These people donate their time to help others. "They all enjoy it. They take a special interest in the people they help. They keep in touch during the year," she said, describing the volunteers.

Among those who sign up to help are retirees from a number of professions. Because training is provided, it is not necessary that one be an accountant to participate, Crosco emphasized.

Tax Aid is being offered at the Mary Browning Senior Center, 104 E. Center Street, Oakland, on Tuesdays and Thursdays, from noon to 4 p.m., and Wednesdays 5-7 p.m. through April 15.

The service is free to senior citizens and individuals with low to moderate income. Clients are asked to bring copies of last year's tax returns. No appointments are necessary. For more information, persons may contact AAA at 301-334-9431 or 1-888-877-8403 (toll free), ext. 142.

Garrett Comes Through In "Our Town Theatre" Donation Drive

by Mary Sincell McEwen

"The support from this wonderful county has been overwhelming," said Jane Avery, owner and artistic director of Our Town Theatre in Oakland, as she spoke of the recent fund drive for the new theatre. "We have raised enough money now to cover the costs of all the renovations here. This far exceeds our expectations - and we're thrilled."

About 18 months ago, Our Town Theatre was a faraway dream for Avery and several other local stage enthusiasts, who have sought a quality performance space for years. When the Garrett County Museum was moved to a new location, Avery took the leap and managed to purchase the historic brick building on Center Street. While she is the mortgage holder, Avery is now accompanied by a 13-member board of directors, all volunteer. The group, known now as OTTO (Our Town Theatre Organization) has worked diligently and quickly to raise enough funds to get the theatre renovated and to start planning performances. OTTO is a special project of the Garrett County Arts Council and is non-profit.

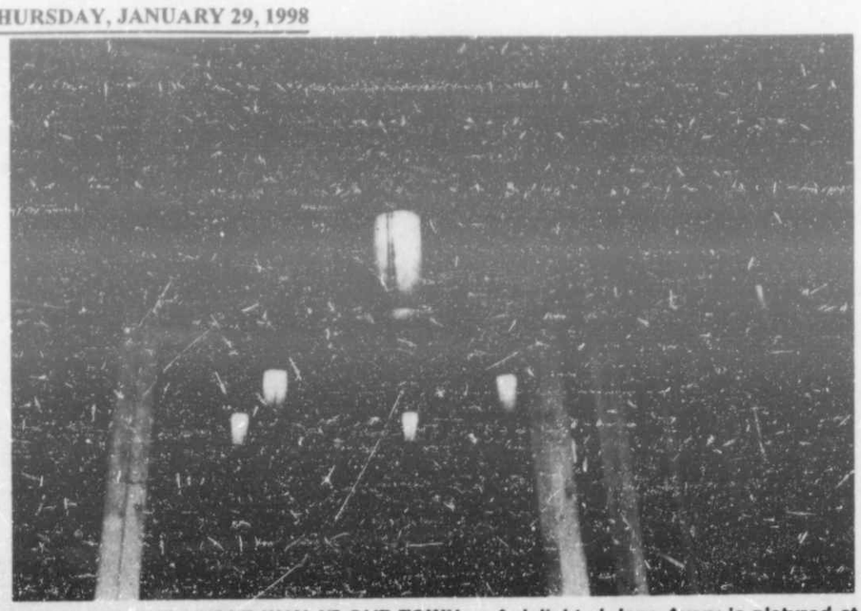
A huge boost to the theatre has been provided by Jane Lang and Paul Sprenger, the owners of Trader's Landing at Deep Creek Lake. The pair first challenged OTTO to raise $10,000, promising to match that amount. The $10,000 was raised, but Sprenger and Lang did not just match the funds. In addition to the match, they added $25,000, bringing their total donation to $35,000.

"Paul and Jane said they were so impressed by the community's response to the challenge grant that they wanted to give even more. We can never thank them enough for their generosity and kindness," Avery said.

This donation, combined with funds from numerous local individuals and businesses, will cover the renovation costs.

"We are going to be able to meet all the codes in just a few months," Avery said. "I honestly didn't think we'd be completely up to code for 10 years."

Presently, work has been initiated on various parts of the theatre, including the construction of a handicapped accessible bathroom and ramp, public bathrooms and a kitchen downstairs, and other repairs. OTTO has employed all local firms to complete the work, including RPM Construction and Heilig's Plumbing and Heating, among others. Architect Doug Devlin provided the plans for the renovation.



THE WORK IS UNDER WAY AT OUR TOWN — A delighted Jane Avery is pictured at right as she shows where the Our Town Theatre box office will be. Renovations have been initiated at the theatre and much more will be accomplished than what organizers first expected. A great deal of monetary help has been afforded to the theatre, with a large portion donated by Trader's Landing owners Jane Lang and Paul Sprenger, and the rest coming in from hundreds of contributors. Avery and the Our Town board of directors have been amazed at the response and are looking forward to having the building "up to code" in a matter of months. See story.

In addition to money, various items have been donated to the theatre, including a grand piano from Charity Janssen, a refrigerator from Judy Finkel, a collection of power tools from Marilyn Filemyr, and legal assistance from Len Eiswert. Oakland Mayor Asa McCain has kept OTTO informed of city requirements and ordinances, and he and the town council have contributed in-kind assistance.

Avery wants to begin performances in the spring, opening with a presentation of The Dining Room, a play centered in the dining room of a family where the drama of their lives is played out. She would also like to present Camping with Henry and Tom, a play about the nearby travels of Warren G. Harding, Henry Ford, and Thomas Edison.

"I hope to be working with a fairly young company this summer," Avery said. "The versatility of this space is wonderful. We can do performances in the round, on the proscenium, or on different levels. And because of the intimacy of the place and our easy chairs, our audiences will be able to hear, see, and be comfortable." (The theatre's seating consists of numerous armchairs of all sorts donated by people of all sorts.)

Avery said this is all a dream come true.

"I'm just so impressed by this community and I'm so lucky to live here. The support for the theatre has been amazing, but so has the support of other charities, like the Rotary Christmas Project and Save Oakland Station and Warm the Children. The giving just doesn't stop around here," she said. Avery added that several town councils have sent monetary support, which has been greatly appreciated.

"I am often surprised at how quickly this is coming together. Ben Sincell and I used to talk about how we would probably have to enter a Garrett County theatre in our wheelchairs because we'd be about 80 years old. I'm so glad I'm not 80 yet," she laughed. "I feel blessed. Truly blessed."

The births of six infants this week at Garrett County Memorial Hospital were announced this morning by a hospital spokesperson.

A son was born January 23 to Steven E. and Valerie A. Gnegy Dilley.

Twin daughters were born January 23 to Nora Mae Baker.

A daughter was born January 24 to Paul C. Sr. and Debbie S. Parsons Eichorn.

A daughter was born January 24 to Joshua A. and Sherry L. Crowe Frick.

A son was born January 27 to Keith and Brenda White Chapman.

was treated for minor injuries. He was subsequently released back into the custody of sheriff's deputies.

As the alleged assailants and the alleged victim were all in the care and custody of the state of Maryland at the time of the incident, each of the assault charges are classified as felonies. The first-degree assault charge carries a possible 25-year prison term, while the second-degree assault charge carries a possible 10-year prison term. Each of the four alleged assailants is being held on $20,000 cash-only bond.

Alhassan was subsequently released from jail on his own recognizance appearing before the district court commissioner for a hearing on his bad check charges.

It is not believed that the victim, who is not a Garrett County resident, had any dealings with any of the others prior to coming into contact with them in jail this week.

volunteers. He said the group effort resulted in a "tremendous savings" for the school board budget, and that similar projects have been planned at other schools.

The superintendent informed the commissioners that the advanced studio art class at Southern High School recently captured second place in a state art competition. The class is taught by Sonia Pratt. He also noted that a grant application for $40,000 was approved for the local school system, with the money earmarked for materials for the school enrichment programs.

Teets said Feb. 5 is "Legislation Day" for school boards, and that he and several members of the local board will be traveling to Annapolis to meet with Delegate George Edwards and Senator John Hafer, among other state officials.

Roads Department

Lee Thorne, director of the county roads department, told the commissioners that his office has used less than half of the "overtime budget" so far.

"And since we are about halfway through winter, I am projecting that we will stay within the budget this year," Thorne said. "That is, of course, if we don't have a rough couple of months now."

He said the supplies for the treatment of the roads are holding out well. He reported that during milder days, the work crews have been patching holes and cutting brush. He said they have also been working on the summer equipment so that it is ready to use when the warmer weather arrives.

Dr. Teets thanked Thorne for his department's cooperation with the schools, noting that the roads workers "do a great job" in keeping the roadways safe for the transportation of students.

Planning Office

John Nelson, director of the planning office for the county, said that the Maryland State Highway Administration will soon be notifying elected officials of the county concerning the proposed by-pass around Oakland. He said that "by-pass" is not the correct term, and that the MSHA is simply calling the project an "alternative route around Oakland."

Nelson said there are several ideas being discussed. He outlined three of the main ideas, beginning with the option of doing nothing to the current roadway. The second proposal is to remove parking along Third Street in Oakland and to raze the former Subway building to construct a wider turning lane for trucks. The third idea is to construct an alternative route, which would leave Rt. 219 just north of Oakland's outskirts and reconnect at the intersection of Rts. 219 and 135, just east of town.

Nelson said the next step for the MSHA is to inform the elected officials of the proposals, and then to establish a series of public meetings to get the input of the citizenry.

General Services

Gary Mullich, the county's general services director, reported that 15 contractors have requested the bid packages for the planned visitors' center in McHenry. The proposals are due on Feb. 9. After the contract is awarded, Mullich said he hopes construction will begin as soon as the weather permits.

Mullich said that the local jail renovation project is under contract but that the workers are presently waiting for some of the materials to arrive.

He also reported that the sidewalks at the Ruth Enlow Library and around the courthouse are scheduled for repairs in the spring.

Landfill

Rodney Glotfelty, director of the office of solid waste and recycling, told the commissioners that a "Tire Amnesty Day" will be held on Earth Day, April 25. On this date, local residents will be given the opportunity to get rid of used tires, without fees. Glotfelty said the state is the main funding entity for the event, and that he will be widely publicizing it in the next several weeks.

We would like to thank family and friends for their many deeds of kindness during the illness and after the passing of our loved one,
Thomas H. Graham.

IRS-Sponsored VITA Program Available In TA

A Volunteer Income Tax Assistance (VITA) program, sponsored by the Internal Revenue Service, is again being offered at the Terra Alta Town Hall to help taxpayers prepare their income tax returns.

According to Milton Crum, one of the four trained and certified VITA volunteers who will be available to provide assistance between 10 a.m. and noon each Thursday from Feb. 5 through April 9, the program helps taxpayers prepare their returns to receive credits and refunds to which they are entitled. Assistance is also available to those 65 years of age and older, and those who are blind or disabled, as well as persons who are eligible for Earned Income Credit.

Crum and his associates, Shirley Young, Kathie White, and Dewitt Wyatt, invite the public to take advantage of this free service. For more information, Crum may be reached by calling 304-789-2201.

Those who wish to participate are asked to get them to the school by February 20. Campbell product labels, including the Swanson family of foods, plus the General Mills cereals and snacks containing "Box Tops for Education," will continue to be collected following this date.

The Aurora first grade has studied the ocean during January, and this included an imaginary trip over the ocean floor. Donna Beckman reports that the class also expects to attend the January 29 beach party.

Second graders are into their last reader for the year, titled Make A Splash. They will be reading stories relating to the importance of written communication. In so doing, they will learn about newspapers and create a second grade paper. They just completed a measurement section of American and metric units in measurement of length and will be working on adding larger numbers with regrouping. Krista Hayes, instructor, reports for the class.

Fifth graders recently completed a spell-off to determine five who will participate in the school spelling bee on February 12. Finalists at the conclusion of the week were Jennifer Sullivan, Max Fajardo, Holly Keeney, Homer Huffman, Cody Fauber, Jordan Lantz, Amanda Burgess, Joshua Mullenax, Delbert Wiles, Seth Feather, Melissa Morris, and Adam Pifer. The five classroom winners were Max Fajardo, Holly Keeney, Cody Fauber, Amanda Burgess, and Adam Pifer. Leona Dixon is their teacher.

Allen Mullins reports that the sixth grade has been busy with the Young Writers' Contest, picking winners who will participate in Math Field Day and in the school spelling bee, They have also, along with fifth graders, been preparing science fair projects for a school science fair scheduled for February 12. They are also making plans for a class trip to Charleston on April 24 when they hope to visit the governor's mansion, capitol building, the cultural center, and Sunrise Museum.

Young writers who will be in county competition are Aaron Dillsworth, second grade, who has a story about a snowman; Travis Mersing in prose, and Bridgette Strawser in poetry, both from the fourth grade; Joshua Mullenax for prose and Homer Huffman for poetry, in the fifth grade; and sixth graders Tyler Sigley with a story, "3048," and Jessica Fazenbaker, who has a poem.

In addition to the sixth grade activities, spelling bee contestants at the school level are Leah Strawser, Tyler Sigley, Ryan Feather, Sara Lewis and Lauren Roth.

Fourth graders are writing to a "trucker buddy," Robin Norris of Chattanooga, Tenn., who will be sending them postcards from her various destinations. They have also been studying about Newbery Book Awards, and in their investigation have collected about 70% of these books. They have used the library Internet to develop reports on rain forest animals. The fifth grade has joined the fourth graders in collecting $112.50 in their goal of raising $300 for the Peruvian Jose Carlos Mariategui School. Linda Martin is fourth grade instructor.

Mike Dixon reports that in the area of physical fitness, the students have been receiving conditioning for the Presidential Fitness test and they are also developing basketball skills in the intramural games taking place on Friday nights and Sunday afternoons. PERSONAL MENTION

Mark Teets showed slides and told of his experiences in Sucre, Bolivia, during the last few days of December and early January during an Assembly of God mission to build a dormitory and meeting room for a new alcohol and drug rehabilitation center in that city. Two groups from this area joined their efforts, the ground preparation already having been made, and erected the walls, both interior and exterior. They also prepared the meeting room with steel trusses ready for roofing, and the remainder of the building also ready for a roof. Using tile this year, there will be no need for the stucco finish which had been applied to the seminary dormitory. Teets also showed pictures of the completed accommodations at the seminary and of a trip through the rugged countryside in which altitudes range from 10,000 to 20,000 feet. Mark was accompanied by his son Lindsey, who is reportedly anxious to make another trip. In the other group from this area were Mike Lantz and Leonard Snyder, the latter doing welding on trusses most of the time he was there.

Adrian Stemple of Amboy, son of Adrian and Mary Stemple, was another of the Aurora 4-H members who made the recent trip to Russia. He reports that during his stay he developed a good friend, and the family with whom he stayed expects to come to visit the Stemples in 1999.

Bruce Rembold of Eglon received word that his sister's grandson, Alex Mincer, was ill with menengitis last week. A later report states that he is home with his parents, the John Mincers, in Phoenix, Ariz., where he is now recuperating.

A flue fire at the Jason Michael home in Aurora on Thursday evening was answered by the Aurora Volunteer Fire Department. Union Ambulance was also called to the scene.

Charles and Diane Myers and their two children of Marlinton were weekend guests of his mother, Iris Myers, Aurora.

Grace Harsh was transferred last week from Garrett County Memorial Hospital to the Dennett Road Manor Nursing Home, Oakland.

Marie Teets of Silver Lake was ill with pneumonia last week at her home.

Also ill, but at home, is Mary Jane Hanline of Aurora, who has suffered from a debilitating infection all winter.

Wilma Knapp returned home to Amboy last Wednesday, Jan. 21, her 85th birthday, only to be informed that her youngest brother, Joseph Pifer, had died that day at his home in Colorado. He was the youngest child of the late Cyrus and Nellie Pifer, and another sister, Nina Layman, also survives at Aurora.

THE WINGS OF THE DOVE

Rated R - Running time: 1:48

Helena Bonham Carter, star of such memorable films as A Room With A View (1986) and Howard's End (1992), has turned in another powerful performance in a film of the same style: a scenery- and costume-rich romance set in Europe in the early 20th century. The screenplay for The Wings Of The Dove, which was adapted by Hossein Amini from the original novel actually written about 100 years ago by Henry James, was retooled somewhat to be more appealing to a 1990s audience. It seems to have lost something in the translation. But Carter certainly delivers, and she is surrounded by equally strong performances by all the supporting cast and stunning cinematography by Eduardo Serra II.

The story begins in 1910 with Kate Croy (Carter), a young woman forced to live a miserable life in London with her controlling, rich aunt Maude (Charlotte Rampling). This is because her mother has recently died and her father (Michael Gambon) is an alcoholic opium addict with a heart of gold but no cash and no sense of responsibility. Since Kate has just come of age, Maude feels the need to see that her niece "marries well," which of course means marrying some high society snob, namely Lord Mark (Alex Jennings), whom she abhors. Meanwhile, Kate is already in love with one of her "old" (read: "poor") friends, Merton Densher (Linus Roache), a middle-class man who must actually work for a living. He writes for a newspaper. How gauche. But Aunt Maude has assured Kate that if she insists on going with him, she will be cut off from the family fortune, and so will her father, who is also receiving a weekly stipend from his nasty sister-in-law.

This movie, directed by Iain Softley, progresses slowly at first. In addition to establishing Kate's rather trite situation, it also introduces Milly Theale (Alison Elliott), Kate's rich American friend who is thought by Kate to be the object of everyone's infatuation. Lord Mark admits that he wants to marry Milly, but later he confides that it is really Kate that he loves, and that Milly is terminally ill and he just wants to marry her so that he can inherit her fortune, which he needs to maintain his acquired lifestyle. Then he and Kate can wed and be happy. Whether she wants to or not.

It is not until probably a full hour into the film that the actual plot starts to grind into motion: Kate wants her boyfriend Merton to court Milly (who is in love with him) until she expires, and for two reasons: (1) to give her some true love and affection in her last days, and (2) to marry her and thereby inherit her fortune for himself, so that he and Kate may live happily ever after.

As with Carter's other films, like the ones mentioned in the opening paragraph, this one is beautifully produced and impeccably acted. The music (by Ed Shearmur) is rich, the scenery is rich, the costumes are rich. If you are a fan of these romantic period pieces, you'll probably like this.

But it's not without its problems. It moves pretty slowly, it is terribly brooding, and it takes a while for the momentous amount of exposition to give way to the actual plot. The characterizations are well-defined, but Carter's characters in all these period movies are practically interchangeable, and frankly it's getting a little boring. Sylvester Stallone was great in Rocky, but by Rocky V we had had enough. Same problem here. Also there were some other problems like Rampling's wicked-stepmother character being stereotyped to the point that one questions the validity of the entire story.

Granted, these are picky points, but they are indicative of a bigger problem: that of Amini and Softley getting a little sloppy in their attempt to continue

Local Indoor Soccer Teams Leave Mark At Bridgeport

The Arsenal Football Club left its mark at the recent Bridgeport, W.Va., indoor soccer tournament, as two of the local teams played in the final rounds of the tournament.

In the girls' U-12 division, the Arsenal girls' team played for the championship, only to lose by a 2-1 score. To get to the championship game, the girls posted two wins and a draw.

In the first game, Sabrina Scheffel scored two goals on two assists by Alasha Rush to post a 2-1 victory over a Bridgeport club. Becky Archer had five saves in goal. In the second contest, Arsenal tied 2-2 on goals by Rush and April Teets, with an assist by Scheffel. Archer had 13 saves in the net. In game three, Arsenal posted a 2-1 victory on scores by Scheffel and Teets, with an assist from Scheffel. Archer had seven stops in goal. In the championship game, the local team scored on a goal by Scheffel, assisted by Teets. Archer had three saves in goal.

The girls were honored at the awards ceremony after the game and each received medallions for their second place finish in the tournament. Other members of the girls' U-12 team are: Sarah Anderson and Erin Oxford.

The Arsenal U-18 Green team boys also ascended to great heights by playing in the finals of their division. In their first game, they upended a good Bridgeport team by a 3-2 score. Goals were scored by Ricky Vecchioni, Andrew Grant, and Michael Schwalm on assists by Jacob Snodgrass and Grant. Steve Allison collected 12 saves in goal. In the second match, the Arsenal club earned a shutout of a team from Charleston, 2-0. Both Arsenal goals were scored by Jacob Snodgrass, with Schwalm assisting on both. Steve Allison had 10 saves as keeper.

In the third game, Arsenal played against its own U-16 team because of the seeding process of the tournament. In winning by a 6-1 score, both Snodgrass and Dustin Slider collected two goals apiece, with Grant and Vecchioni having one each. One assist was recorded by Snodgrass. Steve Allison made seven stops in the contest. In their fourth game, the winner of which would move to the finals, the Arsenal club, meeting Charleston for the second time, came from a 2-0 deficit to win the game by a 3-2 score. Snodgrass tallied two goals, with Grant claiming the third on an assist by Vecchioni. Allison gathered 10 saves.

In the championship game, Arsenal faced a select team from Bridgeport called the Wolfpac, a team that had won all of its games and had not permitted a score all day. The Arsenal team was up to the task, and scored three goals in the game to stay even with Wolfpac until the final two minutes of the game. However, the Wolfpac scored two quick goals and Arsenal was on the short end of a 5-3 score. Snodgrass scored all three goals unassisted. Allison made 15 stops in the game.

As with the girls, the Arsenal boys finished in second place, collecting medallions for their efforts.

Arsenal also had four other teams at the tournament. The U-18 White team, comprised of Chris Friend, Nick Glotfelty, Bo Jonson, Chad Lovett, Jeff McDaniel, John Menker, and Steve Pariseau, got off to a good start by defeating a select team from Parkersburg, 4-1. Glotfelty and Pariseau recorded two goals each, and Lovett had an assist. Jonson had 10 saves in goal. In the second game, this team faced a team from Charleston and lost by a 2-1 score, though Arsenal clearly outplayed the winners. The lone goal was scored by Pariseau unassisted. Jonson handled the ball six times. In the third game, against a team seeded fifth of 13 teams, Arsenal again played a team from Charleston, only to lose a heartbreaker, 1-0. Jonson recorded six stops.

Arsenal also fielded a U-16 team consisting of Brian Cathell, Caine Chorpenning, Jim Hart, Chris Menker, Brian Oxford, Michael Pariseau, Nick Pratt, and Andrew Rounds. In the first game, matched against a select club from Bridgeport, the club lost 11-0. Menker recorded 16 saves. In the second game, Arsenal faced a team from Clarksburg and, in spite of losing 3-0, played a much improved game. Menker collected the ball for 16 saves. In the third game, this team faced its fellow Green team and lost 6-1. Menker scored the lone goal and had five saves in goal. Cathell had one save in goal and Oxford another.

The boys' U-15 team members are: Eric Archer, Brandon Heselbach, Chris Menker, T.J. Nine, Bryce Taylor, and Matthew Vecchioni. This Arsenal team lost its first two games, but won the third game in the seeded rounds to advance before falling in the final game. Heselbach and Menker shared the goal duties, with goals being scored by Archer, Menker, and Heselbach.

The final Arsenal team, the girls' U-16, also had a strong outing. In only their second tournament, the girls played well against U-18 competition. After losing their first two games by 1-0 scores to NC United and Alliance, the Arsenal club recorded a 1-0 victory over the Lady Booters. Brittany Naylor scored for Arsenal. In the last game of the seeded round, Arsenal fell to the Alliance club by a 2-0 score. "Becky Martin did an outstanding job in goal all four games in spite of recovering from two broken fingers from earlier play," stated a team spokesman.

The other members of Arsenal's U-16 girls' team are Sarah Teets, Kristen Oxford, Miriam Sincell, Laura Hollingsworth, Alison Ulino, and Bonnie Riley.

The Arsenal club will be returning to Bridgeport on February 15 for another tournament. They will be playing at Morgantown in March before opening their outdoor season March 29.

Local Soccer Coaches Attend Licensing Clinic

A number of coaches from the Mountaintop Soccer Association and the Arsenal Football Club attended a two-day United States Soccer Federation clinic on January 10-11. Upon completion of the written test that must be submitted to Maryland State Youth Soccer Association, these people will become certified coaches holding the "E" Certificate. This certificate enables them to coach traveling, competitive soccer teams age 14 and under. The next certification level is the "D" certificate, available later this year, which enables coaches to coach at the collegiate level and below.

This course consisted of training on how to develop skill and technique, how to develop and use small-sided games, coaching attitudes and behavior, numerous laws (rules) of the game, basic passing and turning skills, making angles for effective passing, and numerous other facets of the game.

The instructor for the program was Graham Ramsay, a U.S.S.F. licensed coach, who holds licensed coaching credentials in four countries. Ramsay is the director of coaching for Maryland State Youth Soccer. He was also a professional player in his home country of England for a number of years.

Mountaintop Soccer and Arsenal Football staff noted its appreciation to each of the participants, who are willing to serve the youth of the county to develop their skills to the highest levels possible.

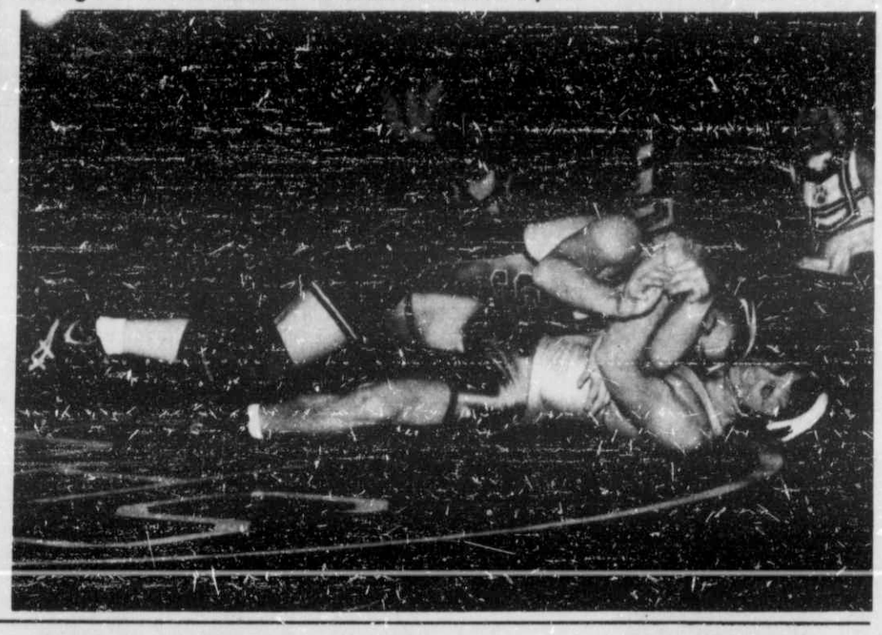
CONTINUING THEIR DOMINANCE on area high school wrestling mats are the Northern Huskies, who defeated three more teams this past week, including cross-county rival Southern, to up their perfect regular meet record to 11-0. The Rams performed well against the unbeaten Huskies, but finished on the short end of a 39-30 score last Thursday in Oakland. Above left, Southern's Tommy Sweitzer controls Nate Kauffman in the 152-pound bout. Kauffman was injured in the match and is pictured below left receiving aid from members of the Southern Rescue Squad. Standing center is his coach, Scott Stough, and at right is Southern assistant coach Joe Heatherman. While it was feared that Kauffman might have a spinal injury, he reportedly had a concussion, and was treated and released at Garrett County Memorial Hospital. Above right, Northern's Paul Beitzel earns riding points en route to a win over Southern's Sean Conroy in the 125-pound contest. Below, Jeremy Sweitzer appears to be in control of Husky Jimmy Green, but Green emerged as the winner of the 140-pound division match by decision.



Huskies Continue Dominance On Mats, Win Three More

Victories number 9, 10, and 11, against no defeats, were recorded this past week by the Northern High School wrestling team, which continues to dominate the area. The Huskies topped cross-county rival Southern last Thursday night, 39-30, in Oakland, then defeated both Martinsburg, 42-18, and North Hagerstown, 31-23, in a tri-match on their own mats Saturday afternoon.

Recording pins for the Huskies in their win over Southern were Brandon Stein in the 112-pound division, Seth Huber at 119, Jimmy Warnick at 130, and Josh Boyd in the 160-pound bout. Paul Beitzel won the 125-pound match via technical fall, while Jimmy Green (140) won by decision and Roy Holliday (103) was awarded a win by forfeit.

The Southern Rams finished the evening with three pins, those by Eric Rexrode in the 135-pound clash, Jeremy Hayhurst at 189, and Russell Crosco, heavyweight. Nick Dolan (145) and John Hayhurst (171) won on points, while Tommy Sweitzer was declared winner by injury default in the 152-pound division when Northern's Nate Kauffman went down with a concussion. Kauffman was removed from the mats on a backboard by the Southern Rescue Squad for fear he had sustained spinal injuries.

In Saturday's lopsided win over Martinsburg, Holliday, Stein, Warnick, and Boyd earned pin victories, while Paul Beitzel (125), Jesse Shimrock (135), Green, Matt Kauffman (160), and Ryan Savage (heavyweight) were all winners on points.

Huskies Avenge Earlier Loss To Panthers, 68-41

The varsity boys' basketball team of Northern High School had only one game this past week, but Coach Mike Friend's team made the best of it by defeating visiting Hancock, 68-41, last Friday night and thus avenge an earlier loss to the Panthers.

The teams played almost evenly in the first quarter, which ended with Northern up by three, 13-10. The Huskies were on top by seven, 26-19, at halftime, and then erupted for 28 points in the third stanza, while holding the Panthers to just four, giving them a commanding 54-23 lead going into the final quarter.

Dustin Long provided a strong effort for the Huskies, as he pumped in a game-high 24 points, grabbed 17 rebounds, and blocked six shots. Craig Kamp recorded 16 points and seven assists, while Scott Sisler also reached double figures with 14 points.

Pacing the Panthers in scoring was Chris Noe with 13 points. Derrick Hoffman chipped in with nine.

The Northern junior varsity was also victorious in the preliminary game, 60-43, as Jeremy Rice paced the Huskies with 12 points. Mike Hickson scored 10 to lead the Hancock jayvees.

Huskies Thwarted By Mt. Savage On Home Court

A chance to knock off seventh-ranked Mt. Savage and step up in the rankings got away from the Northern girls' basketball team Monday night, as the Huskies, who came into the game ranked eighth and hot on the heels of the Indians, lost by a score of 47-38. The contest was not out of the home team's grasp until the final quarter, for Northern trailed by only three points at the half and by two points as the final quarter opened. A 16-9 fourth period put the game, and the Huskies, away.

Forward Brooke Brenneman put forth an excellent performance with 13 points and 10 rebounds for Northern, and Heidi Frazee added eight points. Guard Jill Speicher hit two three-point bombs to account for all six of her points, and Kathy Arnold contributed six points as well.

Mt. Savage was led by Heather Abucevicz's 24 points and 10 rebounds. Amy Stafford and Mary Beth Kennell added 10 points each for the Indians.

Northern's record now stands at 9-5 overall and 4-3 in the WMIL. The Huskies match-up at Southern last night was canceled due to weather and will be played at a date to be announced later. Looking to the future, Northern's next scheduled contest is a home game against Flintstone on Wednesday night.

Southern Mat Club Tournament To Be Saturday

The Southern Mat Club will host a youth wrestling tournament this Saturday, Jan. 31, at Southern High School. This event will be attended by several hundred young wrestlers from Pennsylvania, West Virginia, and Maryland. According to SMC coach Dave Taylor, the event will showcase the tri-state's top wrestling talent and serve as Southern Mat Club's major fund-raising effort.

The Southern Mat Club's wrestlers, parents, and coaches encourage all local residents to support the club by attending this tournament. "This is a great chance to see these young athletes in action," Taylor said, "and community support is crucial for our club's success."

Wrestling will begin at 9:30 a.m. and will continue through most of the day. Concessions will be served all day in the cafeteria.

For more information on the Southern Mat Club or this tournament, persons may contact any team member or coach, or visit the club website at www.gcnet.net/SMC.

Thank You

I would like to take this opportunity to thank all of those persons that supported me for the appointment to the county commissioner position that was just filled.

To those who wrote letters, signed petitions, or made phone calls to the Republican Central Committee and/or to the governor, your words of encouragement to these people were very much the reason why I received the consideration that I did. I am proud to have been recommended by the Republican Central Committee and considered by Governor Glendening for the replacement of such a fine commissioner as Roger Glotfelty.

Again, I say thank you to all for your support. Your support in the future will be greatly appreciated. Thank You!

Sincerely,
Russell T. Sines

Youth Grapplers Win Seven Titles In Two Tourneys

Members of the Southern Mat Club youth wrestling team were on the road again this past Saturday, with representation in a tournament at Taylor County, W.Va., and one in Waynesburg, Pa.

The local grapplers won 13 of 19 matches at Taylor County to capture six individual championships, two second places, and one fourth place. Four members of the club participated in the tourney in Waynesburg, an event that featured over 500 wrestlers from 51 teams and five states, and captured one individual title.

At Taylor County, the following SMC members won titles: Nick Tressler, age 7-8/45 pounds; Justin Ratliff, 7-8/60; David Ratliff, 9-10/65 and 11-12/72; and Jason Weeks, 11-12/95 and 13-15/95. Winning runner-up trophies were Tyler Gregory, 4-under/40, and Nick Tressler, 7-8/50. Jeremy Gregory, 9-10/75, won a fourth place. Also participating from the SMC was Ryan Gregory, 13-15/110.

Winning an individual title at Waynesburg was Scott Wildesen (9-10/80), who defeated all three of his opponents. Wildesen also won a third place in the 85-pound division.

Also competing were Nathan Sines (9-10/80), who won two of four matches, and Daniel Carr (7-8/60) and Geoff Tressler (13-15/110), who each won one of three bouts.

Last week's story announcing results of the club's efforts at the West Fairmont tournament should have included information about Daniel Carr also capturing a first-place trophy, as he won all four of his matches by pin, with the final pin being a come-from-behind victory.

The Southern Mat Club will host its own tournament this Saturday, Jan. 31.

MORE AND MORE TROPHIES are being captured every weekend by the Southern Mat Club, some members of which participated in a tournament in Taylor County, W.Va., while other competed in a tourney in Waynesburg, Pa., this past Saturday. Pictured from left, kneeling, are: Jeremy Gregory, Daniel Carr, Nick Tressler, Justin Ratliff, and David Ratliff. Standing, same order, are: Nathan Sines, Jason Weeks, Ryan Gregory, Coach Buck Liller, Geoff Tressler, and Scott Wildesen. See story for details. The Southern club will host its own tournament this Saturday at Southern High School.

The Rams trailed Allegany throughout most of Saturday's contest, but stayed in striking distance throughout the game. They were down by a basket at the end of the first quarter, 14-12, trailed by three at intermission, 34-31, and were also behind by three at the end of the third period, 40-37.

The Rams took a 45-44 advantage at the 5:46 mark of the fourth period, but the lead changed hands several times the rest of the way. A free throw by Nathan DiSimone with just 14 seconds left gave the Rams a 59-56 lead and, after a three-point attempt by Allegany's David Miller missed, DiSimone secured the win for the Rams by pulling down the final rebound just before the buzzer sounded.

The Rams won the game at the foul line, from which they converted 21 of 25 attempts (84%), while the Campers netted 17 of 23 opportunities (73%). Both teams recorded 19 field goals, with just one basket being from three-point range by Miller.

John Andrews led the Rams' scoring performance with 17 points and combined with DiSimone to connect on 14 of 15 free throws between them. Jayson Garland netted 12 points and DiSimone finished with 11 points, six assists, and four rebounds. Teammate Mike Paesani grabbed six rebounds and scored nine points.

Pacing the Campers' offensive effort was Nik Gates, who hit a game-high 21 points. Miller finished with 11.

Southern	13	21	29	39	47
Keyser	5	17	26	39	45

The loss snapped a four-game winning streak by the Campers, and it was their first loss in WMIL competition. They dropped to 7-5 overall and 6-1 in the WMIL.

The Southern junior varsity was topped in the preliminary game, 46-35. Leading the Alco jayvees in scoring was Nathan Simpson with 12 points. Justin Liller netted seven for Southern.

In Tuesday's contest against Keyser, the Rams held a relatively small lead through most of what was a defensive game, but a three-point bucket by Keyser's Jamie Jordan with just two seconds left in regulation knotted the score at 39-39 and forced the overtime period.

The Rams then capitalized at the foul line again by converting six of 10 opportunities in the overtime period to hang on for the two-point victory.

The Rams were in control of the contest early, as they held the Golden Tornado to just two baskets in the first quarter and were on top 13-5 at the end of the period. The home team narrowed Southern's lead to four, 21-17, by halftime, and were down by only one, 29-28, after three periods.

Andrews again led the Rams in scoring by hitting three three-point buckets and finishing with 16 points. Paesani also reached double figures with 10 points and Mike Pamepinto netted eight.

Leading Keyser's offense were John Haines and Jordan with 14 and 10 points, respectively. It was the fifth loss in 11 starts for the Tornados.

The Southern jayvees got back on the winning track in the first game by defeating the Keyser junior varsity, 43-37, behind a 16-point effort by Justin Liller. Derek Shank and Jamie Redman each scored eight points for Keyser.

Coach Tom Bosley's Rams will play again this Friday at home against county rival Northern. They will host Westmar next Tuesday.

Rams Frosh Whomp Wildcats By 39 Pts.

The Southern freshman team opened its week by demolishing Westmar 66-27, then had a tougher time of things before defeating the Northern Huskies 36-24 (see separate story.)

Against Westmar, the Rams placed four players in double figures as Jamie Bosley, Steve Eiswert, Ryan Ewing, and Mike Saturday combined for 44 points to lead the offense. The combination of the scorching attack and a defense that froze the Wildcats to a total of only 11 field goals keyed the victory, as the Rams never trailed during the contest.

"We used a variety of trapping defenses and executed them all very well, said third year coach Jon Hegeman. "All eleven players contributed and it was indeed a total team effort," he commented.

Lakers Topped By Cecil CC; Fall To 14-5

It was a light week for the Garrett Community College men's varsity, as a foot of snow postponed last night's scheduled game with Montgomery-Germantown; but the result of the only game the Lakers did play was a 95-91 Maryland JUCO loss to host Cecil Community College on Saturday. The loss dropped the Lakers to 14-5 overall.

Garrett held a 52-46 advantage at halftime, but could not hold on for the win, even though they outgunned the host team from the floor by a 37-34 margin in field goals. The Lakers finished with seven three-point goals, while Cecil hit nine, but it was at the foul line that GCC was defeated. The Lakers converted just half of their free throws (10 of 20), while Cecil made good on 18 of 23.

Michael Fields led the Lakers with a game-high 25 points, seven assists, and four steals, while Rob Wheeler recorded 16 points and 14 rebounds. Eric Papcun had one of his best efforts of the season by hitting 15 points, Lionell Sewell finished with 13, and Jerome Adams, who netted three long-range shots, contributed 12 points.

Cecil also had five players finish in double figures; Andrew Collins, who scored his team's last five points, finished with 24 points. Ian Remsburg hit 16 points, Rudyard Wallace finished with 14, Joel Adams had 12 points and five assists, and Douglass Ching recorded 11 points and five assists. Damien Johnson led his team in rebounding with seven.

The Lakers out-rebounded Cecil by a 45-37 margin.

Garrett will host Dundalk CC this Saturday and travel to Montgomery County-Rockville next Wednesday.

In Loving Memory of Chuck "Butch" Munday
On his birthday, January 29th.

God looked around His garden,
And found an empty place.
He then looked down upon this Earth
And saw your tired face.
He knew you were suffering
He knew you were in pain
He also knew in heaven
You would never hurt again.
So He put His arms around you
And lifted you home to rest.

Rams Storm Fort Hill Before Losing Battle With Spartans

Two WMIL games for Southern's girls basketball team this week saw the Rams split with their opponents as they defeated Fort Hill 55-43, then fell to Bishop Walsh 58-51.

A 18-8 fourth quarter tear put the Rams over the top of Fort Hill's ramparts in Cumberland Saturday. Southern had led by only three points at the half and two points at the close of three quarters of play. Bridget Miller connected on 11 of 14 free throws in the final period to lead the Rams to victory.

Miller ended the night with 22 points on four field goals and 14 foul shots. Jessica Saturday added 16 points, and Liz Paesani tallied 10 points and a team-high six rebounds.

Fort Hill was led by Kristie Stone's 10 points and two blocked shots, Jennifer Vance's nine points, and eight points each from Emily Coyle and Melissa Goetschius. Sarah Custer took rebounding honors for the night with nine.

The Rams' junior varsity followed Charlena Reeves's 14 points to a 32-28 victory.

On Monday Southern had victory in sight as the fourth quarter opened with the Rams holding an eight-point lead over Bishop Walsh, but neither that lead nor the home-court advantage was enough to prevent the Rams from letting victory slip away.

After leading for most of the game, Southern fell to the hot shooting of Lauren Zapf, who hit for five points on a three-point goal and a lay-up that came within a matter of seconds of each other shortly after the opening of the final period. By the mid-point of the fourth quarter, BW had taken the lead for good, although the Rams narrowed the gap to four points with two minutes to go. Another scoring run by the Spartans iced the contest, however.

Saturday scored 19 points for the Rams, while Michelle Teter contributed 13 points and Miller 10 points. Zapf ended the night with 30 points for BW, and was assisted by 11 points from Breanna Bowen and nine points from Tiffini Wagoner.

The Rams' jayvee came out on the losing end as well, 33-30. Reeves scored 14 points for Southern.

Southern was scheduled to host the Northern Huskies last night, but the contest was canceled because of weather and will be rescheduled at a later date. The upcoming schedule shows a road trip to Mt. Savage on Monday and a home matchup with Fort Hill on Thursday.

Battle Of The Frosh Sees Rams Collar Huskies

A showdown of Garrett County's freshman boys' basketball teams was closer than the final 12-point margin may have indicated, and may portend some big battles over the next four years as the young men continue their scholastic basketball careers at their respective schools. Although Southern defeated Northern 36-24, "we were lucky to escape with a win," observed Rams coach Jon Hegeman.

Although they struggled with an aggressive Husky defense, the Rams led at the buzzer of each quarter. Southern held an 8-6 lead at the end of the first period and stretched its lead to 14-11 at the half. Josh Sharon had four steals in the first half and Jamie Bosley scored 11 points.

In the second half the Rams pulled away behind Bryan Panther and Justin DiSimone. Panther tallied eight points while DiSimone had two steals and three assists to spark Southern to victory.

A.J. Thomas and Jeremy Frazee each scored nine points to lead Northern.

"Southern is certainly one of the best freshman teams in the area," commented Northern coach Brad Frantz. "Our defensive intensity was probably the best it has been all year, and we were in a position to win until late in the fourth quarter. If we had played that well in our previous three games, we would have won at least two of them," he said.

"The Huskies played more aggressively," Hegeman concurred, "and were more prepared than us. Our depth wore them down in the fourth period," the winning coach said.

Southern, holder of a 10-3 record, plays Keyser on Saturday. Northern's record is 2-5 and its game against Bishop Walsh was canceled because of weather conditions yesterday.

Freshman Huskies Fall To Frankfort

A trip to Frankfort ended in defeat Thursday for the Northern ninth grade basketball team as it fell to the Falcons 60-39. Jeremy Frazee scored 12 points in the losing effort, while Frankfort's Brandon Koffeman totaled 18 points. Northern's next match-up pitted the Huskies against the Southern Rams for county bragging rights (see separate story.)

Lakers Drain Chesapeake By 53 Points

Five players tallied double-digit scoring totals for the Garrett Community College women's basketball team as they trounced a floundering Chesapeake Community College team 94-41. The Lakers flooded the nets with 11 unanswered points to open the contest, and led the entire contest from ship to stern.

Mary Walters piloted GCC to victory with 19 points, 10 assists and eight steals. Walters and the rest of the Lakers crew mounted a balanced offensive attack, as Erica McBride scored 17 points, Chrissy Lambert and Keyshia Monroe contributed 14 points each, and Marika Washington tallied 12 points.

GCC's next game is Saturday as the Lakers host Harford.

milking the formula that was successful in Carter's previous major movies. But if you're in the mood for a weepy romance beautifully produced, you won't be disappointed. ★★★★

PHANTOMS

Rated R - Running time: 1:35

Ben Affleck showed us his skill not only with acting but screenwriting in the recent feel-good hit, Good Will Hunting. Unfortunately he didn't have his friend Matt Damon to work with in Phantoms. He did have Peter O'Toole, however. Thank goodness.

This science fiction/horror opus by Dean Koontz, directed by Joe Chappelle, has scenes that bring back memories of old greats like The Andromeda Strain and The Birds. Scenes which, while they are effective by themselves, tend to underscore the fact that this film isn't really in the same league with those. It is a rather silly concept, drawn out to terribly silly lengths, with so many horror-movie clichés that the good devices are drowned out by the schlock. But it does offer some interesting images and plenty of chills if you are willing to use a block and tackle to suspend your disbelief.

It is about a small town (Snowfield, Colorado) whose residents spookily disappear or show up dead all on one winter afternoon. When two sisters, Jenny (Joanna Going) and Lisa (Rose McGowan), go there for a mini-vacation, they find nothing but bloated bodies with terrible varicose vein problems. What a tragedy--if they'd only used support hose. The girls would like to leave, but their car is as dead as the people, so they are forced to prowl around looking for more bodies, seeking out the darkest and most eerie spaces in town. Just when they (and we) are getting tired of sudden, loud noises, the town's sheriff (Affleck) jumps out at them. (No one ever just walks into a room in this movie.)

After more loud noises and more deaths, help finally arrives: a veritable fortress on wheels with a fully accoutered chemical laboratory inside, and Timothy Flyte (O'Toole), who is a scientist/tabloid writer summoned by the mysterious killer by way of a cryptic message scrawled on a mirror. (The armored minivan is supplied by some branch of the government, who was apparently able to design and build the thing in a matter of minutes.) It seems the killer wants Flyte to write a story about it for his National Enquirer-style rag. Guess it didn't feel like it would get a prominent page in Time or Newsweek.

After more deaths and more jumping out, Flyte is able to figure out that his suspicions are correct: this is some kind of organic entity that lives deep in the earth and occasionally pops out for a snack, such as the entire population of a small town. This is what happened, he postulates, to the disappeared residents of Croatoa off North Carolina, to a small Chinese army that vanished several hundred years ago, and to countless other missing people over the ages. He has written about this "ancient enemy" before, but never seen it until now.

O'Toole's performance is engaging, but it doesn't save the film from being a rather second-rate thriller. Affleck is able to deliver lines realistically, but there is little depth to his Sheriff Hammond, and that huge cowboy hat makes him look like a kid at Disneyland. The two women mainly just walk around looking good and being scared. The only actor besides O'Toole who has bothered to create a character for this movie is Liev Schreiber (Scream 2), who plays Hammond's insubordinate deputy. His monster-possessed alter ego will be the star of the sequel, and no doubt it will again utter his oft-repeated catch phrase, "Wanna see somethin?" ★★★

Highway Safety Program Will Offer Alcohol Awareness Training

All Garrett County liquor license holders and their employees are invited to attend free alcohol awareness training sessions sponsored by the local Highway Safety Program.

"The training series is called TIPS, Training for Intervention ProcedureS, and is designed to prevent alcohol abuse, drunk driving, and underage drinking by enhancing the fundamental 'people skills' of servers, sellers, and consumers of alcohol," said Diane Lee, Highway Safety coordinator.

"TIPS gives individuals the knowledge and confidence they need to recognize potential alcohol-related problems and effectively intervene to prevent alcohol-related tragedies," said Fred Herath, certified TIPS trainer.

The first session being offered is the On Premise training, scheduled for Monday, Feb. 16, from 8:45 a.m. to 3 p.m. in the Continuing Education building at Garrett Community College. This session is designed for servers at restaurants, bars, hotels, and any business where alcohol is consumed at the establishment. Employees will learn strategies for serving alcohol responsibly while providing the best possible customer service, Lee said.

The second session is the Off Premise training, which is scheduled for Wednesday, Mar. 4, from 8:45 a.m. to noon at the Oakland Town Hall. This session will address the sale of alcohol at grocery stores, liquor stores, and convenience stores. Clerks will learn to prevent illegal alcohol sales to underage or intoxicated patrons.

To register for a class, or for more information, persons may call TIPS trainer Fred Herath at 301-334-8115. Registration is limited to 20 students per class.

Although Maryland law requires only one person per establishment to hold current alcohol awareness certification, having more employees certified offers other possible benefits, including insurance discounts, a "reasonable efforts defense" in lawsuits, and enhancement of the establishment's public image, Lee explained.

In Michigan, an establishment was caught in a sting operation and faced a stiff penalty. Before going to court, the manager arranged for TIPS training for all of her employees. When the judge was informed that the employees had received TIPS training, he waived the server's fine and placed the establishment on probation for six months, she added.

The Garrett County Highway Safety Program is sponsored by the Maryland Institute for Emergency Medical Services, Region I Office, through special funds from the Maryland State Highway Administration.

Smart Growth

whom were from the western regional office of the state's Office of Planning in Cumberland, stressed that Smart Growth is an evolving process. Their words described a program that will develop over time as it is refined and adapted to the needs and wishes of local communities, counties and regions who will be tailoring the way they use the legislation to fit their circumstances. "Smart Growth is a local decision-making process," commented Al Feldstein, of the western region office of the Maryland Office of Planning, "and in no way is an attempt to impose state will over localities."

In Garrett County, if gauged by Tuesday's presentation and the animated discussion that followed, which appeared to represent views from several differing points on the development/conservation spectrum, Smart Growth could have a definite impact on local planning affairs in the future; and, if Tuesday's audience was an accurate representation, the implementation of Smart Growth will draw a good deal of citizen discussion and participation at the local level.

At the local meeting both sides of the Smart Growth coin were scrutinized as the two main topics of discussion involved Priority Funding Areas (PFAs), which would be eligible to receive state monies to spur development, and the Rural Legacy Program, which makes state money available to preserve land through conservation easements or the outright purchase of land.

Priority Funding Areas

PFAs are locations where state and local governments want to target their efforts to encourage and support economic growth. These targeted growth areas are designated by local and county governments, and, if they meet Smart Growth criteria for intended use, water and sewer service, and residential density, these areas will receive priority funding from the state over other projects.

"How does Smart Growth apply to Garrett County rather than a more rapidly growing county?" an audience member asked Frece.

"Outside of the county's seven municipalities (Oakland, Mtn. Lake Park, Deer Park, Kitzmiller, Accident, Friendsville, and Grantsville), which are automatically established as funding areas," Frece replied, "any other designated projects would have to meet Smart Growth criteria to be eligible for state funding assistance as a Priority Funding Area."

Municipalities are automatically established as PFAs by the Smart Growth Act, and proposed development projects within municipality limits will automatically be eligible for state funding. Other than in those instances, growth related projects would have to be designated by the county and comply with state criteria. Development outside designated PFAs may still occur, but — except for narrowly defined exceptions — those areas will not receive state funding for growth-related projects.

"Garrett County's Comprehensive County Master Plan is in good shape for getting PFA designation for existing and proposed industrial areas," Al Feldstein of the western regional planning office commented after the meeting. "We've worked closely with Garrett County planning director John Nelson to help the plan comply with the visions of the state's Economic Growth, Resource Protection, and Planning Act of 1992, which forms the basis for Smart Growth," he said.

The 1992 Growth Act that Feldstein referred to outlines seven visions for Maryland's future, the first three of which guide the location of future growth: Concentrate development in suitable areas; protect sensitive areas; and in rural areas, direct growth to existing population centers and protect resource areas.

"October 1 is the cutoff date for state funding of projects not designated as PFAs," Frece said. "After that date, development projects that do not meet Smart Growth criteria will not be eligible to receive state funding assistance."

Rural Legacy Program

The Rural Legacy Program is a component of Smart Growth that will provide state funding to permanently protect rural landscapes through the purchase of land or conservation easements from landowners. "Rural Legacy is a 'community-up' program," Frece stated, "that must be initiated and supported by local governments. There will be no government condemnation to acquire Rural Legacy lands.

"Rural Legacy is intended to save the best examples of Maryland's landscapes permanently," Frece continued. "Landowners would get paid a fee per acre for conservation easements, agreeing that the land will not be developed."

David Moe, co-president of the county's Chamber of Commerce/Promotion Council alliance, asked several questions of interest to local landowners. "We don't know if this is going to be a one-time payment or a yearly royalty," Frece replied when Moe asked how the payments would be made. "That's still being worked out, and actually yesterday (Monday) was the first meeting of the state's Rural Legacy Advisory Committee." Moe also asked if any Garrett County residents were on that board, to which the answer is no.

"The first review of Rural Legacy applications will be conducted Friday (tomorrow)," Frece said, "and they expect that between 16 and 20 Rural Legacy applications will have been submitted by then, which is the cutoff date for this year's program. We anticipate the first approved areas to be announced this summer. After that, the Advisory Committee will be reviewing applications and granting approvals annually, probably on the same schedule," he stated.

"$29 million will be spent this year on buying Rural Legacy easements and land," Frece continued, "and the law earmarks at least $71 million and possibly up to $140 million over the next five years. By the year 2011 we project that 200,000 acres across the state will be preserved through the Rural Legacy program."

An application to designate a Rural Legacy area must be submitted to the program by a county government or a land trust with the approval of any affected local government, and nearby municipalities are also given the opportunity to review and comment on a proposed Rural Legacy area.

"Rural Legacy supplements the existing AgLand Preservation Program," county planning director John Nelson commented before the meeting. "It can encompass any land that has a natural resource value, not just agricultural land. The county is required to identify areas that will are appropriate for the program, and we would try to do it on a large-scale easement proposal, where many properties are adjacent to one another. For example, if farm preservation were a target, we would try to encourage all contiguous property owners to join the easement proposal in order to preserve a wide area of land. It will be a while before we can put together such a program locally though," Nelson allowed.

Transportation Issue

The evening included several references to new road construction. Although Frece at one point said that "interstate highways cause sprawl," he qualified his remark when he said that "transportation is the driver of development. The Planning Office is looking more closely at road construction projects to see how they fit in with Smart Growth, but it's still up to local governments to decide what growth they will allow in regard to and relationship to highways.

"It's obvious that we need to look at new ways to do things," Frece's commentary continued. "Transportation Secretary Winstead has said it important to look at new ways to make existing transportation and highways be fully utilized."

Moe asked point-blank, "Is there anything in Smart Growth legislation that would allow the state to prohibit construction of a new highway?" Frece answered directly, "No."

Resources

"You are a very informed group with a lot of good insights," Nancy Ancel of the state planning office told the audience at the conclusion of the evening. "You've helped the dialogue process evolve along." All the planning officials present, including Frece, Ancel, Feldstein, and Nelson, encouraged interested persons to continue their education on the legislation.

"Stop by the planning office in the courthouse and get a copy of the county's Comprehensive Plan," Nelson said. "It's available for all citizens to review."

JWCC PRESENTS DONATIONS — The Junior Women's Civic Club (JWCC) recently made monetary donations to two local emergency rescue organizations, namely the Oakland Volunteer Fire Department and the Southern Garrett County Rescue Squad. Brenda Shaffer, project chairperson, is shown in both pictures as she presents a check to Fred Callis, above, president of the OVFD, and Dave Turney, below, representing the rescue squad. The club holds several fund-raising activities throughout the year to raise money for a variety of charities. Its biggest event, the Dance for Romance, is slated for Valentine's Day (Saturday, Feb. 14). The proceeds from the annual event this year will benefit Our Town Theatre and The Republican-Newspaper's Warm the Children Fund. The band Spektra will provide music from 9 p.m. until 1 a.m., and a cash bar will be available. Tickets are now available from any JWCC member. More information will be published about the event as it nears.

private properties. The Garrett County Commissioners last December signed on to the Potomac River as the deadline neared. I doubt these men knew what they were signing, because there is no legal authority for the program, nor is it funded. Money will have to be taken from other federal programs. I think the commissioners only saw dollar signs dancing in their heads. At least a broken clock is correct twice in a 24-hour period.

Audubon Bird Count Results In; Top Ten Listed

The National Audubon Society's Christmas Bird Count (CBC) results have been released. A Garrett County coordinator, Connie Skipper, termed the local effort "a success."

Listed among the unusual finds were double-crested cormorants, the first ever counted in the county. Four bald eagles were spotted. "Amazing!" Skipper commented. The red-bellied woodpecker count doubled from 6 last year to 12 this year.

The top 10 in numbers of individuals were as follows: American crow, 2,852; mallard, 657; American coot, 525; Canada goose, 491; black-capped chickadee, 211; European starling, 203; slate-colored junco, 162; ruddy duck, 114; mourning dove, 108; and pine siskin, 106.

Weather offered no obstacle to the counters, but finding birds was a challenge. "Though we were blessed with great weather, the birds seemed rather difficult to find," Skipper said. "Nevertheless, we had the third highest species total of the past 12 years," she added. The total individuals counted was 6,434.

Volunteer bird counters were grouped as field observers or feeder watchers. They performed their chosen tasks outdoors or from their living rooms.

Field observers Kevin Dodge, Ken Bauer, Courtney Englar, Jan Janssen, Daryl Michael, Jeff Opel, Fran Pope, Judy Sconyers, and Connie Skipper contributed 51 3/4 hours and 317.5 party miles to counting birds.

Feeder watchers Dessie Bowman, Harold and Frances Hoecker, Edith Jack, Don and Carol Moss, Cheryl Newcomb, Jesse and Barbara Skipper, Kathryn Speicher, and Sallie Thayer contributed 22¼ hours counting birds at their feeders.

Financial Aid Workshop Set For February 7

A financial aid workshop for prospective college students interested in health careers, and their parents, will be held at the Western Maryland Area Health Education Center at 11 Columbia St., Cumberland, on Saturday, Feb. 7, from 10 a.m. until noon.

Financial aid representatives from local colleges will assist participants in filling out the Free Application for Federal Student Aid form, the first step in applying for college financial aid.

Independent students should bring a copy of their own and, if married, their spouse's 1997 federal tax returns. Dependent students should bring their own and their parents' or guardians' 1997 federal tax returns. If tax returns are not available, bring the most accurate estimates of income for 1997.

The workshop is co-sponsored by the Nursing Education Opportunities Program and the Central Appalachian Health Opportunity Network, both funded by the Bureau of Health Professions and coordinated by the Western Maryland AHEC.

Refreshments and financial aid materials will be provided. In the event of inclement weather, the workshop will be postponed until Saturday, Feb. 21.

For additional information or to register, persons may call Beth Eubanks at 301-777-9150, ext. 141, by Feb. 5.

Eastern Star Chapter Meets

The Oakland chapter Order of the Eastern Star met recently at the Paul B. Naylor Masonic Temple. Ted Raynovich III, Worthy Patron, called the meeting to order and all joined in the Pledge of Allegiance.

Worthy Matron Thelma Henshaw opened with a reading titled "God is Our Guide." Henshaw then greeted Past Matrons, Past Patrons, officers, members of the chapter and Brothers holding Masonic honors, Ted Raynovich, Delmar Sliger, and Reaford Purbaugh. Substitutes and side liners were honored. Henshaw's closing was titled "Reflections."

The next meeting will be Tuesday, Feb 3, at which time elections for officers will be held.

Bird Count Set For February 7

A mid-winter bird count will be held in Garrett County on Saturday, Feb. 7, during the entire 24-hour period (midnight to midnight), according to Fran Pope, count coordinator for the Maryland Ornithological Society.

Birds may be counted in any area of Garrett County, including at bird feeders. Interested persons are welcome to participate during any portion of the count period. They should first contact Pope (301-334-4908) or Connie Skipper (301-387-5227) to advise of the area of the county they intend to count, as well as to receive instructions for counting.

Evergreen

Some might describe winter as a barren season. Most of our trees, such a short time ago clothed in greenery, stand naked. All of the gorgeous gardens of summer have been cut down by the first frost. But wait…there are the evergreens.

Though the snow may pile deep and the blizzard winds blow frigid, the evergreens flaunt their vibrant color, perhaps more beautiful even than in the summer when there is so much competition. They stand regally, some with bright red and orange berries…others with sweeping branches which seem to reach out to enfold us. God must have planned it so.

Perhaps the evergreen can be an inspiration to us. When life leaves us cold, we can look to God.

Worship this week and remember the evergreen.

THE BIBLE SPEAKS
BY LAWRENCE W. ALTHOUSE

PLEASE CONFIRM!
February 1, 1998

Background Scripture:
2 Peter
Devotional Reading:
2 Peter 1:16-21

We had been to China and planned to stopover a few days in England on the way back to Dallas. Before leaving Dallas, I had called to book a country hotel about 25 miles from London's Gatwick Airport. When we got there, exhausted after a long flight and wandering the countryside trying to find the hotel, we were shocked to hear the receptionist tell us: "I'm sorry, Mr. Althouse, your reservation is for tomorrow night, not tonight. Unfortunately, we are fully booked tonight!"

This experience confirmed for me the wisdom of confirming in writing arrangements made orally. It is one of the best ways to avoid misunderstanding, disagreement and disappointment. Often, after an important conversation, I will write a letter or memo that says, "If I understood correctly from our conversation, you expect me to do the following..." Sometimes the reply tells me that we did not really understand each other.

"Confirm" has various meanings which are quite related: to establish the truth or accuracy of something, to acknowledge with definite assurance, to ratify, to make firm or more firm, and to corroborate. I believe the writer of 2 Peter had all of these meanings in mind: "Therefore, brethren, be the more zealous to confirm your call and election, for if you do this you will never fall..." (1:10-italics mine).

OFFER & ACCEPTANCE

Although the person and work of God can never be reduced to a formula, the Bible seems consistent in representing the call of God as a process in which God does the calling, but we must confirm our acceptance of that call. I remember from my college classes in business law that to every contract there must be "offer" and "acceptance." If an offer is made but not accepted in some way—a word, an action—there is no contract.

So it is in our relationships with God. God makes the offer; you and I must respond with the acceptance. Without our confirmation that we have accepted the grace of God, the call of God, the salvation of God, to put it in simplistic terms, there's no deal!

I'm sure that this is nothing you don't already know. I know it, too, but I sometimes forget it. So 2 Peter is saying to his readers: "Therefore I intend always to remind you of these things, though you know them and are established in the truth that you have. I think it right, as long as I am in this body, to arouse you by way of reminder..." (1:12,13).

ARE YOU CONSISTENT?

I am currently reading a book about the Apostle Paul. The author questions the authenticity of Peter's experience (Acts 10) with Simon the Tanner at Joppa because later, Paul was critical of Peter for avoiding eating with gentile Christians. The author says that if Peter had had this revelation about gentiles from God in Acts 10, he would not have acted as reported in Galatians 2. Admittedly Peter in Galatians 2 is not consistent with Peter in Acts 10. But where does it say that people always (even usually) have to act consistently?

I do not and I rather imagine that you do not either. I know better and try to live by what I believe, but there are times when I lapse back into behavior which is not consistent with the best I know. Does that not happen to you, too? Would you agree that our problem is not in knowing what to do, but in consistently doing what we know to be true? So, like those to whom 2 Peter is addressed, we need to be reminded of what we already know.

I believe it was Emmet Fox who wrote about a man who was offering courses in spirituality—a beginner's course and an advanced course. Everyone signed up for the advanced course. What the man eventually told his students was that there was really no difference between the two courses. The beginner's course was based upon the principles of a spiritual life and the advanced course was about putting into practice the principles of the beginner's course.

We do not need the revelation of any more "secrets" or "advanced courses" in following Jesus Christ. We know all the basics. What we need to do is simply confirm God's call by putting those basics into practice.

Jennifer Jason Leigh

An antique writing desk helps a young computer games designer reach across time to his soul mate in The Love Letter, a romantic Hallmark Hall of Fame drama premiering Sunday, Feb. 1, on CBS.

Campbell Scott (Longtime Companion) stars as Scotty Corrigan, who is drawn to the desk in an antiques store while his bride-to-be (Daphne Ashbrook) is shopping for her wedding gown. After taking it home, Scotty finds a letter inside the desk from Lizzie Whitcomb (Jennifer Jason Leigh), a woman who lived during the Civil War.

"Basically, I'm a modern guy who begins to carry on a love affair with a woman living in the Civil War times," Scott says of his role. "Through a mystical kind of letter writing, we fall in love, at least spiritually, although each of us is in a relationship with other people in our respective ages. And it gets even more complicated.

"This antique desk ... belonged to (Lizzie), and that becomes a kind of portal. There's an old letter that she wrote in (the desk) and I jokingly write a letter back and put it in the desk – and it's gone all of a sudden."

Based on a fantasy novel by Jack Finney (The Body Snatchers), The Love Letter may strike a familiar chord with romance-minded moviegoers who recall an earlier film with Christopher Reeve and Jane Seymour called Somewhere in Time.

"People I've been talking to keep mentioning (this) movie, which I've never seen, but (also is) a kind of love story across the ages," Scott says. "But in (Love Letter) there is no actual physical transportation to another time – although I do appear in both time frames through a (surprise) plot twist."

The TV movie reunites Scott with Leigh, his co-star in Mrs. Parker and the Vicious Circle.

Leigh has received a bad rap in the press for being obsessive in preparing for her roles, but Scott says those stories are untrue.

"People always ask me that question, and I have never seen anything farther from the truth in my life," he says. "When I found out she was cast in this, I thought, 'Oh, thank God!' She is always an absolute delight to work with. I know everyone always says that but, in fact, it's true. Sure, she researches the hell out of things, but she doesn't hit anyone over the head with it.

"Hey, I'm freeloading on Jennifer's research. Frankly, I use it. She does all the work, I ask her questions, and I feel I know as much as I need to know about a period."

There are tear-jerking moments in this Hall of Fame production, but Scott says the story has a very positive message.

"I like the fact that Scotty ultimately discovers that it is possible to break free, to escape from what may seem inevitable, like heading into a marriage that you know deep in your heart just won't work," the actor says.

"If I had to pick one word to describe what The Love Letter is about ... that word would be hope. You can find something wonderful out there if you'll just open up your heart and mind to the possibilities of love."

Kyle Chandler

Q: Please tell me about Kyle Chandler of Early Edition. Where may I write to him? –Beth via e-mail.

A: Chandler, 31, was born in Buffalo, N.Y., and spent his early childhood in a Chicago suburb before moving with his family to tiny Loganville, Ga. In 1988, while majoring in drama at the University of Georgia, Chandler met a network talent scout who put him under contract.

The young actor made his TV series debut as Pvt. William Griner in Tour of Duty, followed by work in TV movies such as Home Fires Burning, Quiet Victory: The Charlie Wedemeyer Story, Unconquered and the miniseries Heaven & Hell: North & South, Part III.

Prior to Edition, Chandler probably was best known to most viewers for his role as Jeff Metcalf in Homefront. He also won the Outer Critics Circle Award for his Broadway debut in the classic drama Picnic.

He and his wife, Katherine, a TV writer, live in Los Angeles with their baby daughter.

Write to him c/o his show at CBS Inc., 7800 Beverly Blvd., Los Angeles, CA 90036.

Q: I distinctly remember, back when The Silence of the Lambs was still in theaters, seeing a movie on TV that was about serial killer Hannibal Lecter and his killing spree before he was captured. I believe the title may have had "Dragon" in it. Possibly it was a British film. Am I imagining this? –Mike J. Kelly, Pinellas Park, Fla.

A: Brian Cox played the cannibalistic doctor in Manhunter, a 1986 thriller directed by Michael Mann and starring William L. Petersen. The movie was based on Thomas Harris' pre-Silence thriller called Red Dragon, and the movie's alternate title is Red Dragon: The Pursuit of Hannibal Lecter.

Q: Can you please tell me the name of a movie starring Burl Ives as a genie? Tony Randall also was in it. –Don Pouncey, Montgomery, Ala.

A: The Brass Bottle (1964).

Q: Apart from his appearance as Sipowicz's son on NYPD Blue, I haven't seen Peter DeLuise since 21 Jump Street. Not even the Internet can find him. What has he been doing? –Rita Huff, Muskogee, Okla.

A: First, that was brother Michael DeLuise of Brooklyn South, not Peter, playing Andy Sipowicz Jr.

Peter has worked steadily since 21 Jump Street, including a high-profile gig on SeaQuest DSV. He has two movies coming out in 1998. One of them, Between the Sheets, was written by Peter, directed by Michael and stars the rest of the DeLuise family as well.

"School To Career" Graduates One Step Closer To Their Future

by Charlene B. Pullias

Garrett Community College and PIVOT (Partners In Valuable Ongoing Training), in conjunction with the State of Maryland's "School to Career" Program, recently graduated its first Garrett County participants. The pilot program is aimed at preparing high school seniors to successfully compete in today's job market.

Central to the program's goals is the commitment that students not only find employment that in some way fosters their life's goals but that they also work productively and confidently once employment is gained. The program provides knowledge of how a business works, what is expected of an employee, good customer relations practices, and practical work experience. Hands-on job experience is provided by placing each student with a volunteer employer. Students are trained and evaluated during a 90-day program period.

As usual in an academic situation, final exams marked the end of classes. Not so usual was a round table discussion held with the students for their evaluation of the program. Sandy Major of GCC's Small Business Development Center conducted the interviews. Questions included what the students liked and disliked about the program, how they thought it could be improved, and especially what impact the program had on their plans for the future.

Students gave the program high marks, with particular enthusiasm shown for guest speakers from the local business community. "We learned a lot from the speakers," said student Steve Shiflett. Each speaker gave the class a "reality check," a view from someone who knows what being in business is really like. Input from the students was solicited as well, and it was agreed that more speakers would be better. They also commented that more representation would be helpful from the manufacturing field, the travel industry, and a larger variety of franchise businesses.

Further discussions about the worksites gave each of the students a chance to elaborate on what they had learned and what benefits they had received from the experience.

Jason Christensen continued his employment with Traders' Cafe, although his future plans are to enter search and rescue/EMT services. "This class helped me deal with people," he stated.

Saretha Park chose to work in the elementary school system with children in first, second, and fourth grades. Her job included working one on one with teachers and children, substituting under supervision, paper work, tutoring, almost all phases of teaching. "In this job you can't have an 'attitude' at work. You have to be able to handle stress and you always have to be positive." Sandi Flockhart, class instructor, indicated that Park was not sure in the beginning if this was what she wanted to do but that she now plans to start her elementary education studies at GCC after graduation. "I helped someone new every day with a problem and it was good. It made me feel so good about myself," Park said.

Steve Shiflett worked in the kitchen at Will O'The Wisp. "I really like where I was; it was fun, I wanted to go every day," he said. "I'm going to be a chef. The job helped me learn how a kitchen really works." Shiflett has been accepted to the Pennsylvania Culinary School for future study in his chosen field.

THE INAUGURAL CLASS OF THE LOCAL "SCHOOL TO CAREER" PROGRAM, sponsored by Garrett Community College and Partnerships In Valuable Onsite Training (PIVOT), recently graduated from the program designed to help these Garrett County high school seniors transition into the workplace by combining 90 days of on-the-job training with one semester of classroom job-related instruction. In the first row, left to right, in the above photo are Jessica Getson, Virginia Kovach, Darla Folk, and Saretha Park. Standing are Michel Kipp, Steve Shiflett, Jeremy Warnick, Jason Christensen, and Darrick Dove. Below, Park, Getson, Shiflett, and Dove tackle cooperative team building skills, a must in any workplace, as they balance together on a single block beneath their eight feet. The exercise requires planning, trust, and good communication skills, each of which will be critical in their future work settings.

Darrick Dove completed his internship at Naylor's Hardware. "I want to be a blacksmith," he said, "[and] this class helped me learn about how to run a business and a lot of common sense things about how to work with customers."

Michel Kipp has been working at Casselman's Bakery for almost three years and was able to gain improved knowledge of how to interact more fully with her customers. "How are you?" and friendly conversation is much better than "just handing them their stuff and saying so long," according to Michel. "It makes my job go better, too."

Darla Folk worked at Cobblestone Alley. Folk said she felt the job gave her a chance to exercise persuasion, which would come in handy while teaching kindergarten, her chosen career. "I volunteer and it's already helped me to deal positively with other teachers," she stated.

Virginia Kovach said she stretched both personal and work experience boundaries at her job with Action Hardware. "The business has over 5,000 items. People come in and they just want this little gadget they have in their hand; customer service was hard at first. I was really afraid. I broke into a sweat when someone came in the door. Now I've gotten so I recoguize the parts and I learned measurements," she said. Smiling broadly, she added that "this experience will help me in business, I used to be shy before this."

Jermey Warnick said that she believed the experience helped her learn how to cope with the stresses involved when she makes the move from the classroom to the world of work. "You smile, act friendly, and help," she observed, speaking of her assignment as an office assistant at Hobby House Press.

As a number of local workplaces rely a portion of their business from part-time residents and visitors to the county, the class was asked how they feel, since they've been through this educational process, about all the tourists that come into the area. "They bring us money, new ideas, and opportunities for other business," Park said. "They [help] give us jobs" said Shiflett, "and our standard of living is made better." The class agreed that a positive attitude is catching.

"I have seen each and everyone of them grow," Flockhart commented about the class members. "Their ability as individuals is unsurpassable as long as they apply themselves. We've grown close during the class, and I'm going to miss each and every one of them," she said.

"I agree with Sandi, I think they've grown, and I think they've learned things and that was our whole purpose," said Kent Huber, a School to Career resource teacher. "Many of them will be facing major changes very soon, a lot sooner than they'd like, I'm sure. It's a tough age."

The School to Career staff wishes this group of young adults well and hopes that perhaps this program has made the journey a little less tough.

Goldstein Warns About Unclaimed Funds Postcards

"Every now and then people come up with different plans to make money, and some of the recent ones invoive a website number and postcards asking people to send money for information about unclaimed funds," says Maryland State Comptroller Louis L. Goldstein.

A website called "find cash.com" charges $10 for details on unclaimed funds and asks persons to call a chargeable "900" number for more information.

"You can get the same information and more without paying anything. You can check the most recently reported unclaimed funds listing for Maryland right on your own computer through the comptroller's website, www.comp.state.md.us," Goldstein said. "Our website is also linked to the National Association of Unclaimed Property Administrators and through it to other states. There is absolutely no charge to check these websites."

The comptroller also noted that people in various areas of the state are receiving postcards, encouraging them to send a $10 check "for instructions and your Unclaimed Money Collection Form." The postcards, which come from a Bohemia, N.Y., firm called Unclaimed Assets, have appeared in the Baltimore metropolitan area and other areas of the state.

"We've seen these mass mailings from the same company before," Goldstein said. "Generally, all you get for your $10 is a listing of unclaimed property offices in the 50 states and a generic form."

Residents trying to find out if they are due any unclaimed money can call the State Comptroller's Unclaimed Property Section at 410-767-1700 from Central Maryland or 1-800-782-7383 from elsewhere. The comptroller's office will provide the listing of other states' offices and check Maryland's files for you, for free.

"We have records on about 260,000 accounts valued at approximately $92 million," Goldstein said. "Financial institutions, insurance companies, and corporations are required to report bank accounts, wages, insurance benefits, security deposits, stock dividends, contents of safety deposit boxes, and other funds if they remain unclaimed for five years or more. Maryland's law is custodial, meaning that there is no statute of limitations on claiming the funds."

The comptroller's office honored 6,560 claims totaling $9,966,054 during calendar year 1997. The average claim was $1,519.

Round Two For Soup and Story Event Slated

A second evening of soup and stories with Gary Yoder and Otto Ross will be held Monday, Feb. 2, 7 p.m.

The Trader's Landing Café will again host the event, which is sponsored by the American Association of University Women, Garrett Branch.

Dr. Gail Herman, coordinator of the get-together, said that the last soup and story night was such a success that the AAUW decided to repeat the event on Groundhog Day. "Yoder was such a hit that the AAUW decided to bring him back for an encore of new stories," Herman noted.

Yoder, an administrator for the Department Natural Resources, has participated in a number of local story telling events and is scheduled to perform in the near future at Penn Alps in Grantsville and in Cresaptown for the Elks' Vietnam memorial fund-raiser.

Yoder's performance at Trader's Landing Cafe on Feb. 2 will feature both fanciful and factual characters, animals, events, and settings. "What is surprising is how much of his repertoire enables listeners to recall their own stories," Herman commented.

Otto Ross, a math teacher in Allegany County and a local guitar instructor, plays Appalachian music for audiences throughout Western Maryland. He is the husband of story teller Katie Ross.

After the program there will be an open mike session for spontaneous story telling by members of the audience.

The menu for the evening consists of French onion soup in baked bread and salad. The cost of the Soup and Story Night is $12.50. To make reservations persons may call 301-387-7216. For additional information persons may call 301-387-9199.

Trader's Landing Café is located at Deep Creek Lake south of the Route 219 bridge.

THE ACCIDENT COMMUNITY PLANNING GROUP (CPG) Christmas celebration last month featured a visit by the Santa Claus himself, in the person of Ron Rounds, shown above with Evelyn Doerr and her great grandson, Trenton Friend. This was the first time ever that Doerr had sat in Santa's lap, and Friend, the son of Accident CPG president Diane Friend and her husband Bill, helped her tell Santa what she wanted for Christmas. Below, left to right, Garrett County Health Department outreach worker Donna Knox, who works in conjunction with the Accident CPG, is shown with Jeff Liller, his daughter Beretta, and his wife Darla. The Lillers were winners of the Christmas turkey and fixings dinner. The event, held at the town's volunteer fire department hall, is just one of the alternative activities that area CPGs, which work closely with AmeriCorps and health department outreach workers, provide alternative activities for adults and youth to help prevent alcohol, tobacco, and drug use. Persons or organizations interested in learning about CPG activities in their area, or in applying for funding to sponsor events, may contact AmeriCorps or the health department outreach office at 301-334-8122.

Q. While cleaning out my father's house, I found a really old lighter. It is made of silver-colored metal and shaped like a rectangle with rounded corners. A bottom on the side moves a metal disk on top to strike the flame. It is engraved "Magic Pocket Lamp." I can't read anything else on it. Do you have any information?

A. Your pocket lighter was made about 1892 by the Magic introduction Co. of New York City. The spinning metal disk on top was covered with pyrite. An iron bar would press against it, creating a spark that would light the wick.

Your lighter is worth about $200.

Q. My friend purchased some tubular steel furniture. She says it was made by Thonet. I thought he just made bentwood furniture. Who's right?

A. Michael Thonet started making bentwood furniture in Germany in 1830. He moved to Vienna in 1842. In 1850, he started making bentwood chairs for commercial use.

His five sons joined the company, and by 1856, it became known as Gebruder Thonet. Michael Thonet died in 1871.

In 1923, the company joined others to form Thonet-Kohn-Mundus, which began making tubular steel furniture. By 1940, the company moved its headquarters to the United States.

Thonet, which is still in business, recently reissued some of its classic bentwood and tubular-steel furniture.

Home Tips

GARDEN TIP — My wife asked me to begin adding eggshells to the coffee grounds we save to work into our garden as a soil supplement in addition to reducing our garbage volume. I dry the shells on a towel and then grind them in our electric coffee grinder.

The bonus in the deal is that the shells do an excellent job of cleaning the coffee grinder. Jack D., Ames, Iowa

ON THE ROAD — I have a suggestion for people who travel a lot. We have made a checklist for everything that we need to do before we leave our home for a period of time — turn down the refrigerator, notify the paperboy, notify the post office, adjust the thermostat, etc.

If you have a tendency to forget things, it helps to follow a checklist. Then you will know that everything has been taken care of. Rita L., Ravenna, Ohio

COOL IT — I needed an extra cooling rack for cakes recently. In desperation, I used the burner grate from my gas range. It worked great! Linda V., Wolfe City, Texas

IN THE NEWS — When my elderly mother had difficulty handling large sections of the newspaper, she would split the section down the fold and pick up one page at a time.

This way, she could keep up with the news without struggling. Kathy W., Sherburn, Minn.

RECYCLE — Hold onto your old cotton place mats. Sew ribbon, lace or hem binding (anything that will do the trick) on each side long enough to make a bow.

You've made a pretty apron for yourself or to bring when invited to dinner. Hilda K., Batavia, Ill.

LENA HORNE: LADY LIVED THE BLUES

As a beautiful young entertainer, Lena Horne encountered discrimination everywhere. When she made movies, her musical scenes were designed to be extraneous so they could be cut for Southern audiences. The first pinup for black GIs, she had to entertain white soldiers and even German POWs before black troops.

According to February's Biography magazine, life made Horne one tough lady. Her divorced mother Edna moved often, and frequently left her with strangers. Some beat her. At 16, Horne quit school to work at Harlem's Cotton Club. By 20, she'd married Louis Jones and given birth to Gail. While Gail was still an infant, an agent who'd seen Horne at the Cotton Club offered her a part in a movie. More movies and son Teddy soon followed. Empowered, she divorced her controlling husband who nonetheless took custody of Teddy.

With Gail, Horne went to Hollywood and was "discovered" by MGM. She demanded a contract guaranteeing dignified roles. Still, MGM wanted her to look darker on screen. Max Factor invented "Little Egyptian" makeup just for her. When she had trouble getting the right emotion in "Stormy Weather," Cab Calloway whispered, "Think about your own problems." It did the trick.

Then Horne did the unthinkable for the '40s and married Lennie Hayton, a white musical arranger. She was bombarded with hate mail, some so vicious the authorities had to be alerted. Lennie's death of heart failure in 1971, three years after Teddy's death at 28 of kidney failure, devastated Horne, who temporarily went into seclusion. In 1981, she appeared in over 300 sold-out shows in New York. After undergoing pacemaker surgery in the early '90s, she went on, at 76, to deliver a brilliant 40-minute set at Lincoln Center. Now in her 80s, she's semi-retired.

Columnist Liz Smith wrote, "She survived, endured and ultimately triumphed" — despite all the stormy weather.

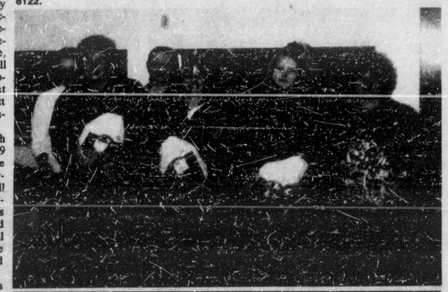
Forestry Careers Awareness Week Seeks Applicants

The Maryland Association of Forest Conservancy District Boards, in conjunction with the Maryland Department of Natural Resources Forest, Wildlife, and Heritage Service, will sponsor a one-week program, July 27 to July 31, at Camp Hickory, Garrett County Schools' Environmental Education Center.

The program is for high students from grades 9 through 12 from across the state. Each of the 24 forestry boards in the state will select two students to attend the program. The costs of the program are covered by sponsorships from local businesses. It costs the students nothing to attend the program.

Garrett County students who are interested in pursuing a career in conservation or natural resources and in attending the program should contact their high school guidance counselor or the Maryland Forest Service office at Mt. Nebo, 301-334-3296, for more information and an application. The application deadline is April 10.



"Tree-Mendous Maryland" Program Available To All

One of the most popular programs offered by the Department of Natural Resources (DNR), Forest Service, has been the community public land planting program, "Tree-Mendous Maryland." Developed in 1989, the program provides a way for citizens and businesses to participate in the DNR's reforestation efforts.

Tree-Mendous Maryland provides training for volunteers on the proper planting and care of trees and helps to educate the community on the management of their urban tree resource. Trees and shrubs are provided at low cost for these plantings on public lands.

Communities or neighborhood associations can order Tree-mendous containerized or balled and burlapped trees and shrubs for planting on community public open space. To date, over 200 communities in Maryland have participated in the program. All trees and shrubs purchased through this program must be planted on commonly held areas such as parks, community open spaces, road easements, etc.

There has been so much interest in the community public land tree planting program that the Maryland Community Forest Council has sponsored a program called Maryland PLANT Community (People Loving And Nurturing Trees) to recognize the communities that are participating in the program. For further information on this program, interested persons may contact the Forest Service's Mt. Nebo Work Center at 301-334-3296.

Guidelines For Winter Debris Burning Noted

Landowners outside incorporated towns who are interested in burning brush and debris should take advantage of the winter weather to carry out such tasks, according to the local State Forest Service office of the Department of the Natural Resources (DNR). The Open Air Burning Regulations, Title 8, Department of Natural Resources, Subtitle 07, Maryland Forest Service, states, "Burning may occur at anytime when the ground is covered with snow, if all other requirements are met."

The open air burning regulations apply to activities in woodland and within 200 feet of woodland, or a flammable material that could carry fire, to the woodland. There should be a firebreak at least 10 feet wide around the fire and adequate personnel and equipment present to control the fire. The fire should be out cold before all personnel leave the scene.

Landowners wishing to conduct open air burning while the ground is covered with snow are still required to obtain a burning permit from the Garrett County Health Department. These permits can be obtained by simply contacting the health department at 301-334-8980, Monday through Friday, 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

Once this permit has been obtained, the landowner should contact Garrett Central Alarm at its non-emergency number, 301-334-1929, prior to burning. This will hopefully reduce the chances of one of the local fire companies being called out on a false alarm.

Keystone Lime Co. Sole Bidder For Rt. 40 Work In Penn.

The Pennsylvania Department of Transportation (PennDOT) recently announced that bids have been opened in Harrisburg, Pa., for a project to resurface a 6.2-mile section of Route 40 in Somerset County between the Maryland state line, just west of Pigs Ear Road in Garrett County, and the Fayette County line in western Pennsylvania.

"Keystone Lime Company Inc. of Springs, Penn., was the only contractor to bid for the project, submitting a bid of $2,888,042," a PennDOT release stated. Earl Neiderniser, district engineer for PennDOT's District 9 in Hollidaysburg, Pa., said the bid will now be reviewed for completeness and accuracy before awarding the contract.

"If all of the items of the contract are in order, PennDOT could issue a contract award by late February," Neiderhiser said. "The project is expected to get underway in mid-March with completion anticipated for late October.

Funding for the resurfacing project will be carried out with 80 percent federal and 20 percent Pennsylvania state monies.

Agency Available To Respond To Srs.' Questions

Garrett County Community Action Committee's Area Agency on Aging (AAA) offers the Senior Information and Assistance Program to help direct senior citizens and their caregivers to the appropriate services and benefits which will help them meet their individual needs. The program serves as the primary point of entry for seniors and their caregivers seeking information. Other services include: referrals, direct assistance in the completion of forms/applications, and case management when needed.

"There are numerous programs, services, and benefits which can assist senior citizens to remain in the community and in their own home," stated an agency spokesperson. Unfortunately, most seniors and their caregivers are unaware of the programs and services and do not know how to access them. We hope to rectify this situation by educating seniors of our existence and ability to aid them through the maze of bureaucracies."

In its effort to provide easy access for seniors, regardless of where they reside, the AAA maintains three part-time offices strategically located throughout the county. Each office is open at least one day each week from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Seniors are encouraged to schedule an appointment at the office nearest them; however, walk-ins are welcome and general information may be obtained by telephone. The location, phone numbers, and days of operation for each office are: Mary Browning Senior Center, 104 E. Center St., Oakland, 301-334-9431 or toll free 1-888-877-8403, Wednesday, Friday, every other Monday; Flowery Vale Senior Center, Accident, 301-746-8824, Tuesday and every other Monday; and Grantsville Senior Center, 125 Durst Court, Grantsville, 301-895-5818, Thursday.

In addition to maintaining specific office operations, the Information & Assistance coordinator makes monthly visits to outlying nutrition sites operated by the AAA to update participants about matters that may affect them, i.e., Social Security, Medicare, etc. When absolutely necessary, staff will make a home visit to assist a frail, homebound senior.

The agency is currently working in partnership with the A Star! AmeriCorps Project to provide information & Assistance services to Garrett County seniors. AmeriCorps member Michaela Minnick is available to assist seniors as needed.

Quality Employee of the Quarter

Marshall Broadwater, Westernport, has been named the Quality Employee of the Quarter for 4th Quarter 1997 at Westvaco's Luke mill. A 21-year Luke mill employee, Marshall currently works in the Quality Assurance Department.

Marshall's conscientious performance in his department as a Quality Control Inspector—the job he has held for the last ten years—prompted his nomination and selection for the award.

He is very thorough when inspecting paper and communicates well with production personnel on paper related problems. Marshall has made several recommendations that have resulted in the ability to sell paper as first quality that would have been job lot.

In addition, the implementation of two of Marshall's recent Total Quality suggestions related to decreased sampling requirements and improved efficiency has led to significant cost savings.

Marshall is always looking for ways to improve the Quality Assurance system and to render help to production departments.

Congratulations, Marshall!

BOOK FAIR

Friendsville Elementary School will host a Pages Book Fair from Feb. 2 through Feb. 9. The fair will be open each school day from 8:15 a.m. until 3:30 p.m. and during parent/teacher conferences on Tuesday and Wednesday evenings.

"This special reading event will offer students, parents, teachers, and the community the opportunity to support literacy efforts and raise valuable funds for the Accelerated Reader Program," said Bonnie Termin, book fair chairperson. "Visitors will find a wide assortment of new books and merchandise for young readers. Hundreds of titles will be featured from more than 100 publishers and education material suppliers nationwide."

Books featured in the Pages Book Fair span a variety of reading levels, and include state and national award winners, classics, biographies, kits and activities, and an extensive selection of the best in children's literature. Titles for parents and adults will also be featured, as well as a special collection of books written and illustrated by children.

Friendsville Elementary School will use the proceeds from the book fair for its Accelerated Reading Program, according to Termin. One hundred twenty-seven students in grades 3 through 5 have read and passed over 2,350 tests on library books so far this school year, earning over 1,800 points. Profits from the fair enable the school to give the students checks when they reach point clubs, and the checks are then spent at the book fair. Book purchases by the students, in turn, enable the library to obtain additional books for the students to test on, Termin concluded.

Dairy Industry Awaiting USDA Marketing Order Reform

The dairy industry is anxiously waiting for milk market order reform to see how it will affect the bottom line. But when the massive 1,500- to 1,600-page document from Agriculture Secretary Dan Glickman hits the Federal Register, dairy producers, milk buyers and manufacturers may need help deciphering the implications for their businesses.

Dairy marketing economists told dairy industry leaders attending the American Farm Bureau Federation's annual meeting to expect the reforms to be complicated, making it difficult to determine specific impacts on producers. Speakers included Robert Cropp, Extension dairy marketing and policy specialist with the University of Wisconsin; Mark Stephenson, senior Extension associate in dairy marketing and policy with Cornell University; Hal Harris, professor of agricultural economics at Clemson University; and Ken Oison, AFBF dairy specialist.

Once the reforms are published, there will be a 60-day comment period followed by a final rule in August and a referendum in November. "Producers must realize that a 'no' vote means no orders at all and that would be potentially worse than what we have," said Stephenson. "Defeating the referendum doesn't mean going back to the old orders, because the reform process has been mandated by the Freedom to Farm Act of 1996. The upcoming 60-day comment period will be the best chance to make any changes, so it's critical to review the reforms as soon as they're published and respond."

Glickman isn't required by law to hold a referendum, but the importance of this issue has prompted him to send it to producers for a vote. If voters choose to strike down the orders, the economists said they would expect fluid pricing to drop and manufacturer prices to go up as the system moves toward blended pricing. The winners would be upper Midwest producers, fluid consumers and fluid processors. Losers would be all other milk product buyers, manufactured product consumers and manufacturing processors.

"We could survive without milk market orders, but there would be two years of massive and brutal change," said Harris. "We would lose the BFP (basic formula pricing) and that is the only thing working well now. With proper reform we give the family farm a chance to decide if they want to grow or gracefully phase out. We'll also see more institutional arrangements between producers, co-ops and manufacturers for a fixed price system."

Panelists agreed there will be a continued flattening of milk prices across the country with the exceptions of some areas such as Florida, where higher production costs will always keep supply less than demand. "We hear a lot about the differences in the mailbox price to producers after transportation, premiums and check-offs are figured into the minimum blended milk price," said Stephenson. "But in a recent conference with producers held in Florida, we looked at their detailed financial records, and they realized that there is only about $1 pricing difference from coast to coast."

Panelists encouraged dairy industry members to work together on pricing and to recognize that technological changes in transportation, shelf life and on-farm processing will affect the pricing system more than geography. "There is a reluctance to look at what's driving a modern dairy industry and remain focused on regional differences," said Cropp. "It's no secret why corn and soybean producers came out well in the Freedom to Farm Act: [it's] because they have a unified voice."

"In the long run, it doesn't matter what pricing system we use, the market forces will bring us back to a market-clearing price," said Cropp. "With our current trend of 2 to 2½ percent increase in milk production per cow per year, and only a 1 percent increase in the U.S. population, we have to look at international markets to keep the dairy industry healthy."

Help in understanding the reforms is on the way from Cornell University. Following publication in the Federal Register, a summary will be available at http://cpdmp.cornell.edu. Information will also be available through dairy specialists at land grant universities.

Report Made On Small Grain Seedings For 1998

Winter wheat planted acres in Maryland for harvest in 1998 was forecast at 225,000 acres, 5,000 acres more than last year's planting. Rye planted acres was estimated at 25,000 acres, the same as the previous year's planting.

Across the United States winter wheat seeded for 1998 is expected to total 46.6 million acres, down 4% from 1997. This will be the lowest planted acreage since 1973. About 98% of the U.S. acreage was seeded by Dec. 1. Most of the decrease is in hard red winter wheat.

Tax Tools Aimed At Reducing Farmers' Risk

Legislation that provides a new tax tool to help farmers and ranchers manage their financial risk will be introduced now that Congress has reconvened this month, a Missouri congressman announced at the American Farm Bureau Federation annual meeting in Charlotte, N.C.

Speaking as part of a panel on "Tax Strategies for Reducing Financial Risk," Rep. Kenny Hulshof (R-Mo.) said the legislation will authorize a new concept called a Farm and Ranch Risk Management Account. Under this proposal, farmers or ranchers could place a certain percentage of their income in a tax-deferred account.

Money from this account could be withdrawn at any time during a five-year period to help stabilize an individual's income during a bad year. Since it is tax-deferred, money in the FARRM account would not be taxed until removed.

"When it comes out of the account, it's taxable," Hulshof said. He asked audience members to take the idea back to their members of Congress and solicit their support.

Joining Hulshof on the panel were Alan Miller, farm management specialist with Indiana's Purdue University, and Keith Kightlinger, Extension economist with the University of Georgia. Miller and Kightlinger focused on the agriculture-related provisions of the Taxpayer Relief Act of 1997, as well as tax tools to help farmers manage their tax liability.

"The new farm bill (enacted in 1996) increases the need for reducing risk," said Miller, referring to the act's market-oriented approach. Under the act, payments to farmers are unrelated to the crops they plant, allowing greater planting flexibility. However, those payments decrease over seven years, with the strong possibility that after those seven years, payments could stop completely, he said.

Other tax strategies discussed include reducing fluctuations in taxable income through income averaging, deferrals and prepayments for supplies, as well as redistributing taxable income by paying working children for their labor and allowing the farm to take advantage of their lower tax rate.

Kightlinger discussed the specifics of the 1997 Taxpayer Relief Act, which included the reauthorization of income averaging for 1998, 1999 and 2000. Another change in the act, he said, involved a tax break for livestock sold as a result of drought. The new language changes "drought" to "weather-related" problems, Kightlinger said, and it can only be used by producers in a federal disaster area.

The act also gradually increases the health insurance deduction for the self-employed, a category which includes farmers, from 45 percent in 1998-99 to 100 percent in 2007. Hulshof said it is his goal to accelerate the increase for the deduction in his bill.

1997 Census of Agriculture

All farmers should have received the census survey forms by now. I hope you have not put them in file 13. Is the agriculture census important? YES. It is the primary source of data that decision makers use on national, state and local levels for the next five years. I have heard farmers say, "The government does not have any idea what's going on out on the farm!" That will even be more true if you do not supply them with the census information.

Frost Seeding

"Frost" seeding certain legumes into grass hay crops and pastures is a very effective method of improving a stand. Clover and birdsfoot trefoil are the most common legumes used for frost seeding. They will add protein, energy and increase forage yields in stands. Also, the legume is a supplier of nitrogen to the grasses in the stand, decreasing the need for additional nitrogen applications. The legumes may be "frost" seeded from late February through March. The seeding rates will depend upon the stand condition in the field. Generally, red clover rates will range from 4-8 lbs. per acre, white clover from 1-3 lbs. per acre and birdsfoot trefoil from 4-6 lbs. per acre. Some people have frost seeded alfalfa; however, I think it is risky in our area, considering the cost of seed. You cannot "frost" seed grasses successfully because the shape of the seed prohibits the seed from entering into good contact with the soil.

The Honey Bee Situation

The miticide called Apistan has been providing some reasonable control of the mite; however, there is now strong evidence that the mite has developed resistance to Apistan. This far, 10,000 hives have been wiped out in Florida alone. Pennsylvania bee inspectors have also reported resistance. What does this mean for you as a beekeeper? It means that you will need to inspect your hives more often for mite infestation; new bees from the south should be set up away from your overwintering bees to delay the spread of resistant mites, and you should be prepared because your bees will probably pickup resistant mites sometime in the future. Are there any solutions? It looks like formic acid in a gel pack may be available much sooner than expected. It may be on the market as early as this year, either through a regular use permit or under a state emergency permit. But at this time, it is still not labeled. It is recommended that the formic acid gel pack be used in rotation with Apistan so that we can slow down mite resistance build-up. Bill Wilson, a USDA apiculture researcher, in Weslaco, Texas, has been working with a new compound called Perizen or Courmaphos. He has found it to be a good miticide; however, we don't know how long it will be before it is available to beekeepers.

Electricity Deregulation Should Benefit Rural U.S.

The deregulation of industries such as airlines, telecommunications and trucking all have had an impact on rural America and agriculture, and now the focus and concern is turning to electricity.

With Congress expected to begin debate over restructuring the electric utility industry, Glenn English, president of the National Rural Electric Cooperative Association, told farm leaders at the American Farm Bureau Federation's annual meeting they should proceed with caution but recommended that various states be allowed to experiment with deregulation.

"We need to understand what works and what won't before we incorporate some kind of national policy," said English, a former Oklahoma congressman. "I think that each state should have the right to make their own choice. And we want to make sure that all consumers are benefited, not just a select few."

There is concern in agriculture circles that electrical deregulation will only benefit large industries and hurt consumers in rural America. The argument is based on the belief that open competition of electricity will mean higher rates and costs to maintain service lines in rural areas, where fewer customers live.

Jerry Ellig, a senior research fellow at the Center for Market Processes at George Mason University, said all customers should expect a big reduction in the cost of power.

"Rural customers will pay for the wires just like they've always been paying," Ellig said. "Where we have figures for rural customers as a group, they come out as winners in deregulation. You can find a group of rural customers here or there that are losers, but rural customers as a whole come out winners."

According to a study by the Washington, D.C., based Citizens for a Sound Economy (CSE), the electric bill is the third largest monthly living expense for a typical family, ranking just behind housing and food payments. CSE further stated that consumer choice could ultimately mean an average 43 percent decline in monthly residential electric bills, a savings of up to $350 a year.

Nationwide, the average cost of electricity is 6.9 cents per kilowatt hour. Kentucky has the lowest rate at 5.1 cents and Connecticut is the highest at 15.04 cents. With deregulation, both English and Ellig feel that some prices will drop and others will increase, but states with the highest cost will probably benefit most.

"If I were a rural customer, I would say, give me customer choice and keep the stranded cost recovery for the investor-owned utilities as low as possible," Ellig said.

"Historically speaking, rural people have always come out on the short end of the stick," English added. "As you look at this kind of legislation for deregulation, certainly the people that are pushing it are the big interests and they're not pushing it because they think they're going to lose."

Farm Bureau policy indicates that several principles must be met before implementation of any restructuring plan that deregulates electric utilities and establishes retail competition. These include: full public debate, considering the economic and social consequences, and ensuring access to reliable service at reasonable prices.

Farm Bureau also supports allowing smaller customers to pool their electric power consumption into a larger marketable share through aggregation in order to attract and better obtain low-cost electric power. The organization supports letting the federal government set the framework for changing the structure of the electric utility industry, but believes state governments should decide whether or not to deregulate.

Grain Corn Yield To Average 90 Bushels Per Acre

The 1997 corn for grain yield in Maryland was 90 bushels per acre based on reports on Dec. 1, 1997. The yield is 49 bushels less than the 1996 record high yield of 139 bushels per acre. Corn for grain production, at 37.4 million bushels, is 42% less than last year's production.

The 1997 corn for silage harvested acres increased by 20,000 acres to 80,000 acres from last year's estimate of 60,000 acres. However, the corn silage yield was estimated at 10 tons per acre, eight tons per acre less than last year. In 1997 the corn for silage production was estimated at 800,000 tons.

Soybean yield is forecast to average 28 bushels per acre, nine bushels less than the 1996 average yield of 37 bushels. Soybean production amounted to 14.7 million bushels, 17.2% less than a year ago.

Alfalfa hay production for 1997 is estimated at 144,000 tons, 49% less than last year's production. All other hay production for 1997 totaled 330,000 tons, 21% less than 1996.

In all of the United States, corn for grain production was estimated at 9.37 billion bushels on Dec. 1, up less than 1% from the 1996 crop and virtually unchanged from the Nov. 1 forecast. The 1997 production level ranks third behind 1994 and 1992, respectively. The U.S. yield of 127 bushels per acre was virtually the same as the 127.1 bushel yield of a year earlier.

Soybean production in 1997 totaled 2.73 billion bushels, down slightly from the Nov. 1 forecast but up 14% from 1996. The 1997 production would be the highest on record. The previous record production level was set in 1994 at 2.52 billion bushels. The average yield per acre in 1997 is estimated at 39 bushels, 0.2 bushels below the Nov. 1 forecast and 1.4 bushels above the 1996 yield. This is the second highest yield on record behind the 1994 yield of 41.4 bushels per acre.

All hay production for 1997 was estimated at 152 million tons, down slightly from the Oct. 1 forecast but 2% above the revised 1996 total.

Shelli Cannon And Matthew Hill Exchange Vows In August Event

Attorney Opens New Business For Arbitration

Local attorney Paul C. Sullivan, pictured, has announced the formation of a new company, Abiding Mediation & Arbitration Services. The company has been created to serve the community in the resolution of legal disputes without lawsuits and sometimes without attorneys.

In opening the new business, Sullivan stated, "Many people cannot afford an attorney, but need to have their legal problem resolved. People call me every day for help. More and more every year, I have to explain that it may be too expensive to pursue a legal remedy through the regular legal channels. The legal remedies need to be available to everyone, rich or poor. Insurance companies and other businesses have discredited the legal system, charging that there are too many frivolous claims and runaway juries. These alleged problems are eliminated if mediation or arbitration is used to resolve disputes."

According to Sullivan, not only can the parties save money, but the system no longer wastes the time of judges and other court personnel, the time of citizens serving as witnesses and on juries, and the public resources (tax dollars) are not wasted.

"In Maryland," stated Sullivan, "most civil lawsuits in District Court take several months to come to trial. Most larger civil claims handled in the Circuit Court take much longer. Postponements delay the process further. Through mediation or arbitration, most claims can be resolved within one month."

Sullivan has practiced law in Maryland, West Virginia, and Pennsylvania for the past 20 years. Born in Cumberland, he is continuing as the managing attorney of Sullivan & Sullivan, P.A.

Notes From Bittinger

by Joan Sussman

Andrew Yoder, 7-month-old son of Dennis and Julie Yoder, was admitted to Children's Hospital in Pittsburgh on Wednesday, Jan. 21. He underwent open heart surgery on Thursday. Spending the day at the hospital on Thursday with Dennis and Julie were Dennis's parents, Paul and Wanda Yoder, and Julie's parents, Joe and Becky Stevens, Grantsville. The little fellow is doing well and will probably be home in about a week.

Russ and Mary Conway, Huron, Ohio, were weekend guests of the Rodney Glotfelty family. They all hit the slopes at the Wisp on Friday. Both Russ and Mary assisted Rodney in coaching the kids in downhill skiing as they had fun on 4-H Day at the Wisp. Lloyd Sussman also spent Friday on the "bunny slope" and "Possum" trail at the Wisp with daughters Meredith and Caitlin. Rodney and Lloyd suffer minor aches and pains after their first whole day on the slopes this year. Luckily, no one skied into a tree or was seriously injured.

The recent snowfall improved the outlook for cross country skiing. Lloyd Sussman, Steve Sherrard, and Kyle Morrison took advantage of the conditions on Sunday afternoon for a fathers-only trip to the back country on the flank of Meadow Mountain.

Ann and Pat McLister and their children Colleen, Natalie, and Paul spent the weekend with Ann's mother, Margaret Hershberger-Wagner. Like the brave father he is, Pat took his own kids, as well as Caitlin Sussman and Emma Bass, to the movie "The Mouse Hunt" on Saturday afternoon. They all had a good time on the outing.

Mr. and Mrs. Tom Glotfelty, Taylor and Timmy were recently vacationing in the western states, and visited Mr. and Mrs. Danny Karren, Jerome, Idaho. They also were skiing at Sun Valley Ski Resort.

James Glotfelty was honored with a birthday dinner at Denny's Restaurant in Oakland Wednesday evening.

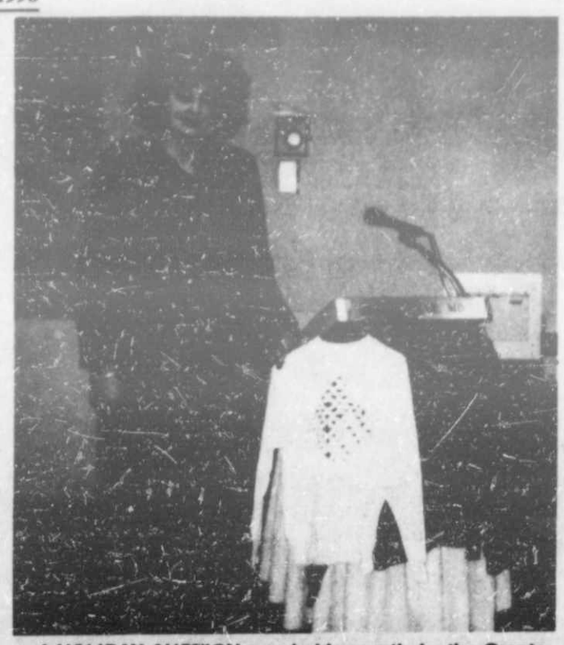
Tony Carey, Frostburg, and friend Evie Morris, were Saturday evening visitors at the James Glotfelty home.

Since the end of soccer season, many Bittinger children turn their attention to basketball, participating in the "Dribbler" program at Northern High School on Saturday mornings. Among the kids from Bittinger learning to pass, dribble, and shoot are Robbie, Blakely, Elliot and Darryl Glotfelty, Tory Poholsky, Brent Housley, and Max Beitzel.

While our Steelers were eliminated from the race for the Super Bowl crown, many Bittinger television sets were still tuned to the big game on Sunday. The absence of the Steelers, however, made Super Bowl parties very rare in this neck of the woods. Lenny and Sally Poholsky did host an exclusive small gathering to watch the game. Any excuse for a party this time of year.

My daughters Claire and Caitlin were very hard on the Denver Broncos, especially their quarterback John Elway. They made rude comments concerning his looks, hair, and intelligence, and generally trashed him in a burst of sour grapes and bitterness. I can't imagine where they learned that. In the gutter, I assume.

Read. Then Recycle.



A HOLIDAY AUCTION was held recently by the Grantsville Area Business and Professional Women's Club at the Grantsville Holiday Inn, and the club reports that it was the "best ever," as members and approximately 70 local businesses contributed items for the event. In the above photo, looking over some of the donated clothing items, is Donna Smith, Hagerstown, who is vice president of the Maryland State BPW. Proceeds from the auction support the club's annual $500 academic scholarship, which is awarded to a deserving student over age 30 who returns to the workplace. Applications for the scholarship may be obtained by telephoning Earleena Tressler, committee chairman, at 301-895-5314.

The slightest amount of contamination could result in an entire load being disposed of at the landfill.

This is our land, air and water, and we should all do our part in preserving it for all generations to come after us. It requires a lot of dedication, a little work, and no money to recycle. For more information, call 301-387-0322.

In future months our topics will be: Basic First Aid in Your Home and CPR, Women Consumer Equality, Food Handling and Safety, Household Wastes, Side Effects of Medicine and Drug Interactions, and Fire Prevention. An article will be written in this column on all these programs as they are presented to further enlighten everyone.

Our meetings are open to all individuals. If you wish to attend, call the Garrett County Cooperative Extension Service at 301-334-6960; they will inform you as to the time and locations of our meetings.

The Maryland Cooperative Extension Service's programs are open to all citizens without regard to race, color, sex, disability, religion, age, or national origin.

The Homemakers Corner

by Joan Schultz

Public Relations Chairperson

As a member of the Garrett County Association for Family and Community Education and Extension Homemakers, I'd like to focus on the purpose and objectives of our organization. Many people hear the word "homemaker" and think all we do is crafts and socialize at our meetings. They couldn't be more wrong. Yes, we still do crafts, but only in our spare time. We strive to enlighten our communities and families on important matters, such as: environment, recycling, health, financial, and safety issues. These are just a few of the topics we cover.

For instance, our January program focused on recycling. More people are joining in this effort, but we must all keep up on the symbols imprinted on containers. When in doubt, ask the attendant on duty at the collection sites or landfill.

Thank You!

I would like to thank Mt. Grove and Aurora Fire Departments, Union Ambulance, churches, friends, and neighbors for the help and support during my recent fire.

God Bless You All,
Mrs. Carole Roth

THE REPUBLICAN

VOL NO. 120 OAKLAND, GARRETT COUNTY, MD., THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 5, 1998 PER COPY 47¢ Printed on RECYCLED NEWSPRINT

"PARTING IS SUCH SWEET SORROW" - As the Loch Lynn Elementary School students said farewell to their school building, they looked as if there was little sorrow for them. The children wore their "Remembering Loch Lynn" T-shirts and gathered for a good-bye party. The students will be moving on to the brand new facility, Yough Glades Elementary. There they will be joined by the students from Red House Elementary. The two former school buildings will take on new identities as they are put to other uses in the future. The "sweet sorrow" of this parting was experienced by members of older generations who spent their early years learning lessons and making friends at these two schools. See story on page A-3.

PAYING A VISIT to Garrett County last Thursday was Simon Pearce, founder/owner of Simon Pearce Inc., a custom glass manufacturing company that will expand into the former Bausch & Lomb building later this year. The move will ultimately mean at least 150 new jobs for local workers when it is fully operational. Pictured above, from left, are Garrett County Commissioners Gary Fratz, Wayne Wilt, and Wayne Johnson, Simon Pearce, and David Moe, co-president of the Garrett County Chamber of Commerce, who presented Pearce with a gallon of local maple syrup as a welcoming gift. See story for details of the visit and Pearce's comments.

Omission Noted In Recent Report On Smart Growth

Last week's story in The Republican concerning the Smart Growth information meeting neglected to mention that the meeting was sponsored by G.C./CARE, as pointed out by a spokesperson for the group.

The spokesman also pointed out that another piece of information was omitted from the same news story. A question was raised during the meeting that asked if the legislation required public meetings as local governments were considering what lands to designate as Priority Funding Areas (PFAs) and Rural Legacy tracts. "No," was the answer from John Frece, the governor's assistant for Smart Growth and the meeting's featured speaker.

Subsequent interviews and phone calls confirm this response. "There is nothing in the state's Smart Growth legislation pertaining to the state requiring public hearings," Frece commented later. "It was the desire of the governor not to heap a lot of rules and regulations on local governments. The governor, as a former municipal official, trusts locally elected governments to handle their affairs in their own way by listening to the wishes of their constituents," he said, "but no, there is no requirement for public hearings as part of the Smart Growth process."

Swanton Man Convicted Of Child Abuse

A Swanton man entered an alford plea to the charge of child abuse in Garrett County Circuit Court proceedings last week. Mark S. Duckworth, 41, was then remanded to the local jail until a pre-sentence investigation is completed, as ordered by Judge James Sherbin.

Duckworth was arrested as a result of an incident in July 1997, at which time he is alleged to have sexually molested a juvenile, according to the court report. An alford plea is not an admission of guilt to a crime, but rather the defendant's acknowledgment that the prosecution has significant evidence for the court to rule against him.

In another circuit court case, Dennis E. Knotts, 24, Oakland, faced sentencing for his prior guilty plea to the charge of third degree sex offense. Judge Fred A. Thayer presided over this case and ruled to withhold sentencing until the defendant undergoes some psychiatric therapy, according to the report.

Knotts was charged after authorities learned of a sexual relationship he allegedly had with a young girl. The relationship began when the defendant was 22 and just a month before the girl turned 13, and continued for about three months, according to the report. The couple engaged in sex on numerous occasions, the report states. There was apparently no force involved in the episodes, as the partners were dating at the time.

Thayer also presided in a case involving marijuana possession. Ryan M. Williams, 21, Baltimore, entered a guilty plea to the charge of marijuana possession and Thayer accepted the plea. The judge sentenced Williams to 30 days in jail, suspended. He fined Williams $250 and placed him on one year of probation, according to the report.

Williams was arrested in December 1995 when the car he was riding in was stopped by a Maryland State Police trooper. A search of the vehicle apparently revealed a quantity of marijuana and various items of drug paraphernalia.

Grantsville Area House Destroyed By Fire Monday

A fire believed to have been caused by an electrical problem destroyed a Grantsville area house Monday afternoon.

Fire fighters from the Grantsville and Bittinger volunteer fire departments were called to the residence of Dennis and Tammy Rounds, located at 5108 Amish Road, at 3:11 p.m. after a neighbor saw smoke coming from the 28x48-foot Champion manufactured home with a basement. Mr. and Mrs. Rounds, ages 43 and 35, and their two children, Sara, 9, and Kathryn, 6, were not at home at the time.

Upon the arrival of the fire units, the structure was fully involved in flames and nearly on the ground. All of the contents of the house were also destroyed, and the total loss was estimated by the Office of the State Fire Marshal to be $65,000.

Approximately 30 fire fighters responded to the scene, along with a unit from the Northern Garrett County Rescue Squad. The fire was brought under control in about 15 minutes,

Cabin Fever Fest Set At Spruce Forest

Spruce Forest Artisan Village in Grantsville will host its second annual Cabin Fever Weekend Friday and Saturday, Feb. 13-14. The event will feature seven demonstrating artisans in heated, authentic log cabins and schoolhouses, telling visitors of their craftsmanship. Visitors coming to the campus between 10 a.m. and 5 p.m. can stop in the Village Office for their doorprize sign-ups. Rustic buildings that will be open for the event include: Bear Hill School (1913); Schrock Cabin (1930); Eli Miller House (1889); Markley House (1775); Glotfelty House (1770); Winterberg House (1820); Village Church, formerly the Pleasant Valley Methodist Church (1903); and Compton School, the oldest log schoolhouse in western Maryland (c1810). There is no charge for the evening hymn sing. A free-will offering will be taken and proceeds will be used to benefit the programs and activities at Spruce Forest.

"Mrs. Cavin uses her personality and musical gifts as God's ministry to others. In addition to her church

Simon Pearce, New Tenant Of B&L Facility, Visits County

Simon Pearce, the man whose custom glass company bears his name and who has selected the former Bausch & Lomb facility to house the next expansion of his Vermont-based operation, paid a visit to Garrett County last Thursday to meet with county officials and to tour the B&L facility for the third time. Pearce, a native of London who grew up in Ireland, gave a brief history of his company during a press conference in the Garrett County commissioners' office, spoke about his plans for the new local facility, and answered reporters' questions.

Pearce founded a glass-blowing company in Ireland in 1970, sold that business in 1980, and moved to Vermont, where he purchased a former woolen mill in Quechee, Vt., and converted it to a glass production plant. Within six years, the company out-grew that space and Pearce purchased property about 10 miles away in Windsor, Vt., to open a second facility. Pearce said that, once again, his company has expanded faster than projected and, because of various factors, he decided to look outside Vermont for his next project.

"The unemployment rate in Windsor is only about one and a quarter percent, so finding new employees is difficult," he said, "plus the energy costs in Vermont are quite high."

The 51-year-old designer said that, after looking in both West Virginia and Western Maryland, there were several reasons why he ultimately selected Garrett County and the former B&L facility.

"The facility is not perfect, but it's close to what we need," he said. "The energy costs are lower, there is certainly a need for more employment, and the state is prepared to assist us with finances. I am also impressed with the willingness of the local people to work, and the warm reception that we have received by county officials."

Pearce said he has "a knack" for being able to make a quick judgment in these matters. "I knew within just a few hours in my first visit that Garrett County had the atmosphere I was looking for."

He said that West Virginia "put up a good fight" to get him to locate there, "but they did not have the facility and, even though they were willing to assist in building one, we would have had much greater overhead right away if we had located there."

Pearce said that he hopes to begin blowing glass in Garrett County by this coming fall and by the end of 1999 have from 50 to 100 employees.

"Within the next five years, we believe we will have at least 150 employees," he said, "and it certainly could be more than that. Our growth in Windsor was three times as fast as we predicted, but I always like to keep my estimates very conservative."

Simon Pearce Inc. is one of only two companies in the United States that produces high quality glassware. "Our niche in the glass business is strong," Pearce said, "and our product is considerably less expensive than Steuben's (the other company). A bowl that we make which costs $120 is comparable to one of theirs that costs $500. Most of our competition is from outside the United States.

"We are still tiny," he continued. "It's very difficult and very expensive to get into this business, but there

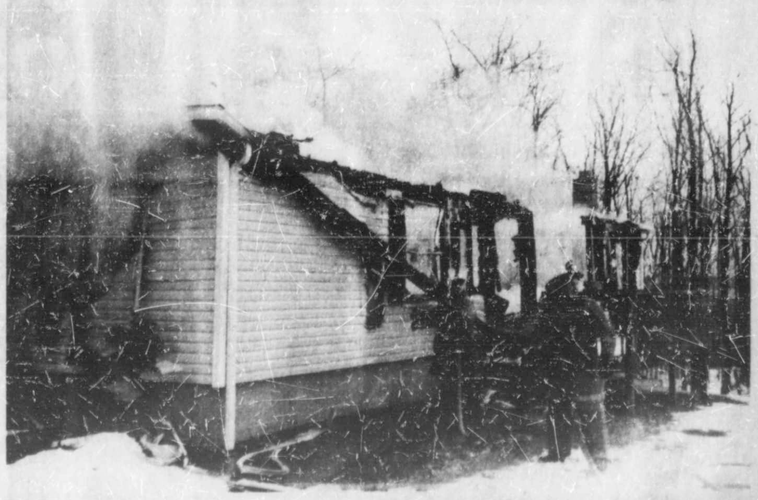
THE TITANIC SAILS IN MLP — Three young men in Mountain Lake Park have engaged themselves in shipbuilding over the past several weeks and have reconstructed a five-foot model of the famed Titanic. Pictured left to right are engineers Jamie Murphy, 10, Brandon Zerl, 9, and Ivan Stutzmen, 10. Fascinated by the recently released movie Titanic, the boys researched their project and set to work with cardboard, string, glue, and paint. They placed the authentically insufficient number of lifeboats along the deck, which features Ponderosa-stick flooring, and the "unsinkable" ship is painted with authentic colors. The model pictured took four days to build and is the first of three planned by the boys. (They each want to have one of their own.) The boys know a great deal about the ill-fated ocean liner and its passengers. It helps to have seen the movie — Brandon has watched it once, Jamie twice, and Ivan has gone down with the ship no fewer than six times.



LOSING THEIR HOME and nearly all of their possessions Monday afternoon were the members of the family of Dennis and Tammy Rounds, when fire of unknown origin destroyed their manufactured home located along Amish Road near Grantsville. Mr. and Mrs. Rounds and their two children Sara and Kathryn were not at home at the time of the blaze, which was discovered by a neighbor. The structure was fully involved in flames upon the arrival of volunteers from the Grantsville and Bittinger fire departments. See story for details. Photo by Jamie Ashby.

Sines Announces Candidacy For County Sheriff

Chester H. Sines, former chief of police of LaGrange, Ohio, has filed his candidacy on the Republican ticket for Garrett County Sheriff. "My goal as sheriff is to regain the respect the sheriff's department once had," Sines stated in a press release.

A Swallow Falls area resident, Sines holds an associate's degree in police science from Heidleburg College in Tiffin, Ohio, and also completed one year of study in psychology at Heidleburg. He graduated from Southern High School in 1964 and entered the U.S. Army in 1966, serving in Vietnam from 1967 to 1968. He obtained the rank of staff sergeant E-6 and received an honorable discharge with numerous awards and medals, including the Purple Heart and Bronze Star with V Device.

Sines is employed at Deep Creek Ready Mix as a truck driver, and he and his wife Linda are active members of the Mtn. Lake Park Independent Baptist Church.

"With our nation deteriorating in decency and morality," Sines said, "when lying and deceitfulness become the only way one says their words, honesty is only a matter of one's interpretation. I would like to say that honesty is only one thing. That is, the truth without deceit. From our nation's capital right down to our local sheriff's office, we have seen what dishonesty and manipulation can do. It's time for a change.

"I invite you to find out what kind of individual I am," Sines continued. "Seek out someone who knows me and has known me for many years. Get their opinion of me on character, trust and family values. I would also like to say that I am a born-again believer and I think this is very important. I am not a radical, neither am I ashamed to say that I am a Christian. I think that people should know who I am and this is an important part of me," he said.

"Some will say, 'If that is so, can he still do his job?' The answer is 'Yes, and much better'," said Sines. "Because of my values, every aspect of my job will be handled with better discretion. Some will say that 'politics and religion don't mix.' This is partly true, but we must remember our founding forefathers based this country and the Constitution on God and his principles. Don't misunderstand me. It is very important to have experience, education, and training — but without character, all these will fail," he said.

"I want to be your sheriff. I believe I have the necessary experience, education, and training along with the character, morality and values needed to do a good job as sheriff. I sincerely ask for your support," Sines concluded.

The Sines campaign invites persons interested in assisting in its efforts to mail their contributions to Linda L. Sines, Treasurer, 262 Mayhew Inn Road, Oakland, MD 21550.

Two Community Schools Close; Moving Forward, Looking Back

by Peggy Santamaria

Heavy snow closed Garrett County Schools yesterday. But for two of the schools, it was not just a snow day that emptied the buildings. The doors of those schools have closed permanently. The children will not be returning to the classrooms there.

Loch Lynn and Red House elementary schools, which have been serving their communities since the 1800s, were consolidated, and the two student bodies will unite under one roof next week when the Yough Glades Elementary School opens.

The children at both schools marked the last day in the old buildings. Pizza and cake were the special treats enjoyed by the students. At Loch Lynn, children sported their new "Remembering Loch Lynn Elementary" T-shirts.

Students at the two schools have been creating "memory books" of their school days.

Lindsay Stanton, who has been serving as principal to both Red House and Loch Lynn schools, said the children are very excited about going to their new school. "They are really looking forward to being in the new school. They are anxious to meet new friends," she said.

For these youngsters, this is an adventure. For their parents, those who attended Loch Lynn or Red House, there is a note of sadness. "It's very emotional for some of them," Stanton noted.

Looking back at some of the history of these schools, a picture, very different from what is seen today, emerges.

Originally the children of Loch Lynn and Red House attended one-room schools housed in wooden structures and heated by wood stoves. There was no running water in those early buildings.

Schools began to modernize in the 20th century. The population in Garrett County was growing, and new educational facilities were needed.

In Loch Lynn a two-room, brick school opened in 1925. Mary O'Donnell was principal. The new school was built near the original structure and served the community until 1959, when two classrooms, a cafeteria, and an all-purpose room were added. The six-room school then boasted six teachers.

Red House got its updated school a bit later than its neighbor community. In 1932 the Knepp brothers provided 3.5 acres for a school facility. The two-room, brick structure opened to the students in 1936. Grace Filer was at the helm as principal.

As the community grew, more space for students was needed. By 1960 a two-room addition stretched the facility to accommodate the population.

Much has changed from the days of pot-bellied stoves in the middle of the one-room school with a pump outside for water. Today's school provides every modern convenience to a student.

As the doors of Yough Glades Elementary School open next week, it will be the beginning of an exciting new chapter in the educational experience of the children who attend. Wide vistas will expand before them as they look out through giant windows and participate in the school programs.

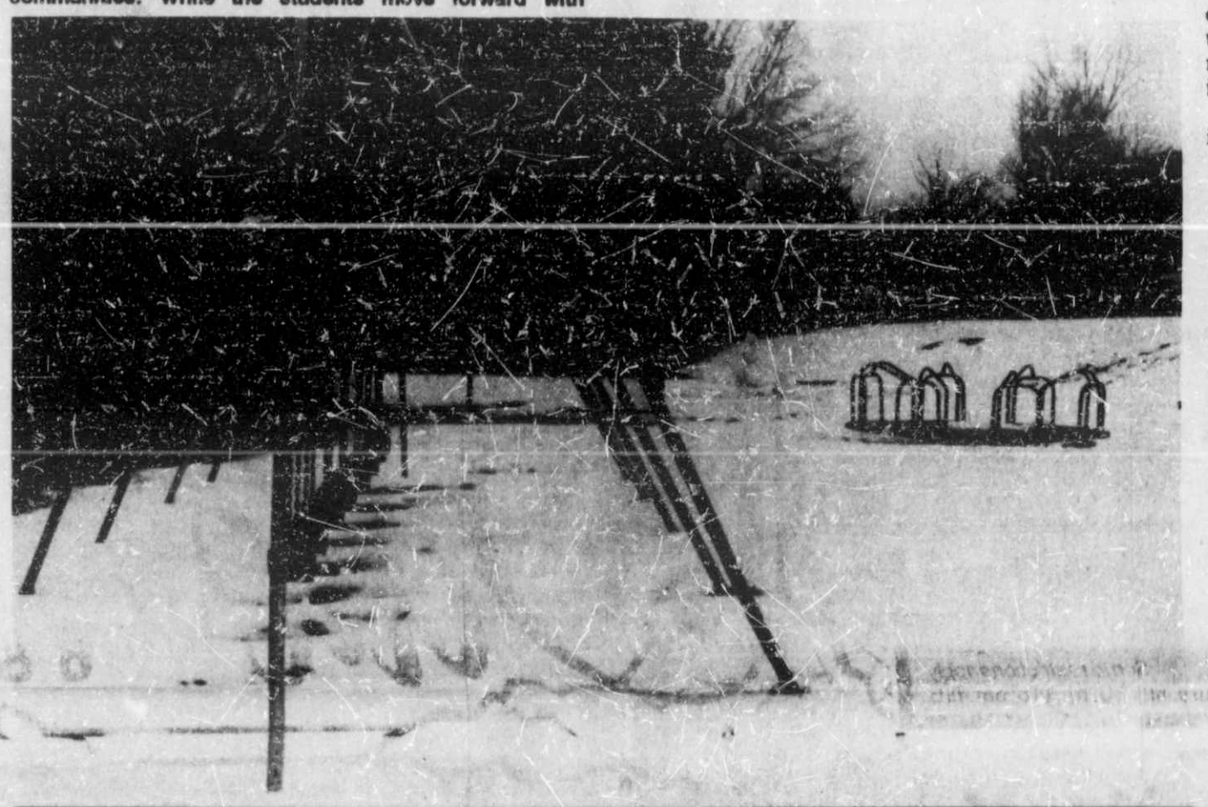
But though this forward movement is charged with the energy of growth and change, it is at the same time a moment of breaking off and of ending a tradition.

The parents and grandparent of today's students of Loch Lynn and Red House schools first learned to read, write, add, and subtract while seated at desks in these school houses.

The two school buildings will continue to serve their communities, but in different ways. They will be put to use as community centers, shops, and town facilities in the future.

As principal Lindsay Stanton put it, "It is a bittersweet ending."

Editor's note: Some of the historical information was supplied by Alice Eary, who, along with Jean Grose, is writing a book on Garrett County schools.



TO EVERYTHING THERE IS A SEASON - And the time has come for moving on. Students made their final exits this week from Red House Elementary School and will begin a new educational experience next week when they enter Yough Glades Elementary School. They will be joined there by students from Loch Lynn Elementary School. The two schools have served generations of people in both communities. While the students move forward with enthusiasm for the waiting adventure, parents and grandparents view the event from a rather mistier perspective. The excitement of the children pictured above can almost be heard as they leave the old school behind. Below, a poignancy is captured in the vacant playground equipment, where so many children spent happy hours and made life-long friends. Photos by John McEwen.

Pondering Capital Punishment...

The execution this week of Karla Faye Tucker, the Texas woman who was convicted of two brutal murders, causes one to ponder once again the entire issue of capital punishment. Even though there have been scores of executions of male prisoners over the past couple of decades (431 since 1977), and even though this woman's crimes were heinous, to say the least, the fact that the doomed one in this case was female evokes a different kind of reaction. Yet, gender should not be a factor.

It was interesting to us that conservative religious leaders, such as Pat Robertson and Jerry Falwell, joined the effort to have this woman's death sentenced overturned since she was "born again," was obviously sorry for her horrible offenses, and should be granted forgiveness. But we never heard a word from either one of these men when the person sentenced to die happened to be a black male, who also professed to be "born again," said he was sorry, and, likewise, carried his Bible with him to the death chamber.

Despite being able to build a solid argument that this woman deserved to die for what she did, it is difficult for this writer to feel comfortable with the death penalty under almost any circumstances. Sentencing one to die, setting the date and time, selecting the method, and then actually carrying it out, by accompanying the victim to a rather sterile setting, strapping her down, sticking a needle in her vein, and watching her take her final breath, is animalistic, macabre, and evil. It is the "eye for an eye" punishment philosophy of the Old Testament carried out to its ultimate degree, a philosophy that was supposedly replaced in the New Testament with a far more merciful, non-judgmental approach. She killed, and is sentenced to death for her crime. Then we kill her; but in this case, it is not only not a crime, but it is a perfectly accepted, justifiable action.

Perhaps if this writer's loved ones were the victims of Ms. Tucker or some other murderer, justification of the death penalty would become clear. It seems, however, that life behind bars with not even a remote chance of parole is still a worse penalty than being made to permanently fall asleep. It is also a penalty that does not force law-abiding citizens to become killers themselves.

Letters to the Editor

To the Editor:

Women interested in getting together to pray for their children and their schools are invited to attend an informational meeting on February 10 at 7 p.m. at Oak Park Church of the Brethren (across from Southern High School). This is a rescheduled date due to snow.

Moms in Touch International is a nondenominational, non-political, non-issue oriented ministry started in 1984 by a mother who had concerns for her child and her child's school. There are now groups in every state in the United States and representatives in approximately 81 countries. Since 1984, one small group has grown into an unbelievable 32,000+. We already have several moms interested in Southern High School, Dennett Road, and Yough Glades.

Christine Brenneman, area coordinator, will be with us from Grantsville to show a video and answer questions about MITI. Nursery and refreshments will be available at this informational meeting.

Mothers are not "required" to pray aloud during Moms in Touch meetings so that all women should feel completely comfortable.

Any questions? Please call me, Susan Riley, 301-334-2814, or Christine Brenneman, 301-895-5191.

Thank you,
Susan Riley
Oakland

To the Editor:

This letter is for the person who stole my son's wallet out of his locker in the Southern High School boys' locker room the morning of February 2. The locker was locked, so you must have had to work just a little in order to gain access, but not near as hard as my son has to in order to earn the money he had in it. Yes! He works for his money, unlike some other people who would rather take from others.

The issue here isn't just the money, but the important contents of the wallet. You can keep the money. I'm sure you plan on it anyway, but how about showing a little decency and returning his driver's license, student ID card, Mac card and other important contents? You can either turn the wallet in to the school office and tell them you just happened to find it, or if you would rather, remove all of the contents and place them in an envelope and mail to our home. You will, of course, find our address printed on the driver's license. If you do this in a timely manner, we will not have to bring the Oakland police in on this matter.

Oh yes, we plan on doing just that, as this is not the first wallet that has been taken and I very much doubt if it will be the last, unless you are caught and punished. In order to avoid any charges, just return the above mentioned wallet and this whole matter can be forgotten. After all, you do not have any use for a driver's license with someone else's name on it and the Mac card is useless, as we have already reported it stolen. So please, just return them.

Thank you,
J.R. Riley

To the Editor:

The release of Maryland criminals on early parole or probation has been at the sacrifice of the safety of law-abiding citizens: Jose and Julie Gilbert, murdered by Maryland's Scotland E. Williams, 2 months after he was placed on probation; a Florida police officer, almost choked to death, and a woman sexually battered by Jeffrey Allan Cole, who was on probation for kidnaping and sexual assault in Maryland; and a Columbia woman brutally raped by paroled Maryland rapist Thurman A. Moore.

In 1996, Maryland prisons admitted 15,700 new inmates, with 14% of those parole and probation violators. As of January 1, 1997, another 46,710 criminals were on the streets of Maryland on parole or probation.

On February 9, another Maryland killer may be granted an early parole from prison. Jeffrey Todd Whittington has served just four years of a second degree murder conviction for the 1993 strangulation death of his wife, Melissa Ann "Missy" Praetz, in Washington County, and is already eligible for parole. Whittington attempted to cover his crime by setting his wife on fire.

Whittington's murder conviction and 30-year prison sentence have not eased the minds of the victim's parents, Joe and Mary Lee Praetz. Their search for peace these past five years, since the death of their only daughter, is overshadowed by the injustice of Whittington's possible parole. As they come before the Parole Commission to fight Whittington's parole, they must again relive the horrific details of the death of their beloved daughter.

NRA CrimeStrike, the criminal justice reform branch of the National Rifle Association, has joined Missy Praetz's family in their fight, and mounted a major petition drive and letter writing campaign among our members to protest Whittington's parole. Through our "Keep Killers In Prison" program, NRA CrimeStrike has helped families in 22 states block the early paroles of 60 killers. Thus far, NRA CrimeStrike volunteers have gathered the signatures of hundreds of Maryland law enforcement officers and citizens opposed to Whittington's parole.

We encourage readers to write letters protesting Whittington's early parole, and send them to Patricia Cushwa, Chairman of Maryland Parole Commission, at 6776 Reisterstown Road, Suite 307, Baltimore, MD 21215. Be sure to include Whittington's prisoner I.D number - 253646.

Thank you for your support,

To the Editor:

The blind skier program put on by the Lions Club-what a program! Years ago I participated in a similar program downstate (the big difference was that it was all adult volunteers). It was very nice; but this program is outstanding.

Starting with cooking breakfast for the group at 6 a.m., the enthusiasm shown by the volunteers is infectious. Five people cooking in a kitchen built for one, well, let me tell you. . . .

The volunteer ski instructor group is comprised of mostly high school students and some young adults. As a 63-year-old, I must have initially stood out like a sore thumb. However, I had the good fortune of being paired up with 14-year-old Leo Schlosnagle as co-instructor and he was quite comfortable with the age difference. Leo is caring, bright, level-headed, non-judgmental, fun, and a great skier; he epitomizes the good young people of Garrett County. The only problem that I had with Leo was when he covetously eyed my chicken nugget platter at lunch time and asked me if I intended to eat all of it. We quickly solved that problem with some leftover chicken from the night before.

To be "flying" down Possum Run with a very courageous blind skier and a partner almost 50 years my junior was exhilarating, to say the least. It wasn't until the second day that Leo and I realized that neither of us wanted to go quite that fast (we were passing lots of people). And Raven, well, she just went along for the ride" and was thrilled by the whole thing. Note to ski patrollers: we were in control the whole time.

I had a fine time, and I

WHAT DO WE WANT FROM OUR SCHOOLS?

We all want our children to get a good education from school. That answer sounds easy enough, but what do we mean by a "good education?"

It seems as if we have been answering that question all my life. I was part of the "Dick and Jane" generation. The "Dick and Jane" books were the beginning of the abandonment of the basics, not only in curriculum, but in the culture of our schools as well. Since then the experts have been superseding each other every few years, not with ideas, rather with buzz words.

So it was that all the English grammar I learned was taught to me in first through sixth grades. In seventh grade we were taught a non-grammar grammar in which there were no rules, only explanations. Today, in order to learn any grammar, a child needs to take a foreign language. I could give many examples of this, but I doubt that I need to. Anybody who has been through the public schools has plenty of examples himself.

Not long ago I attended a meeting where education was the topic of discussion. An expert told us that "Our schools belong to our community." He did not mean what he said, however. Everything he said after that gave evidence that he wanted to build a wall between our schools and our communities, and that those with doctorates in education would be building blocks in the wall.

I wouldn't bother to mention this incident if the experience I had in that meeting were the exception and not the rule. I hear the same kind of story over and over again of how central administrators undermine the community and the parents. They know best since they have degrees in the subject.

They begin by taking the schools out of our communities and they end by taking the spirit of our communities out of our schools.

One of the saddest things about the meeting I attended was the manipulation that took place. More than 30 of us were led by a so-called "facilitator," a word I have come to regard as a euphemism for a manipulator. We were not permitted to challenge the process, only to be led toward a largely predetermined goal. I am not sure that anybody besides me wanted to challenge the process. After all, the meeting was set up too much like a television talk show to make anyone uncomfortable except for a person who didn't have a television (namely, me).

After nearly 400 person-hours of work, we came up with a page and half of unobjectionable drivel. There wasn't anything wrong with our results, except what they didn't say.

My chief objection was that there was nothing in our work product which reflected a sense of place. When I said, "This could be about XYZ school system in Anywhere, USA," the facilitator nodded his agreement, as if to say, "That's what we are after."

But that isn't what I am after. I am after a school that reflects the particular history and culture of this place. This is not to exclude the history and culture of somebody else in some other place, rather than to say the schools of some other place should reflect the history and culture there. In other words, schools ought to grow out of the ground where they are built.

The education being shaped today in schools across the country is meant to resemble a fast-food hamburger. Every school is to offer the same education, no matter where the school is and what the local appetite may be. McDonald's and other fast-food chains have been financially successful with that model, but the eating habits of Americans have deteriorated in serious ways due to that success.

In the same way, the educational experts can give us a fast-food model of education that will be highly successful in the way of McDonald's, but the mental habits of Americans will suffer for it. It is that kind of education which I do not want from our schools. I am afraid we are going to get it anyway.

HAIR-RAISING
by Melodee Hill

Within the past five or ten years, a phrase has found its way into our vernacular (small-sized pockets in our overcoats), that can mean anything from losing a fingernail to losing a job. This phrase indicates that the user is having a particularly tough time and this is not a good time to tell her about the new dent in her car or that she has spinach stuck between her teeth. Of course, I'm speaking of the phrase, "income tax audit"—oops, no I'm afraid it's much more serious than that, I meant to say it's the dreaded "BAD HAIR DAY!"

I could never really understand this phrase because it seemed to me that if your hair was not behaving for one day out of 520 that was not much cause for alarm. I've pretty much had a bad hair LIFE since I was 6 years old. This is about the time my wavy, Harlow blonde hair turned into yak fur. Well, it isn't really yak fur (which has so much more body), that's just my opinion of it. But my hair became straight in all the wrong places, and metamorphosed from the color of sunlight to the color of a muddy stream in winter. And that's okay, I've learned to live with it, but I was thinking that soon I might want to go to a shorter length of yak fur.

Over the years, I've periodically wanted a short hairdo, or even just a hairdo that looked like it belonged on my head instead of on some mythical creature, namely, Medusa. I especially get this desire after watching a movie; yes, I was the last person in America to see The English Patient, in which the heroine has long hair, but for some inexplicable reason (probably that SHE knows she looks better with pixie locks), hacks off her own hair with scissors the size of a golf club. These scissors are just laying around the deserted farmhouse or haunted mansion and she doesn't seem to care that they could have been used for serial murders or animal surgery.

There was also a scene in the movie that shows this woman giving a bowl of olive oil to a man who has just washed his hair, which is as long as a used car lot pennant. He looks at her, clearly puzzled and says, "Is this for my hair?" You can almost see the thought running through his head under all that clean shiny hair, "Is she crazy?" I just washed all the dirt and oil out of my hair and she wants me to smear this on my head—I'll hide it and use it on my salad later." This reminded me of the time that I complained about my hair to my grandmother. I don't recall the nature of my complaint, but being a teenager, it probably was just whining for whining's sake. Well either I misunderstood her instructions or this sweet old woman got tired of my moaning, because I was sure she said to rub Vaseline in my hair and then wash it out. The rubbing in part was easy, but it was six washings later before my hair was back to normal—and I never complained to her about my hair again.

Anyway, she (remember our heroine?) chops her hair off (actually, she chopped her hair off before she took the salad dressing to the hairy guy—but, hey, this isn't a movie review!), mostly without the aid of mirrors, and the next minute her sexy, exotic long hair has become sexy, exotic short hair with waves, curls and dangling participles in all the right places. This is very infuriating to those of us who can't even look like that after a two-hour session at the beauty parlor—through no fault of our stylist—who's motto is "I'm a hairdresser—not a magician!" They don't teach yak fur perming and styling at the beauty schools. Over the years, however, I've learned that it isn't the hair that makes the face, it's the face that makes the hair.

And speaking of faces making hair, women usually do not have to worry about whether they have enough hair (usually we have too much hair in all the wrong places), unless they are members of the BHCW (Big Hair Club for Women, headquarters: Texas or New Jersey), and most women don't want any of that hair on their faces. Did you think those were their real eyebrows? Anyway, it's the men who are worried about having or, in the case of facial hair, growing enough to cover their shiny spots. Sometimes I think that works the same way as trying too hard to get pregnant. It is a very vicious circle. That is, the more you worry about how much hair you're losing (men) or how unpregnant you are (women), the less of either hair or success you have. Of course, both those conditions depend on other factors, such as whether or not your parents were bald or had any success having children.

Guys also have to worry about the amount of gray hair in their beards or mustaches. If their beard has some gray, but not too much, they will just look like aging derelicts, especially the first week of non-shaving mode. If their beards are almost but not totally gray, they will just look old. And, if their beards have achieved that sought after, all-over silver grayness, they will probably look stately and dignified, but will not live long enough to enjoy it because they have worried for so many years about baldness and gray hair.

So, ladies, the next time you pass a deserted farmhouse or a haunted mansion, resist the urge to run in and cut your hair off with the hedge clippers. And men, when you see a few hairs in the drain try not to scream loud enough to wake the kids. Pass the salad dressing, please.

Music At Penn Alps Announces Its 1998 Season

The board of directors of Music at Penn Alps (MPA) has announced the lineup for its annual summer concert program, which begins its sixth year of weekly concerts in May. The series attracts musicians from across the region and from around the world to the Great Hall of Penn Alps complex, just east of Grantsville.

"We have artists of exceptional talent, from pianists who have played with the Baltimore Symphony Orchestra to top music competitors from Eastern Europe," said MPA Board Chairman David Bohnert. "This year there is also a great deal of breadth in the type of musical presentations; we are featuring not only chamber orchestras and more traditional duos, but also oboe and guitar combinations, a horn trio, as well as Dixieland jazz."

The concert series, which begins May 23 and continues each Saturday throughout the summer, opens with the cello/violin duo Elsing and Salness. Cellist Evelyn Elsing and violinist David Salness, both members of the University of Maryland School of Music faculty, will perform music by Ravel, Handel, and others.

The May 30 concert will feature Alexander Petkov, a classical guitarist from Bulgaria, who came to the United States under the sponsorship of Bulgaria's National Classical Guitar Association after winning the top prize in the Young Musician Competition in 1987.

The piano artistry of Yuliya Gorenman will be featured June 6. Gorenman, who has won several national piano competitions in her native country of Russia, has performed with both the Baltimore and National symphony orchestras and was recently a fellow at the Tanglewood Music Festival in Massachusetts.

June 13 will showcase the Cygnus Horn Trio with Jose Cueto, Emil George and Nancy Roldan. These performers are part of the Cygnus Ensemble, an association of professional chamber musicians in the Baltimore-Washington area. Both Cueto and Roldan are graduates of the Peabody Conservatory and George served as principal horn with the Mexico City Philharmonic and the State of Mexico Symphony Orchestra.

Don Hulbert, flutist and graduate of the Aaron Copeland School of Music, will perform on June 20. Hulbert has had solo presentations at Wolf Trap, Merkin Hall, and other venues. He will be accompanied by pianist Carolyn Guzski, an accomplished pianist who has toured throughout the United States.

The series takes a break from its classical presentations on June 27 as it offers the indigenous American music of Garrett County's own Sang Run during the Grantsville Days celebration. The group's traditional acoustic music is heard frequently throughout the tri-state region.

There will be no concert on the Fourth of July holiday.

On July 11 the Amore Duo of American guitarist William Feasley and Russion oboist Vladimir Lande will feature the combined talents of two outstanding young virtuosos. Feasley, who received the coveted Artist Diploma from the Peabody Conservatory, has performed with the San Francisco Ballet and is Artist-in-Residence at the University of Maryland, Baltimore. Lande has served as principal oboist with the Leningrad Philharmonic and is currently on the faculty of St. Mary's College and the Washington Conservatory.

Soprano Nicole Halmos will bring the magic of musical theater to life on July 18 as she presents the history of the art form. Halmos, a Cumberland native, is known not only throughout the region for her talent, but also in her current home of New York City, where she performs in musicals and dramas.

On July 25, the Rock Creek Players, a 10-member ensemble from the Washington, D.C., area, will perform music by Rameau, Villa-Lobos and Schubert. The musicians have played extensively in the D.C. metropolitan area and individually throughout the world.

Four hands piano music will be featured on Aug. 1 as the husband-wife duo of Dana Miller and Gary Steigerwalt perform this unique chamber music, which was a great favorite in the 19th century. The pianists, professors at Mt. Holyoke and Amherst, have appeared frequently at many summer festivals across the country, including the Beethoven Music Festival in New York and Musicorda Festival in Massachusetts, and have released several CDs as well.

The Cygnus Piano Quartet will bring more piano music to Penn Alps on Aug. 8 as Jose Cueto, Julius Wirth, Diana Fish and Nancy Roldan perform in the Great Hall. Well-known to Music at Penn Alps audiences, these artists' individual talent has gained them performances as the White House and the Library of Congress.

To close out the season, the Hot Six Dixieland Jazz group will perform on Aug. 15. Led by music director Jon Bauman, this high-caliber group made up of musicians in the tri-state region will present an evening of traditional jazz.

This year MPA is promoting "Music Lover Passes," which provide a significant savings for multi-use tickets. "The five-ticket pass provides a 20 percent savings over the individual ticket price and the ten-ticket pass provides a 40 percent savings," explained Bohnert. "The tickets can be used all in one night with a group of friends or spread out throughout the summer."

The MPA concert series benefits the nonprofit Spruce Forest Artisan Village and its efforts to promote the region's cultural heritage. "Thanks to the efforts of our program director Fred Bolton," Bohnert said, "Music at Penn Alps also provides the area with quality offerings rich in variety and talent."

For more information regarding the MPA series, interested persons may call 301-895-3332.

ONE OF THE FEATURED PERFORMANCES in the upcoming Music at Penn Alps concert season is a four hands piano concert by husband-wife duo of Dana Miller and Gary Steigerwalt, scheduled for Aug. 1. Four hands piano music was a great favorite in the 19th century, when pianos were nearly as much of a staple in most homes as televisions are today. Miller and Steigerwalt, when not teaching music at Mt. Holyoke and Amherst, can be found performing at many summer festivals across the country. MPA kicks off its 1998 season on May 23 with a cello/violin duo performing music by Ravel, Handel, and others. See story for MPA's full lineup.

Spruce Forest Will Host Sing; Cavin To Play

Janet Umstot Cavin, a Christian pianist from Westernport, will be featured Friday, Feb. 13, in a Community Hymn Sing at the Spruce Forest Village Church, Grantsville. This 7 p.m. community gathering is free and open to the general public, and a free will offering will be taken. Proceeds from the offering will benefit Spruce Forest Artisan Village, a non-profit organization and pioneer village located between the historic 1813 Casselman Bridge and Penn Alps Restaurant and Crafts Shop.

"Spruce Forest is celebrating its 31st anniversary this year, and we welcome everyone to attend the kick-off of our year-long activities and special events," said village administrator Trish Morgan. "Our theme this year is 'Rekindling Memories of Days Gone By'."

Mrs. Cavin has been playing the piano for over 40 years to entertain and minister to nursing home residents, as well as to play for funerals, weddings, and other occasions. She and her husband Fred have lived in Westernport throughout most of their marriage, and they have four children and 11 grandchildren.

Seating is limited to 100 persons at the Community Hymn Sing. Although reservations are not required, interested persons can reserve seating by calling Ms. Morgan at 301-895-3332.

This hymn sing is held in conjunction with Spruce Forest's second annual Cabin Fever Weekend, which is featured at the Village on Friday and Saturday, 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Visitors may stroll through the Village, stopping in to talk with the seven working artisans in their heated log cabins and other rustic buildings. Visitors will have the opportunity to see craftsmanship by Lynn Lais, potter; Jody Best, blacksmith; Ann Jones, weaver; John Daugherty, soap maker; Susan Holt, quilter; Meriam Brode, basketweaver and spinner; and Gary Yoder, bird carver. Complimentary refreshments and doorprizes will be available in the Village Office.

Admission to Cabin Fever Weekend is also free, but donations are appreciated. Buildings other than the artisan studios and Village Office that will be opened are Schrock Cabin (1930); Compton School (c1810); and Village Church (1903). Most every building is heated by either potbelly stoves, fireplaces, or woodburners.

For more information, persons may call Spruce Forest Artisan Village, weekdays, at 301-895-3332.

The dance is a popular annual event, held at the Elks Lodge in Oakland on Feb. 14, from 9 p.m. until 1 a.m. The doors will open at 8 p.m. The band Spektra will provide music for dancing and a cash bar will be available. Tickets are $25 per couple before Feb. 12 or $30 at the door, and $12.50 per single entrant before Feb. 12 or $15 at the door. (Guests must be 21 or older to attend.) The tickets are available now at the following pharmacies: Englander's, Proudfoot's, and Deep Creek, as well as at Arrowhead. "Everyone is invited to come have a great evening and at the same time help support our charities," said Brenda Shaffer, project chairperson. She is pictured above with WKHJ personalities Jim Shaffer (center) and Terry King.

Valentine's Night Will Feature Local Storytellers

Three local storytellers are slated to perform at a Valentine's Couples and Singles evening in the Great Hall at Penn Alps in Grantsville on Saturday, Feb. 14. The event will begin at 8 p.m.

The performers—Gary Yoder, Kenneth Durst, and Jack Dueck—known for their yarns, humorous observations, and folk tales will rotate in turns. "The program will begin with two-minute hilarious tidbits and comic touches, and build into longer pieces, with each teller ending with his favorite longer story," stated a spokesman for the event.

"Penn Alps desired to hold an event to benefit a local charity and gave the choice to the artists. One whose mother suffered from heart disease suggested the American Heart Association. This was quickly seconded by the group as its top choice. On the premise that laughter is good for the heart, the American Heart Association is proud to sponsor and benefit from this event. Befitting the spirit of Valentine's Day, all proceeds will go to the American Heart Association to help in its fight against heart disease and stroke. The storytellers are donating their services as well," the spokesman said.

Advance tickets at a donation of $8 each are available by calling Penn Alps, 125 Casselman Road, Grantsville, MD, at 301-895-5985, any First United National Bank office in Garrett County, or the American Heart Association at 800-684-1000.

Rabbit Production Seminars Hopping Along In The Area

A Rabbit Production Seminar was sponsored recently by Garrett Community College (GCC), in cooperation with the Garrett County Extension office.

The featured speaker was Dr. James McNitt from Southern University, Baton Rouge, La., who covered general rabbit production, breeding practices, feeding and feed stuffs, record keeping, health concerns, and facilities. Dr. McNitt answered questions as well. The seminar was very well attended and participants reported that it was "very informative."

The seminar, held at GCC, was videotaped by the college, and tapes are available by contacting Patsy McKenzie at 301-387-3122 or by contacting the Garrett County Extension office at 301-334-6960.

The Allegany/Garrett Advanced Technology Center (ATC) is planning two workshops for rabbit producers in February. The first will be a "Record-Keeping Workshop" that will stress production and financial records management. Participants will gain hands-on experience in practicing the concepts taught in the workshop, and will also be provided with record-keeping sheets that can be used in their own businesses.

The record-keeping workshop will be held at GCC this Saturday, Feb. 7, from 9:30 a.m. until noon in Room 260. There will be a $10 farm/family fee for this workshop. Registration must be received by tomorrow, Friday, Feb. 6.

The second workshop is titled "Rabbit Health," and is slated for Tuesday, Feb. 17, at 7 p.m. at GCC in Room 155. Dr. Raymond Ediger, field veterinarian for the Maryland Department of Agriculture in Frederick, will give a slide show and answer questions. Dr. Ediger has over 20 years' experience dealing with the health of laboratory animals, during which he managed the Ft. Detrick Animal Production Facilities, which produced rabbits and other lab animals.

There will be a $10 farm/family fee for this workshop. The deadline for registration is Tuesday, Feb. 10.

For further information, or to register for these workshops, interested persons may contact McKenzie at 301-387-3122, or Willie Lantz of GCC's Agriculture Department at 301-387-3021.

The West Virginia Cooperative Extension Service will be sponsoring a "Rabbit Nutrition Workshop" on Saturday, March 7, at the Kingwood Extension office.

The workshop will cover such topics as general nutrition, NCR requirements for rabbits and feed stuff for rabbits. For further information, time, registration, and directions, interested persons may contact Bill Shockey at 304-329-1391.

Notes From Bittinger

by Joan Sussman

Jim and Donna Glotfelty visited Ken and Harriet Buckel on Friday evening. On Sunday evening Ida Reckner hosted a dinner party. Guests included Karmen and Julius Carey, Frostburg, the Lisa Platter family, Smithfield, Lillian Reckner, McHenry, Tom and Cheryl Glotfelty and sons, and Jim and Donna Glotfelty.

On February 2, the groundhogs in Bittinger definitely saw their shadow. This, according to Ida Reckner, means six more weeks of bad weather. Since around here we have not had real winter or any bad weather, I wonder what that means. Six more weeks. I guess that brings us to mid March. "In like a lamb and out like a lion." I sure hope that means we will no longer have to contend with the awful freezing rain and very little snow. Since the weather has not cooperated with outdoor winter activities, we have become overly dependent on TV to entertain us. This was a terrible state of affairs since the only thing on the last several weeks related to the scandal in the White House. What have we come to? Have you ever heard of a less juicy scandal? It is pathetic. At least we have the winter Olympics to look forward to. This means plenty of downhill skiing, bobsledding, and ice skating, even if it is only on TV. Speaking of ice skating, it just won't be the same without the amusing antics of Tonya Harding and Nancy Kerrigan.

Enough of this nonsense. Let's get on with the real Bittinger news.

Jim and Margaret Wagner attended an insurance conference in Charlotte, Va., January 27-29. Michelle Geiss and her friend Charles Wesley, both students at Virginia Tech, spent the weekend with her family, Sam and Ellen Housley. They enjoyed part of the weekend skiing at the Wisp. Sam, Ellen, and Brent Housley attended a Saturday game two weeks ago between the Maryland Terrapins and Clemson Tigers. The following Sunday, Sam and Brent returned to College Park to cheer the Terps on to their victory over Virginia. Those die-hard Terp fans. Nothing can stop them.

Ruth DiPaolo is currently on a sun-drenched vacation, taking a cruise through the Caribbean with her friends from Virginia, Betty and Ellis Sacra and Margaret. She will return to Garrett County this Friday evening.

We are only part way through with the scandalous news from Bittinger. Not much competition for the White House, is it?

Also catching some rays was Dale Glotfelty, who with Helen Englar, flew to sunny Las Cruces, N.M., to visit their sister, Dorothy Quaintance. Sister Betty Hummel and husband Ralph joined them there.

The Emmanuel Women of the ELCA held two recent meetings to plan new projects and work on their budget. The video, "A Bridge to a Bright Future," was shown during one of the meetings.

The biggest news from the Sussman family was that our 11-year-old, Claire, completed her 4-H record book two weeks before the deadline. More importantly, she did it on her own with very little nagging from her grandmother or me. I was very proud of her. My husband asked me, "What happens to a kid that doesn't do it?" I don't know. I remember when I was in 4-H, everyone just knew it had to be done every year. It was part of your duty as a 4-H member. Sometimes I was not as motivated as Claire, but could always count on my parents prodding to get the job done. Of course, the payoff came at achievement night as one accumulated prizes for projects completes in a satisfactory manner. I used to love the little pins they gave you. I accumulated a considerable collection of them in dairy, horsemanship, judging, and public speaking. My biggest thrill was at 17, when I won a trip to the National 4-H Congress in Chicago for placing first in Maryland with my book. Every meal was a big production number sponsored by large corporations. It was great food and entertainment. Best of all, President Richard Nixon gave an inspirational speech.

I have many fond memories of 4-H while growing up in Bittinger. Filling out the record book was probably not one of them, however. Filling out feed records for my dairy cow, training records for my horse, and calculating net profit or loss on all my projects is not what usually occupies a typical teenager's mind. I can remember desperately searching for photographs and news clippings to paste in the book. Of course, there was also that obligatory two-page narrative story on all the years' activities. It was a time of stress and panic and prepared me well as an adult for income tax preparation time. Now I find I worry even more when it is my daughter. It would disgrace me as a 4-H All-Star if my kids did not perform well. When I taught at Garrett Community College I was always stunned at how well 4 club alumni performed guess hard work does off in the long run. This, course, is all a mystery Lloyd, who grew up Silver Spring.

is tremendous growth potential. The gift market is enormous in this country, generating literally billions of dollars."

The company currently owns 10 retail stores, and there will be a retail outlet at the Garrett County plant. They also sell glass products wholesale to approximately 200 other outlets in the country.

The company also added pottery to its line of products about two years ago, but Pearce said the plans for the Garrett County plant do not at this time include a pottery division. "My father was a potter, which is one of the reasons I decided to add it to our line of products," he said, "but we've really just started producing it, so we're still not sure about its growth. Glass is, by far, our main product."

Pearce said that the great majority of employees in the Garrett County plant would be locally hired. "Only about six out of 70 of our employees in Windsor were not local residents," he said, "and they were the skilled people who trained the new employees."

He said that there are no special talents that are needed to become a glass blower. "A person does not even have to be artistic," he said. "A little bit of hand-eye coordination is helpful, but attitude is the most important thing, because it is demanding, hot work."

Pearce said that he considers his employees as the company's "greatest asset," and that because of that attitude, he maintains a "very good relationship" with the employees. He is also an owner who knows every aspect of how custom glass is produced.

"I blew glass every day for 20 years," he said. "I haven't blown for a couple of years, but I continue to do all of the designing."

Pearce said that the modern methods of blowing glass, unlike the rigorous, health-damaging methods of several decades ago, "takes about as much wind as talking." He said it will take only a few months for the new employees to be skilled enough to produce top-quality glass.

"Let's just say that, for the first few months, we will have a lot of seconds available!" he said.

Actual start-up this fall depends on several things, Pearce said. "We have to do some renovating of the building, we have to work out the final deal with the state, and we have to have a lot of lead time for some of our specialized equipment, such as our custom-made furnaces."

Pearce said he is also aware of and sensitive to the importance of supporting other local businesses and trade people. "We will purchase as much of our materials and services as we can locally," he said, adding that, in terms of natural materials, the local facility will use only about two tons of sand per day.

"One of the nice things about our business is that we have absolute control of the product from beginning to end, from its basic material (sand) right into the hands of our customers," Pearce said. "It has proven to be a stable, steady business with tremendous growth potential. We have never laid off a single worker in 30 years."

Among those accompanying Pearce on his visit last week were company manager P.J. Skehan and human resources manager Beverly Widger. Garrett County Commissioner Wayne Wilt noted that he had received a call from Governor Parris Glendening just moments before Pearce arrived at the commissioners' office.

"The governor said he is very pleased that Simon Pearce has selected Garrett County for his next expansion and he extended his congratulations to all county residents," Wilt said.

Among others greeting Pearce at the commissioners' office were Jim Hinebaugh, director of economic development; Criss Kepple, chairman of the Garrett County Economic Development Corporation; Oakland Mayor Asa McCain; and David Moe, co-president of the Garrett County Chamber of Commerce, who presented Pearce with a gallon of Garrett County maple syrup.

Rams On A Winning Roll, Defeat Huskies And Wildcats

Currently on a winning roll is the Southern High School boys' varsity basketball team, which won its fourth and fifth straight contests this past week by topping visiting Northern last Friday, 70-60, and rallying Tuesday evening to stop Westmar, 51-42, also in Oakland. The pair of Western Maryland Interscholastic League victories upped the Rams' league mark to 8-2 and their overall record to 11-6.

Junior guard John Andrews paced the Rams' offensive effort against the Northern Huskies, as he finished with 19 points, while three of his teammates also reached double figures. Mike Pamepinto netted 15 points, Mike Paesani recorded 13, and Josh Helbig had 12.

The Rams took control of the contest early by jumping out to a 24-12 lead by the end of the first quarter. The Huskies cut the margin to 10 points, 40-30, by halftime, but were outscored in the third stanza by a 20-9 margin to give the Rams a commanding 60-39 advantage going into the final period. The Huskies did manage to cut Southern's lead to seven points midway through the final stanza, but could get no closer.

Scott Sisler hit a game-high 21 points for the Huskies, including 15 from three-point range, while Dustin Long and Rob Dozier also reached double figures with 15 and 11 points, respectively.

The Rams played a sluggish first half against Westmar on Tuesday, but slowly took control of the contest in the second half and kept the Wildcats at arm's length until the final buzzer. Southern was up by three at the end of the first quarter, 12-9, and trailed by one at intermission, 21-20, before out-scoring the visitors in the third quarter by a 16-8 margin to take a 37-30 lead into the final period.

See story for details of both the Northern-Southern contest, as well as those of a Southern win over Westmar on Tuesday.

The Southern junior varsity was also victorious in the first game over the Westmar jayvees, 50-39, as Mike Browning led the Rams' scoring with 13 points and Ryan White added 11. David Ziler had a game-high 14 points for the Wildcats. It was the 12th win in 15 starts for the Southern jayvees.

The Rams will play again next Tuesday at Beall.

Rams Pull Out Last-Minute Win Over Huskies, Fall To Indians

The county's high school girls' basketball teams dueled into the final seconds of their Friday matchup as the Southern Rams came back on their home court to down Northern's Huskies 48-44. A 64-57 loss at Mt. Savage followed on Monday night, which drops the Rams' record to 8-7 overall, 5-3 in the Western Maryland Interscholastic League. Northern, which had a home contest with Flintstone canceled because of weather Wednesday night, stands at 9-6 overall after its sole contest of the week.

Northern was up by six late in the fourth quarter, but clutch foul shooting by Jessica Saturday, who tied the score with a pair of free throws with 36 seconds left, and Liz Paesani, who followed by hitting four consecutive foul shots, gave Southern the victory.

The Rams had jumped out to a 17-9 lead in the first period and had a 27-18 advantage at the half. Northern battled back to take a 34-33 lead at the end of the third quarter, but was not able to hold on as mainstays Brooke Brenneman, Jill Speicher, and Heidi Frazee all fouled out toward the end of the contest.

Saturday finished with 20 points and Paesani 12 points, and the pair took down 10 rebounds apiece. Brenneman held game-high scoring honors with 24 points for Northern.

Northern's junior varsity defeated Southern behind Heather Nugent's 31 points. Charlena Reeves scored 13 points for the Rams.

At Mt. Savage, the scoring duo of Heather Abucevicz and Mary Beth Kennell led the Indians to a seven-point win over the Rams. Abucevicz tallied 22 points, including 10 field goals, while Kennell's career-high 20 points came on eight field goals and a perfect four-for-four from the free throw line.

Southern, which had been down by a basket at the end of the first quarter, battled back to take a three-point halftime lead, then trailed at the opening of the final period.

Bridget Miller led all scorers with 24 points for the Rams, six coming on two three-point goals. Saturday tallied 14 points, and Paesani ended the evening with 10 points.

Looking ahead in girls' high school basketball action, Southern had been slated to host Fort Hill tonight, but that game is canceled on account of weather. The Rams go on the road next week to visit Allegany on Monday and Tucker County on Thursday.

The Northern Huskies travel to Beall on Monday and Mt. Savage on Wednesday.

Huskies Fall To Southern And Allegany

The varsity boys of Northern High School dropped a pair of games this past week, falling to host Southern on Friday, 70-60 (see separate story), and then being handed an 86-68 defeat by visiting Allegany on Tuesday. The pair of losses dropped the Huskies' overall record to 4-11 and their Western Maryland Interscholastic League mark to 1-7.

It appeared early in Tuesday's game against Allegany that an upset was in the making, as the Huskies jumped out to a 20-9 lead and were up 20-13 at the end of the first quarter. But the favored Campers answered with a 22-4 run to take a 34-28 advantage by halftime. The Huskies then won the third quarter by a 25-24 margin to trail 58-53 going into the final stanza.

Northern's junior center Dustin Long, who finished with 26 points, scored seven of the first nine points in the fourth quarter, and a free throw by Husky Matt Houser knotted the score at 60-60 with just under six minutes remaining in the game. But that would be the last gasp by the Huskies, as the Campers erupted for a 17-0 run that put the game out of reach.

Nik Gates, who hit a game-high 31 points to lead Allegany, sparked the final run with a number of steals, lay-ups, and assists.

Besides finishing with 26 points, Long also recorded 10 rebounds and 10 blocked shots for a triple-double evening. Scott Sisler and Rob Dozier each scored 14 points and Craig Kamp contributed six assists.

Also reaching double figures for Allegany were Damien DuVall with 13 points, and Rob Stansbury and David Miller with 12 each.

The Northern junior varsity was topped in the opening game by a 60-47 margin, with Nathan Simpson scoring 26 points for the Allegany jayvees. Greg Speicher and Steve Smith paced Northern with 14 and 12 points, respectively.

Coach Mike Friend's Huskies are slated to play again this Friday at home against Beall, travel to Meyersdale next Monday, and then host Westmar on Tuesday.

Lakers Split JUCO Games, Top Dundalk, Lose To Germantown

A strong performance by the Garrett Community College men's basketball team Saturday evening at home led to an 87-69 Maryland JUCO victory over Dundalk Community College, but on Monday night the Lakers let visiting Montgomery-Germantown rally in the final minutes of a make-up game and they went down to an 80-71 JUCO defeat. The split left the Lakers with an overall record of 15-6 and a JUCO mark of 8-5.

Michael Fields led the Laker attack against Dundalk, as he pumped in 20 points, grabbed 14 of the Lakers' 46 rebounds, and dished out four assists. Rob Wheeler was right behind in scoring with 18 points, Timmy Pitcher netted 14 points, and Eric Papcun reached double figures with 10.

The Lakers held a comfortable lead throughout most of the game, and were on top by a 47-33 margin at halftime.

Leading Dundalk's scoring were Tyree Canty and Brandon Hopson with 20 and 19 points, respectively. Shavery Garrison scored 10 points and pulled down 15 of the Lions' 44 rebounds.

"Our defensive play, our rebounding, and our success at attacking their press were the major keys to our victory," stated GCC coach Dennis Gibson.

The Lakers seemed to be in reasonable control of Monday's contest with Germantown, at least until the 4:30 mark of the game when they were ahead by four, 69-65, but let the visitors go on a 15-2 run. Garrett built a 16-2 lead in the opening minutes of the game and was on top by a 35-28 margin at intermission.

Having a huge game for Germantown was Derrick Price, who poured in 31 points and grabbed 19 rebounds. Tom Roth finished with 17 points and Gabe Komo recorded 12 points, six assists, and three steals.

Fields again led the Lakers in scoring with 21 points and had a pair of steals. Jerome Adams netted 16 points and Lionell Sewell finished with 14 points, 13 rebounds, and two steals.

The Lakers were slated to play Montgomery-Rockville last night on the road, but the contest was postponed because of weather. They will play at Essex on Saturday, host Potomac State College on Monday, and entertain Anne Arundel CC next Wednesday.

Ram Freshmen Lose One, Win One By A Pair

The freshman boys' basketball team of Southern High School dropped a heartbreaker to host Keyser on Saturday, falling by a 40-38 margin in the final seconds, but then came back Monday to record a big two-point victory over Allegany, 52-50, in Cumberland. The split left Coach Jon Hegeman's team with an 11-4 record.

The contest with Keyser was tight from the opening tipoff, as the Rams held a 12-10 lead at the end of the first quarter, they were up by one, 19-18, at halftime, and the score was tied at 31-31 at the end of the third period. A rebound and put-back by Keyser's James Altobello with 15 seconds to play gave the Golden Tornado the two-point win.

Altobello scored 16 points, nine in the fourth quarter, to lead Keyser, while Rams Steve Eiswert scored 10 points and Bryan Panther added eight. Mike Saturday and Keith Steyer excelled defensively for the Rams.

"Keyser beat us off the dribble and our post defenders were forced to help, which did not give us good rebounding position," Coach Hegeman said. "Their second and third shots really hurt."

In Tuesday's game with Allegany, the Rams never trailed, but also could not manage to build a lead of more than six points.

Justin DiSimone paced the Rams' scoring effort with 14 points. Ryan Ewing, Jamie Bonley, Eiswert, and Josh Sharon combined for 31 points.

"This was a total team win," Hegeman said. "We received outstanding contributions from 10 players and defeated a very strong Allegany team. Justin DiSimone did an outstanding job controlling the tempo."

The Southern freshmen will play again this evening at Frankfort in a make-up contest and will host Tucker County on Saturday at 2 p.m.

Local Dirtbikers Place High In National Rankings

Local dirtbike riders Lee Wolf, Larry Black, and Leroy Virts were honored at the Grand National Cross Country Motorcycle Banquet in Uniontown, Pa., recently. Over the past year, the trio competed in the 16 events of the 1997 National Series, which included races in Florida, Georgia, Ohio, West Virginia, Pennsylvania, and Indiana.

Wolf, who races on a KDX200 Kawasaki dirtbike, finished sixth in the 200C class and 155th overall in the national rankings. Black, an XR400 Honda rider, took ninth in the SeniorB class and 128th overall in the nation, while Virts rode his YZ250 Yamaha to seventh place in the 250C class and 157th place in the nation.

The National Series drew thousands of amateur riders and hundreds of professional riders, including Scott Summers, who took the national title for the fourth time. The series contests of races held in heavily wooded areas with closed-loop racing on tracks ranging from 8 to 20 miles in length. The races last from three to four hours, testing the riders' stamina and endurance on rough cross country trails through mud, hill climbs, and tight turns.

Wolf, Black, and Virts also competed in the National Outlaw Cross Country Series, with races in West Virginia and Maryland, including three local races near Shallmar. Wolf took second in the 200B class and ninth overall, Black finished first in the Vet class and 12th overall, and Virts took fourth in the 250B class and sixth overall.

All three local riders will be competing in both series again in 1998, with a National Outlaw Series race slated for March 29 in Garrett County.

G-Force Member Finishes Third

Amanda Perry, Oakland, who is a member of the G-Force gymnastics team, Morgantown, W.Va., competed in the Judges Cup Meet in Parkersburg recently and finished third in her age group.

Amanda, who is a daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Rick Perry, earned a score of 7.2 on the vault, 7.8 on bars, 8.45 on balance beam, and 7.75 on the floor exercise for an overall score of 31.20. She competes in the Level 5 compulsory for girls ages 7-8.

GCC Ski Team Competes At Elk Mountain

The Garrett Community College alpine ski team opened its 1998 season recently by competing in slalom and giant slalom events at Elk Mountain Resort in Pennsylvania against a number of teams from major, four-year universities. As a team, the Lakers finished fifth in the giant slalom and sixth in the slalom against teams from West Virginia University, Penn State, the University of Maryland, the Naval Academy, Bucknell, the University of Pennsylvania, Pittsburgh, and West Chester College.

Because of a seeding error, the GCC team started the slalom at the end of the order. Scott Doolan, Mike Sassano, and E.J. Scofield, all of McHenry, started 133rd, 134th, and 135th, but finished the first run in 16th, 24th, and seven places, respectively.

After re-seeding for the second run, Doolan started 24th and finished the day in 15th place, Sassano started 32nd and finished in 24th, and Scofield started eighth and finished in third place.

The giant slalom was changed to a one-run event, and Doolan placed 22nd, Bobby Gray of Oakland finished 14th, Sassano placed 35th, and Scofield finished third, after starting in 78th position. Scofield was second overall in the combined totals.

The total points for both days determined the placings for the teams.

Competing for the Naval Academy's women's A team were Garrett County sisters Rachael and Stephenie Gosnell. Rachael placed eighth in the slalom and Stephenie finished 12th in the giant slalom among approximately 50 racers.

In the giant slalom, Stephenie finished ninth and Rachael, 13th.

The next race for the GCC team will be a conference-wide competition at Timberline Resort in Canaan Valley, W.Va., this weekend.

Preston, Bender Perform Well In Philadelphia Meet

Local gymnasts Laura Preston and Andi Bender received awards for their performances last weekend in Philadelphia, where gymnasts from New Jersey, Maryland, Pennsylvania, and West Virginia competed.

Preston took several honors for her age group of 9-11 year olds by earning the top score on vault (7.95), second highest score on floor exercise (8.95), fourth on bars (8.80), and fifth on balance beam (8.50). She won top all-around honors for level 8 competitors by finishing the meet with a score of 34.20. Laura is the daughter of James and Liane Preston of Oakland.

Bender posted a first place win for her uneven bars routine by earning the top score of 8.90 among all level 9 competitors. She placed second on floor exercise (8.35) and third on balance beam (8.25). She finished the meet in second place among level 9 athletes age 15-18 for her score of 33.60. Andi is the daughter of Dave and Lisa Bender of Mtn. Lake Park.

Both girls will travel to Cincinnati this weekend for a meet at Xavier University.

X-Country Ski Clinic Set For New Germany

A cross country ski clinic for beginners and those interested in improving cross country ski skills will be held on Saturday, Feb. 14, beginning at 9 a.m. at the New Germany State Park lakehouse. The clinic will be held snow or shine, regardless of weather conditions.

Instruction will be provided by Rita Routhier, a Frostburg resident and native of Finland, Department of Natural Resources (DNR) naturalist Wanda Reynolds, and Savage River State Park Complex superintendent Mike Gregory. The day's agenda will include videotapes on gliding techniques, discussions on proper equipment, demonstrations and coaching, and, if snow permits, guided ski expeditions on the New Germany trails will commence shortly after noon and last throughout the afternoon.

The cost of the clinic is $10 per person, with special family rates available. Normal park entrance fees will be waived for those attending the clinic. Although refreshments will be provided, participants are asked to bring their own lunch if skiing conditions prevail.

For further information or to register, interested persons should call 301-895-5759 or 301-243-4627. If there is snow on the ground on the day of the clinic and equipment rental is needed, participants may call 301-689-8515.

believe the feeling was mutual all the way around. I am already looking forward to next year's program. If ever there is a youth/oldster ski day here in Garrett County, my recommendation would be for Leo to lead the program. I could say lots more about all of the others involved in this effort, but then The Republican would have to run a special edition just for that.

To the Editor:

Governor Parris Glendening's visit to Broad Ford Elementary School in support of his "Be a Rising Star ...Read to Achieve" program was successful due to the efforts of many.

A very hearty thank you is extended to the Broad Ford Elementary School community for its flexibility and support during the governor's visit. The Broad Ford staff and parent volunteers provided an inviting setting for those visiting the school. Since Governor Glendening was not able to arrive at the school until 3:30 p.m., parents of students involved in the reading activity were asked to provide transportation for their children, and we were very pleased that every family was able to make arrangements. And most importantly, Mrs. Nancy Stewart's second grade students represented the Garrett County Public Schools in an exemplary manner. Thank you!

Governor Glendening was clearly impressed by Garrett County's business and community support for the "Be a Rising Star" reading program. He noticed on his drive through Garrett County that many local businesses had displayed their support of the reading program on their marquees. He also noted the discount incentive offered by the Book Mark'et. Ms. Sheila Miller, reading specialist, presented the governor with a portfolio containing information about the various businesses and organizations which have supported this reading incentive program, and the governor plans to share this effort as a model with other communities.

On behalf of the Garrett County Board of Education, thank you to the business community and the community at large for supporting the importance of reading. And parents, don't forget to take advantage of the Book Mark'et's offer of a 20% discount on a book purchase. Hopefully, the Book Mark'et is prepared for the arrival of students, as we expect every elementary and middle school student to read ten books this school year and therefore earn the governor's certificate.

With sincere appreciation,
Brenda McCartney

To the Editor:

Last Tuesday, January 27, around 7 p.m., fifty or so people braved a snowstorm to attend the Smart Growth meeting at the GCC auditorium. The meeting, originally scheduled to last an hour, lasted more than two hours. Most people stayed to the end, in spite of the fact the President's State of the Union message had started by the time the meeting ended. It was impressive to see that many people at a meeting about government on such a stormy evening.

The presentation by John Frece and Nancy Ansel of the governor's office was excellent. Afterward Mr. Frece took questions, and when appropriate directed them to Al Feldstein or John Nelson, regional and local planning directors. The question and answer session was as well managed as any I have ever witnessed under government auspices. There were a couple of instances when testiness might have been excused, but the urge if it existed at all was resisted. All questions were fielded with respect, and to the extent possible, answers were given. When an answer could not be given on the spot, the questioner was given a contact with whom to follow up to obtain answers.

Because Smart Growth provides for local decision-making by county commissioners, it was great to see Commissioners Wilt and Fratz there, as well as Jim Hinebaugh and others from GC Economic Development and the planners noted above. The Garrett County commissioners are the final decision making body on Smart Growth issues. Attending the meeting demonstrated their interest in hearing about the program as presented to ordinary citizens. They will at least have some idea what those of us with questions have as background on this issue.

My main purpose for attending was to discover what provisions for public hearings were in the Smart Growth legislation. The answer is that there are no public hearings required. None whatever. There is an assumption that hearings will be held, but no requirement. While follow-up news articles on Smart Growth should cover the rationale for the lack of mandated public hearings prior to the phasing in of Smart Growth, I believe the issue is important enough to address now.

Timely public hearings can prevent most misunderstandings and errors in local planning and development. The opportunity to examine proposals and to support them or to petition to change disagreeable proposals is fundamental to our American way of life. In the past in Garrett County, too much planning, including education issues, economic development, and land use, was done in a relative vacuum and on too short a fuse.

This is not to criticize the way it has been done in the past. It is to get on the table the desire of many citizens, including the members of GC/CARE (sponsors of last Tuesdays Smart Growth forum), for the county commissioners to mandate timely public meetings with regard to Smart Growth and other issues affecting the governance of Garrett County. An informed public is an asset to local good will toward government and toward visitors to the area.

I hope that citizens will protect their land rights and their stake in how Garrett County develops by requesting timely public hearings. It is a three-word phrase: timely public hearings. When millions of dollars are at stake, there is no reason hearings can't be held three or four months in advance of decision deadlines. The historic 30 days is not sufficient today. Too much money and too

WHY ARE THERE MORE BEARS?

For the last few years there have been increased sightings of black bears in and around Garrett County. Ten years ago, contacts between Ursus Americanus (American black bear) and humans were relatively rare. But now bears are seen, not only in wilderness areas, but also around campgrounds, garbage cans, and backyard bird feeders.

What happened to cause the explosion in the population of black bears here? It seems the growing black bear population is the result of several factors. Certainly a major factor is the generally improving habitat in the form of thriving forests and ample food sources. These improved habitat conditions prompted a bear reintroduction-through-relocation program in southwestern Pennsylvania. In this program, female bears with cubs were relocated from the Pocono Mountain region to southern Pennsylvania counties immediately to the north of Garrett County. The success of this program, coupled with bear management programs employed in West Virginia, generated an influx of bears into Garrett County.

The excellent habitat offered in western Maryland encouraged migrant male bears to stay and breed with resident females. This produced a growth in population, though the numbers aren't nearly as high as Pennsylvania's yet. (The estimated resident bear population of Maryland is only around 200 or so, while Pennsylvania's is well over 10,000.)

Here are some interesting facts about our black bear residents.

The lifespan of a black bear in the wild can be 25 to 30 years. Although not as large as the brown bear, there have been black bears in neighboring Pennsylvania counties weighing over 800 pounds. And, as large as they are, these bruins can be remarkably quick. They are capable of running at 30 miles an hour over short distances.

Female black bears have home range areas that vary from two to 10 square miles, while males will have ranges of 10 to 40 square miles. These ranges may not be one large area, but can be composed of several smaller food source areas connected by travel lanes. Black bears generally avoid open areas and will use stream or creek beds as convenient avenues.

Black bears mark their territories through scent marks and claw marks on trees and are normally solitary animals, except for females traveling with cubs. There are exceptions to this. A pair may stay together for a few days during mating season and several bears may feed together if there is abundant food.

TWO WORLD RECORDS in hunting were recently established by Swanton resident Ron Beeghly on a hunting excursion in Australia. Beeghly is the first person ever to bag an Asian water buffalo and a Rusa deer with a muzzleloader. He also harvested a South American sambar deer, which was only the second one on record taken by a muzzleloader. Beeghly's trophies were scored/authenticated at his home by Mike Wisseman, an official scorer for Safari Club International. Photos of Beeghly and his trophies are currently on display at the Safari Club International Show in Reno, Nev., and they will also be on display at the Eastern Sportsman Show in Harrisburg, Pa., which opens this Saturday. Beeghly hunted with Hotspur Outback Safaris in Queensland, Australia, and owner Mike Mackay. Beeghly's accomplishments have been published in the Safari Club International magazine.

ARCHERY LEAGUES IN FULL SWING

Dan Milavec of D & B Sport Shop in Deer Park reports that their indoor league has posted leaders after their first week of shooting. Early leaders are the team of Terry Lucas, Mike Fulmer, and Zane Kisner. Close on their heels is the team of Jamie Streets, Ricky Jones, and Michael Droppleman.

Jimmy Iden at Appalachian Mountain Crafts reports that the top men shooters in their league are Lonnie Artice (269), Greg Iden (268), Keith Harman (263), and Bobby Morgan, Phil Margroff, and Jimmy Iden tied at 256. Women leaders are Cheryl Iden (247), Sandy Iden (239), April Enlow (218), Julie Iden (211), and Kelly Fulmer (206).

DEER HARVEST REPORT

The DNR announced that preliminary estimates indicate that deer hunters harvested 35,945 deer during the recent two week firearms hunting season. This is a 3% increase over the 1996 harvest of 34,766. The five leading counties were Allegany (3,335), Washington (3,163), Garrett (3,067), Frederick (2,840), and Dorchester (2,488).

Here are some more interesting statistics. During the 1996-97 deer season, firearm hunters accounted for 63% of the state's total deer harvest. Approximately 85% of all deer harvested during the firearms season are taken off private lands. Hunters using rifles account for about 54% of the deer taken during the firearms season while shotgun hunters account for about 45%.

STATISTICS ON WHY HUNTERS HUNT

"America Outdoors" Weekly News and Events Report claims that hunters hunt for a variety of reasons. Forty-three percent hunt for recreation and sport, 25% hunt for meat, 21% hunt to be close to nature, and 12% hunt to be with family and friends. The number of hunters who hunt primarily for recreation, or to be with family and friends, has remained relatively stable. Those who hunt to obtain meat have declined in number. Those who hunt to be close to nature have increased in number.

SUBSTANCES THAT CAN BE DANGEROUS TO YOUR DOG

Also from "America Outdoors"—Did you know that chocolate in large amounts can be fatal to your dog? In lesser amounts it can cause vomiting, diarrhea, hyperactivity, muscle tremors, and/or irregular heartbeat. Unsweetened baker's chocolate is even more dangerous, as it contains a higher concentration of theobromine.

Also, large amounts of cooked or raw onions can cause anemia. A few laps of ethylene glycol (anti-freeze) can be fatal. Antifreeze made with propylene glycol is considered safer. It is marketed under the names of Eco-3, Sta-Clean, and Sierra.

Omission Noted

curred with Frece's statement. "No, there's no requirement for public hearings regarding Smart Growth," he said. "At the local level Smart Growth is a planning issue that would be referred through the county's Office of Planning and Zoning because it affects land use planning, and an economic issue handled through the Office of Economic Development because it affects plans for economic development." He added that both of those offices participate in public meetings, through the planning commission meetings and the Garrett County commissioners meetings on a regularly scheduled basis.

John Nelson, director of the Garrett County Office of Planning and Zoning, confirmed Frece's and Pagenhardt's comments. "While it is a fact that no public meetings are required in regard to the implementation of the Smart Growth initiatives on the local level, the legislation's effects will be part of the public discussion at our regularly scheduled Planning Commission meetings, held ously identified growth areas, but there's only so far we can go to meet both the Smart Growth criteria and our Comprehensive Plan in order to get state funds. It will be a very limited land area that does.

"Before people jump to conclusions," Nelson added, "please study the plan's growth map. Our growth areas already identified in the Comprehensive Plan are really limited to areas around existing towns and development, and these areas could very well shrink due to Smart Growth."

the first Wednesday of each month to which the public is invited to attend and participate.

"The 1995 Comprehensive Master Plan for the county will be the basis for starting to prioritize PFAs," Nelson continued. "Our staff will be identifying areas in the county where the density criteria of Smart Growth's requirements meet the Comprehensive Plan. Towns, rural (unincorporated) villages, and other areas where possible Smart Growth applications would be studied would have to fit a narrow band of criteria, meeting certain densities and water/sewer lines either already in place or planned," he said.

"It's difficult for people to get a flavor for growth areas without looking at the Comprehensive Plan's map. We want to optimize previ-

"HotSpot" Group Urges Residents To Get Involved

Since Grantsville was designated as Garrett County's "HotSpot," efforts have been under way by members of a task force to involve community residents in programs that will enhance town safety.

Last summer, towns across Maryland were selected to receive grants to develop initiatives that would lead to a reduction in crime through education, heightened awareness, youth activities, and partnerships between law enforcement and citizens.

Sharon Lipscomb is the coordinator for Grantsville's community mobilization activities under HotSpot auspices. Her group has launched a town newsletter to inform residents of meetings, events, and additional programs available through the HotSpot initiative. "We have the youth in the community deliver the newsletter door-to-door; this strengthens community relationships," Lipscomb said.

Crime Watch neighborhood activities are increasing in Grantsville, and Lipscomb's group is facilitating its growth. "The committee is in the process of ordering Neighborhood Community Crime Watch signs," she said. The group will also disseminate information on how to respond to suspicious activity in the neighborhood.

Another project that has resulted from the HotSpot grant is the after-school program held at the Grantsville Senior Center. Children from grades 4 through 8 can participate in activities, get tutoring or help with homework, and have a snack.

Police are providing extra patrols in Grantsville and the state's attorney's office is providing personnel to be available in the town office on the second Friday of each month from 10 a.m. until noon and 1-4 p.m., beginning Feb. 13.

A fly-tying class is also on the agenda to promote community interaction and to provide an activity for residents. The class will be held every Thursday afternoon at Grantsville Elementary School beginning Feb. 5.

Basically a family community, Grantsville also is home to many retired people, Lipscomb explained. "Most residents feel their community is beautiful and safe, but it's not without its problems," she commented.

"The HotSpot program is designed to reclaim space from crime and fear, to involve youth and seniors, and to encourage residents to band together and push for a safe, clean community to live in."

and there were no injuries reported.

According to Deputy Fire Marshal Steve Wendling, the exact cause of the fire remains under investigation; however, a family spokesperson said that it was most likely a result of an electrical problem. Wendling said that the family has insurance on their property.

After initial assistance by the American Red Cross, members of the Rounds family moved in with relatives, according to a family spokesperson.

National Child Passenger Safety Week Proclaimed For Feb. 8-14

Garrett County's Highway Safety Program is urging families to spread the word and recognize February 8-14 as National Child Passenger Safety Week.

"Motor vehicle injury is the leading killer of children more than one year of age," said Diane Lee, Garrett County's Highway Safety Coordinator. "Too many children are seriously injured or killed in preventable crashes."

According to the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration (NHTSA), child safety seats, when used correctly, can reduce fatalities of children less than 5 years of age by 71 percent, making them one of the most effective safety innovations ever developed.

"Parents can help establish safe patterns of behavior by making sure that children age 12 and under always ride buckled up or in properly installed child safety seats in the back seat," Lee said.

"Children have to depend on their parents to use the right safety seat—infant, toddler/convertible or booster seat—and use it correctly," she continued. "NHTSA recommends rear-facing seats until a child is 20 pounds and at least 1 year of age; forward-facing for 40 pounds, and booster seats until the child can use the vehicle's seat belts."

Not only do parents need to choose the correct seat, they also must install it correctly. NHTSA's studies have shown that as many as 80 percent of the child seats being used today are used incorrectly.

"Incompatibility between child safety seats, safety belts, and vehicle seats is one reason why child safety seats are not installed correctly," Lee said. "I tell everyone to make sure they read the owners manual for their vehicle and the instructions for their child safety seat to make sure they are doing everything correctly, giving their child the best possible protection."

Another compatibility problem involves passenger-side air bags, which save adults, but can be harmful to children.

"I can't emphasize enough that rear-facing child seats should never be used in the front seat of a vehicle with a passenger-side air bag," Lee said. "The deploying bag striking a rear-facing infant seat can result in fatal injuries to a child. Put it in the back seat, facing rearward. The safest place for all children is in the back seat of a vehicle, and properly restrained."

Because the most dangerous collisions are head on, an infant must always be seated rear-facing until at least one year of age and about 20 pounds. The rear facing position cradles the baby's head and neck and spreads the crash forces along the baby's body to lessen the impact and reduce the possibility of neck and spinal cord injury.

"Parents are often in too big a hurry to move their child out of the toddler seat, Lee said. "Many skip the use of booster seats, putting their child in danger because the seat belts are designed for adults and do not fit the child's smaller frame correctly."

"I found out in a NHTSA training I attended in January, that the vehicle's seat belts often do not fit children correctly until they weigh about 80 pounds," Lee said. To fit correctly, the lap belt must stay low on the child's hips and should not ride up across the abdomen, and the shoulder belt shouldn't cross in front of the child's face or neck. In a crash, an out of place belt could cause severe damage or allow the child to slide out of the belt.

All the different variables make it difficult to be sure you have your seat installed correctly. "To provide the best possible protection for your child, read over the following list and make sure your child is properly restrained," Lee said.

- Read instructions for child safety seat and your owner's manual for your vehicle.
- Make sure you are using the correct size/type of restraint for your child.
- Make sure your child safety seat has not been recalled because of a problem with crash worthiness (call NHTSA's Auto Safety Hotline, 1-800-424-9393 for a list of recalled seats).
- Make sure the safety belt is threaded through the correct belt path for the position you are using.
- Always anchor the child safety seat to the vehicle with seat belts and make sure the belt is tight.
- Use a locking clip if your vehicle safety belts need it to stay tight (check belt labels, vehicles owner's manual, child seat instructions).
- Always buckle the child into the child safety seat, make sure the harness straps are snug and position the harness clip at armpit height.

DOWN TO THE WIRE - As Yough Glades Elementary School was being prepared for its opening next week, volunteers rallied to get computer wiring completed. The generous help of these folks got the work done in a timely, expert, and inexpensive manner. This triple bonus to the school system has been much appreciated. The crew of volunteers has wrestled miles of wire on behalf the students and tax payers of Garrett County. Making the final connections are Jim Crabtree, left, and Buck Trautwein, both retired Bell Atlantic employees. Others of the volunteer team who worked on the wire pulling project but are not pictured here are Clarence Stem, Jim Miller, Audie Friend, Dick Kitzmiller, and Nikki O'Brien.

Guidance Counselors Help Students Deal With Today, Plan For Tomorrow

By Peggy Santamaria

This week, across the state, school guidance counselors are recognized for their efforts and accomplishments on behalf of students.

Garrett County's school guidance counselors do not just sit in offices and wait for students to show up with problems or questions about college choices. Quite the contrary. The guidance counselors are in the classrooms instructing; they are leading discussion groups; they are working with parents and children to select courses appropriate to the needs and interests of the students.

The students are encouraged by guidance counselors to use a rainbow of resources, from common sense to computer software, in coping with school problems and planning for life beyond the classroom.

The counseling process is consistent in the county school system. It begins in the elementary grades and carries the student to graduation and beyond.

Bonnie Swyter, one of three roving elementary school counselors in the county, described parts of the guidance program offered to the youngest students. "From K through grade 5 we are in the classrooms working on social skills development," she said.

The goal is to help children become comfortable and competent in the school setting. "We talk about how to make friends, how to keep friends, feeling left out, and tattling," Swyter explained.

From how to handle teasing to how to handle feelings, the guidance counselors explore areas and work toward solutions with the children.

Swyter also explained that with parents' permission children can participate in discussion groups.

From the earliest days in school, children are encouraged to think of their futures. They will be asked to draw pictures of what they want to be when they grow up.

As they move on to middle school, the students continue to work with guidance counselors in three major programs: conflict resolution, winning colors, and career development.

Conflicts that can be approached by both student and counselor may be ones that have developed between student and parent, student and student, or student and teacher. The goal is to develop the skill of handling oneself in these situations, Randy Paugh, middle school counselor explained.

"It is important to an employer that a person can get along with co-workers," Paugh noted. This training can help a person do just that.

"Winning colors" is the name given to a program that describes clusters of behaviors by colors. For instance, reserved and orderly behavior is "brown," while risk-taking and outgoing behavior is "red," Paugh explained. There are four such patterns and colors in the program.

By so describing patterns of behavior, students are able to become more easily aware of their own behaviors and tendencies, Paugh said. Once aware of behavior patterns, students can more easily adapt those behaviors to be appropriate to a situation.

Career development planning is a large part of the guidance program. In middle school students learn to look at career choices and clusters of careers.

The cluster is a group of careers that have certain similarities. For instance, certain work involves people, whereas other work deals primarily with things. Paugh works with students as they take a look at what kind of work they are best suited for.

From this point the student will work with the guidance counselor and parents to select a course of studies to pursue in high school.

Once in high school, the interaction with the guidance counselor continues. Beverly Serpone, high school counselor, said her main job is to help each student feel successful.

"We begin with an orientation to guidance. We look at how to interact and get through the day," she explained.

Getting through the day can be a bit easier for students with the help of peer counselors. These are juniors and seniors who have had training to assist younger students in resolving problems and to seek assistance when it is indicated.

Serpone helps each student focus on career choices. "Juniors go to a career day at GCC in April. There is also a college expo held each fall," she said. These are two of the outside resources available to students.

Coping with people and situations, plotting and following a career path, preparing to move from classroom to the world beyond — these are the realms into which a guidance counselor helps a students venture with assurance.

Mental Health Associates Will Hold Meeting

For information about the session, persons may contact Fred Tola, coordinator, at 301-334-8970.

Drug Bust On I-68 Nets Two Terra Alta Men

Two Terra Alta, W.Va., men have been jailed on drug charges after the Garrett County Narcotics Task Force arrested them on Interstate 68 near Grantsville last Thursday afternoon, according to Dick Sanders, Garrett County Sheriff and a spokesman for the task force.

Donald William Tenney, 39, and Ryan Michael Ruppenthal, 21, were both arrested on westbound I-68 on Jan. 29 at approximately 3:45 p.m. The arrests were a result of an ongoing investigation based on information that Tenney would allegedly be in possession of controlled dangerous substances (CDSs) as he drove through the county from an unspecified city downstate.

Upon identifying Tenney's vehicle, a traffic stop was executed and a K-9 scan by a Garrett County Sheriff's Office team was conducted, with a positive alert for drugs within the vehicle. A subsequent search uncovered one ounce of suspected cocaine, with a street value of $2,800, in a personal use box and a coat pocket, and one pound of marijuana, valued at $3,000, which was found under the passenger seat. Task Force members report that $2,000 in cash was also seized during the search.

Following their arrest Tenney and Ruppenthal appeared before the Garrett County District Court Commissioner, who set bonds at $100,000 for Tenny and $50,000 for Ruppenthal.

"These were some big players," a second Narcotics Task Force member commented afterwards. "Hopefully they won't be out for awhile."

Grantsville Area Business Group Seeking Members

The Greater Grantsville Business Association (GGBA) has announced that it is opening up the month of February with its annual membership drive. According to organization president Candy Fetterly, GGBA extends an invitation to all Greater Grantsville area business owners to come to the next meeting on Tuesday, Feb. 24. These "dutch-treat" business meetings are held at Penn Alps Restaurant on Old Route 40 the last Tuesday of each month, beginning at 8:30 a.m. The breakfast meetings generally last just one hour, Fetterly said.

GGBA is celebrating its second year in operation with 50 members, according to membership chair Debbie Klotz. Just one year ago, the organization started off with 12 charter members, who worked together to develop the by-laws, constitution, and mission statement. The newest businesses to join the organization are Folk's Paint and Glass, G&S Insurance, Garrett County Economic Development Corporation, Grantsville NAPA, Bob Kazary, attorney at law, Railey Realty, and Ken Specht Photography.

Some of the group's accomplishments include obtaining nonprofit (51C6) status with the Internal Revenue Service; regional planning efforts; creating and distributing the Grantsville brochures; developing the organization's home page on the Internet, with online storage space available for members; compiling hospitality packets for newcomers to town; coordinating informative guest speakers at the breakfast meetings; sponsoring the successful Cornucopia Days in September; co-sponsoring the Old Fashioned Grantsville Christmas in December with Spruce Forest Artisan Village; and offering low-cost advertising opportunities for merchants.

"But the members create the best benefit in referrals—learning and working together to preserve and promote the historic Greater Grantsville area," stated Klotz.

Current members of the GGBA are: American Trust Bank, Boachy's Pharmacy, Bleiacheof Farm, Big A Auto Parts, Billy Bender Chevrolet, Brant's Home Sales, Braskey Law Office, Broad Spectrum Builders, Butler's Carpets, Casselman Valley Farm Bed & Breakfast, Casselwood Furniture, Diehl's Ford Sales, Diesel Institute of America, Dream Weavers, First United National Bank & Trust, The Floor Store, The Flowerloft, Four Seasons Stitchery, G&P Auto Service, Garco Video, Donald Goldbloom, Good Scents Parfumerie, Grantsville Liquors, Grantsville Market, Grantsville Station, H&H Hardware, HairShapers Styling & Image Center, Herbs Etc. Mortgage Moment

by Jerry Merrick

This is the first of what I hope will be many Mortgage Moments I will be sharing with you. The idea behind Mortgage Moments is to help folks with pressing and not so pressing questions about mortgages. Since there are an increasing number of first-time home buyers out there who are unfamiliar with the mortgage loan process, this column will offer a good opportunity to answer some of your mortgage questions so that everyone can become more familiar with the home buying process. I invite anyone with mortgage related questions to feel free to write, and I will be happy to answer your questions.

1. How much house can I afford?

This is determined from your annual gross income, as well as how much you owe in current monthly debts. The general rule is, your mortgage payment should equal 28% of your gross income and your total debt including your mortgage payment should not exceed 36% of your gross income. If you find you are outside these guidelines, but close, there are mortgage programs that allow higher percentages. I can provide more information about these programs.

2. How much money do I need as a down payment?

It used to be that a 20% down payment was required to purchase a home. However, most lending institutions are making it much easier for folks to purchase homes by requiring a minimum of only 3% down payment. Remember, any down payment less than 20% usually requires private mortgage insurance, but that's another Mortgage Moment topic. Lending institutions are allowing lower down payments because it allows borrowers to qualify to purchase more house for their money.

Please forward your mortgage questions to: The Republican, P.O. Box 326, Oakland, MD 21550.

Jerry Merrick is a mortgage consultant with a local lending institution.

Carbon Monoxide Gas Dangerous; Tips Offered

The Environmental Health Section of the Garrett County Health Department reminds county residents that home heating appliances could be a source of poisonous carbon monoxide gas.

Carbon monoxide, or CO, is an odorless, tasteless, colorless gas that can be fatal when inhaled. It is sometimes difficult to determine if carbon monoxide is the culprit because its symptoms are similar to the flu and allergies. Low levels can cause nausea, dizziness, weakness, and muscle aches. Higher doses can impair judgment, cause paralysis or coma, and potentially death. Carbon monoxide exposures especially affect unborn babies, infants, and people with anemia or a history of heart disease. According to the U.S. Consumer Products Safety Commission, there are more than 250 carbon monoxide deaths every year associated with the use of combustion appliances in the home. Each year nearly 5,000 people in the United States are treated in hospital emergency rooms for carbon monoxide poisoning.

Any fuel-burning appliance in one's home is a potential source of carbon monoxide. When appliances are kept in good working condition, they produce little carbon monoxide. Problems arise when fuel-burning appliances are inadequately maintained, improperly operated, or improperly vented.

Common sources of carbon monoxide include the following gas, oil or wood fueled appliances: furnaces, wood stoves, fireplaces, coal stoves, charcoal grills, cooking ranges, water heaters, kerosene heaters, portable generators, and automobiles left running in closed garages.

Kerosene space heaters are of particular concern in Garrett County since many residents use this type of auxiliary heat during power outages caused by adverse weather and winter storms. Kerosene heaters should be used with extreme caution; they are not meant to be a primary source of heat. One should make sure these heaters are vented to the outdoors and are equipped with oxygen depletion sensors. Those who must use a gas or kerosene heater in an emergency should keep doors opened to adjacent rooms of the house and crack open a few windows. This allows enough air for proper combustion and reduces deadly carbon monoxide levels.

Gas powered portable generators should always be operated outdoors. Two people died of carbon monoxide poisoning in Vermont in the recent ice storms from operating their generators indoors.

The most important way to reduce the risk from carbon monoxide is to keep all fuel-burning devices well-maintained and inspected for safety. Experts recommend having your fuel-burning heating systems inspected by a trained professional every year. Owners should always operate fuel-burning devices for their intended purpose, make sure they have been installed correctly, and remember to vent these devices to the outdoors.

There are carbon monoxide detectors persons can install in the home for continuous monitoring of dangerous CO levels. These devices are similar in appearance to smoke detectors and are powered with household electrical current or self-contained batteries. They are available at most hardware or department stores, averaging in price from $25 to $50.

For more information concerning carbon monoxide safety tips or other indoor air quality concerns persons may call Garrett County Health Department, Environmental Health Services at 301-334-9300.

INVESTING IN THE FAMILY CENTER - Jason Rush, customer service representative in the Grantsville office of First United National Bank, said he was so impressed when her heard about the work being done by the Salisbury Area Family Center that he asked if he could make a donation. "It was really refreshing," said Jeanne Miller director of the center. She is usually in the position of soliciting funds for the project which serves families in northern Grantsville and southern Somerset County. The program provides education services, family counseling, health screening, intergenerational activities, child care, and a host of other opportunities. The Family Center serves people from all age groups. It is not restricted by any income guidelines. "Other communities could learn a lot from this project," Rush said. The pre-schoolers pictured here, clockwise beginning lower center, are Michelle Wright, Jenny Kirchner, Brody Thomas, Amanda Lowery, Nashan Lowery, Luke Holler, Ashley Munion, Jennifer Martin, and Laura Miller, teacher. Standing behind the students are Rush and Miller.

THE BOXER

Rated R - Running time: 1:48

In the United States, we pride ourselves on our freedoms: freedom of speech, freedom of the press, freedom of religion. The Boxer, written and directed by Jim Sheridan (co-written by Terry George), is a powerful illustration of how different things are in Northern Ireland, where a simple opinion can cost you your life.

The boxer in question is Danny Flynn, played by Daniel Day Lewis, who has just been released from a Belfast POW facility after a 14-year stay. His crime had been failing to implicate a group of his pro-Republican compatriots who had participated in a terrorist bombing. For this he had been taken away from his family, his burgeoning boxing career, and his girlfriend Maggie (Emily Watson) who had married someone else and had a child, Liam (Ciaran Fitzgerald). In the intervening years, Liam's father has also been imprisoned, so Maggie is alone with him and her father, Joe Hamill (Brian Cox), who serves as chief IRA negotiator with the hated British government. Although Danny and Maggie still have feelings for each other, being seen together can be dangerous, since she is the wife of a prisoner. Even pre-teen Liam, who has his own developing sense of politics, is afraid that his mother might break the strict code of ethics imposed on her by the situation.

Joe is respected by many for his tireless efforts toward achieving peace, but there is a strong faction, headed by a man named Harry (Gerard McSorley), that holds such animosity for the Protestant British that segregation is the only outcome suitable to them. Peace is seen as a weakness--a betrayal of the dead. Harry, although he officially defers to Joe, has difficulty concealing his disgust for anyone committed to a peaceful outcome of the struggle, in which his only son was killed.

Upon Danny's release from prison, he intends to rebuild the town's decrepit Holy Family Boxing Club and resume his career. He wants to offer a place for young boys, regardless of sect, to get involved in sports rather than killing. He finds his old trainer, Ike Weir (Ken Stott), who holds similar political beliefs, and they start training the local interested youth, including Liam. But when the first match is held, they take time to commemorate local boxers from both sides of the fence slain in the struggle, many of whom were just boys. This angers Harry and the other IRA hardliners, and sets in motion a series of events which threatens the tenuous cease-fire that has already been achieved by Joe's negotiations.

This film is a satisfying marriage of a thoughtful screenplay, insightful direction and a powerfully skilled cast. It is obvious that the issue at hand has great meaning for those involved, because emotions run high from the very beginning, although they are subdued or repressed at first. One gets a real sense of the anguish the Irish people must live with every day as a result of this terribly bloody conflict. Lewis and all the actors do a superb job as they translate Sheridan's eloquent script to their relationships.

For some, The Boxer will be a powerful lesson in current international issues; for others, simply an excellent evening of thought-provoking entertainment. For all in this country, it should be a reminder that freedom is not to be taken for granted. ★★★★★

GREAT EXPECTATIONS

Any attempt at bringing a Dickens work to the screen would undoubtedly be an awesome task, to say the least. His writing is so rich with description and local color, one almost has to read the original novel to get the full effect. This is, of course, true with many authors, but some lend themselves to the screen more ably. But in writer Mitch Glazer's attempt to modernize this Dickens classic, it seems much of the symbolism has been lost, forgotten, or handled so clumsily by director Alphonso Cuarón that the film's exectution is more of a tragedy than the story.

In this version, our "Pip" is Finnegan Bell, and he is the nephew of a Florida fisherman/handyman named Joe (Chris Cooper). The film starts some time in the seventies, when "Finn" is a boy (played by Jeremy James Kissner). Joe is solicited to garden an eccentric old lady's sprawling estate, and he takes Finn along. While waiting outside, Finn meets a mysterious girl about his age. Back home, Joe gets the message that Finn has been hired--not to garden, but to entertain the old lady and keep her niece Estella (Raquel Beaudene) company. And he is to be paid well.

When he arrives at the overgrown mansion he is dumbfounded by the place, by the beautiful but snobbish girl, and by the seemingly off-her-rocker aunt, Ms. Dinsmoor (Anne Bancroft), who apparently does nothing but apply makeup to her wrinkly face and dance to numerous different versions of "Besame Mucho." When she finds that Finn is a competent artist, she asks him to draw Estella. Sensing by his work that he is enamored with the girl, she warns him that should he pursue Estella romantically, she'll only break his heart.

Cut to 10 years later: Finn (Ethan Hawke) and Estella (Gwyneth Paltrow) are now accomplished dance partners, and he is still drawing her. Dinsmoor has changed hair styles but little else, and Finn is in love. But after briefly toying with him, Estella leaves for Europe without saying goodbye. Crushed, Finn leaves too, and returns to Joe and the fishing boat and abandons his artwork and his dreams of love.

Cut to 10 years later again: Finn, now in his late twenties, receives an anonymous message stating that he has been commissioned for more artwork. This time he is to have a show in New York City, all expenses paid. After some soul-searching, he decides that if he can get a free ride to New York for painting a few pictures, why not? So he goes, and quickly meets up with . . . guess who. Estella, his favorite subject, is living there now. Finn naturally leaps at the chance to have his heart shredded again, and so it goes.

It seems like many of the main themes Dickens employed in this story have been glossed over by Glazer's script and Cuarón's choices. The massive, decaying wedding feast, supposedly symbolic of the old woman's emotional and psychological decay, is hardly even shown here, although the original novel was loaded with descriptions of it. The characterizations of Estella, both by Beaudene and Paltrow, are so icy that one can't see why Finn would be interested in the first place. Only toward the end of the film does she come around to being human, but by then it's too late for us to care.

Also, Finn's discovery of the true identity of his benefactor is supposed to be a major turning point if not the climax of the story, charged with revelation after revelation. But Hawke takes it almost as if he's known all along; one might miss it if one hadn't read the book. And the turnabout of Dinsmoor's character near the end is so abrupt it is utterly unbelievable.

Great expectations are what many fans of literature may have for this film, but it might just as well be called Great Disappointment. ★★★

DESPERATE MEASURES

Rated R - Running time: 1:40

An interesting debate: which of the characters in this movie is the least believable? Is it the smarter-than-Einstein killer with superhuman strength? Or the good cop who's suddenly willing to kill dozens of people and go to jail forever to get his way? Or maybe the dying child who continually spouts sappy, oversentimental philosophies about his own mortality? I'll bet Andy Garcia, Michael Keaton, and Joseph Cross had a healthy wager going on during shooting.

This latest in the blow-up film genre is set in San Francisco, where veteran police detective Frank Conner (Garcia) is committing his first of many crimes: illegally accessing the database of the local hospital to find a bone marrow donor for his son Matt (Cross), who is dying of leukemia. The only suitable match just happens to be the latest Hannibal Lecter, the worst, most infamous, most intelligent criminal in town: Peter McCabe (Keaton). I mean, this guy has to be hog-tied just to have a conversation with you. But the deal is made, and the surgery is scheduled.

With McGuyver-like ingenuity, McCabe is able to slip out of his restraints during the procedure, evade dozens of armed officers, kill and maim numerous guards and hospital personnel, and get away. Since he's been shot, he has to do surgery on his own leg so that he may continue running around the hospital (and the city) doing high-impact aerobics and pulling all sorts of incredibly clever stunts to throw the cops off his trail.

But Conner's kid still needs the goo from inside this guy's bones, so while the entire SFPD chases McCabe with shoot-to-kill orders, Conner the lawman does everything possible (and several things *im*possible) to protect the crook. This includes putting his fellow officers in mortal danger on several occasions, and actually jumping in front of McCabe while they're shooting at him. Meanwhile Matt is being pushed around the hospital in his oxygen tent saying things like, "It's okay if I die, Daddy, 'cause I know you tried your best," and, "Will I see Mommy in heaven?" P.U.

Don't get me wrong: Garcia, Keaton, and even newcomer Cross are all good actors, and they do an admirable job here attempting to make characters out of Silly Putty, particularly Keaton. But writer David Klass just didn't give them much to work with, and director Barbet Schroeder seems too concerned with explosions and helicopter shots to bother with the actors. ★★

Leads Sought In Swanton Burglary, A $4,000 Loss

The Garrett County Sheriff's Office is investigating a Swanton burglary that occurred sometime between Jan. 4 and Jan. 31 in which over $4,000 worth of items were taken.

The burglary was carried out in the 300 block of Woodland Way, with entry being gained when the perpetrators forced the bottom piece of a garage door off its tracks.

The inventory of stolen items included an orange and gray Yamaha Breeze four-wheeler, valued at $2,200; a white Sears stackable washer/dryer combination, model number 417991 70110, serial number W214 10287, valued at $1,000; a pair of teal and white Rosignol 180-centimeter snow skis, worth $250; a pair of teal-colored ski boots, size 11, worth $100; two Shakespeare Ugly Stick fishing poles, a $195 combined value; two Eagle fish finders, a $280 combined value; two Zebco fishing reels, and one Zprinox, one Johnson, and one ABC fishing reel, a $195 combined value; a boat radio valued at $100; and a tackle box containing miscellaneous fishing lures, valued at $150.

In other sheriff's news, a wallet was taken from a boys' gym locker at Southern High School on Thursday morning. Estimated at a total loss of $25, the wallet was a black cloth tri-fold wallet with a velcro closure, with "Red Sand" printed on its side. It contained personal identification, personal papers, and a small amount of cash.

Keith Allen Conrad, 41, Morgantown, W.Va., and Clinton Edward Meese, 32, Salisbury, Pa., were both arrested on the strength of bench warrants charging each with failure to appear for a scheduled court hearing.

Bradley Douglas Spahr, 31, Terra Alta, W.Va., and Paul Joseph Langan, 34, Oakland, were each charged with driving while intoxicated last week.

Goldstein Being Asked About Paystub Changes

Maryland State Comptroller Louis L. Goldstein says his office is receiving calls from both taxpayers and employers because some employee paystubs are now showing separate withholding amounts for state and local income taxes.

According to Comptroller Goldstein, these changes are happening as a result of the Tax Reduction Act of 1997, which reduces state income tax but does not affect local tax. Local income tax rates are set by local elected officials in Maryland's 23 counties and Baltimore City. "We distributed new withholding tables to employers last fall which take into account the separate calculations necessary for the two taxes," Goldstein said. Some employers' payroll systems are now showing the state and local income tax separately, and employees are asking if there is a new tax. There is no new tax. In fact, less state tax is now being withheld from employees' paychecks."

Since 1968, Maryland residents have been reporting both state and local income taxes on their Maryland returns. As a convenience to local governments, the Maryland Comptroller's Office collects these local taxes from employers in conjunction with the state income tax. As a convenience to taxpayers, the state and local income tax is reported on one tax form.

Employees are asking the comptroller's office if they must make additional changes in the way they report the tax withheld.

"Employers don't need to write additional checks or file additional forms. They will still file the simple withholding coupon and make only one payment for both state and local income tax. Employers can file without paper by enrolling in Maryland's electronic funds transfer program," said Goldstein. To learn more about the electronic funds transfer program, businesses may call 410-974-2601.

All employers need to be aware of these changes in order to answer employee questions concerning changes that may be appearing on paystubs.

Employees need to be certain the local tax is being withheld at the proper rate for where they live, not where they work. Employees should keep their address information current with their employers as a way of insuring that the appropriate local income tax is being withheld. For tax year 1998, the income tax rate in effect for Garrett County is 50%.

"It's a Small World After All"

As one strolls in metropolitan Madrid, it is plain that the city fathers have been able to successfully combine the old and the new. In fact this ultra-modern wall of shaded glass windows seems to actually frame the architectural antiquity which faces it, each adding interest to the other.

Our Creator made us very different too. Our ages, our features, our cultures and our gender are but a few of the factors which can divide us...if we choose to allow it. Our Heavenly Father, in His wisdom, must have created us believing that we could enrich His world, each reflecting the best in the other.

This week as we worship, may we pray for harmony and peace at home and abroad, for indeed "it is a small world after all."

THE BIBLE SPEAKS

BY LAWRENCE W. ALTHOUSE

ARE YOU A SLAVE?
February 8, 1998

Background Scripture:
2 Peter 2
Devotional Reading:
Ephesians 4:7-16

One of the two main purposes of 2 Peter is to warn the readers against false teachers. "But false prophets also arose among the people, just as there will be false teachers among you, who will secretly bring in destructive heresies, even denying the Master who bought them, bringing upon themselves swift destruction" (2:1).

I have read a lot of religious books and sermon titles in the past 40-plus years since I entered the ministry, but I don't remember coming across one addressing the problems of "false teachers" and "heresy." Is that because "false teachers" and "heresy" are no longer threatening to the Church? No, I think not, but the terminology we use today is different. Furthermore, 2 Peter may seem irrelevant also because the "false teachers" and the "heresies" they were concerned about are different than the ones that plague us today.

So who are the "false teachers" in the Church today? For what shall we be on the lookout in looking for and identifying them? 2 Peter 2 gives us some guidelines.

For one thing, he says, the false teachings are "destructive heresies." When we examine what he read and hear today of preaching and teaching in the Church, one way we can spot that which is false is to note teaching and preaching that are destructive to the Church. Heresy always wears down the Church, never upbuilds it.

DENYING THE MASTER

Some people today are negatively obsessed with those with whom they do not agree. They condemn them continually and unmercifully because their conception of the Gospel is different from their own. "From of old their condemnation has not been idle, and their destruction has not been asleep" (2:3). Their orientation is destructive and negative. For them, condemnation of others has become a way of life.

The writer also tells us that these "false teachers" deny "the Master who bought them." Whenever you hear teaching or preaching that persuades you to believe or behave in a way that is contrary to the way of Jesus Christ, that is "false teaching." Jesus was not afraid to speak out against sin, but he did not found his gospel on condemning the sinners. Any teaching that entices us to be less compassionate, less forgiving, and less loving is false teaching. Any gospel that derides us for being the peacemakers Jesus calls us to be is not the good news of Jesus Christ.

The writer of 2 Peter also tells us that the "false teachers" are licentious people: "They are blots and blemishes reveling in their dissipation, carousing with you...They entice unsteady souls." (2:13b,14b). Anyone who teaches you to live licentiously is a "false teacher."

LICENTIOUSNESS

We need to realize, however, that that includes not only "passions of the flesh"—sexual licentiousness, gluttony and drunkenness—but any kind of behavior in which we are out of control, where something else, not the Lord, is in charge of us. An addiction to violence can be licentiousness. An obsession with verbal abuse can be living out of control. Lying about other people, demeaning their character can be compulsive. Self-righteousness is equally addictive and destructive.

What makes these "false teachers" and their "heresies" so dangerous is that they are so persuasive, particularly when it comes to using the Bible to support their destructive teaching. They promise a lot, but when people think for themselves and are open to the leading of God's Spirit, they can realize that they do not and can not deliver what they promise.

These people, finally, promise "freedom, but they themselves are slaves of corruption; for whatever overcomes a man, to that he is enslaved." Lots of people who think they are free are really slaves to persuasive charlatans and their teachings which appeal, not to the love of Christ, but to our most selfish and destructive natures.

Are you a free person or is there something or someone to whom you are subtly, but surely, enslaved?

All-Star hoopla centers on Jordan's future

By Jim Baker
©TVData Features Syndicate

Bob Costas

It is no secret that NBC is treating the 1998 NBA All-Star Game from Madison Square Garden in New York on Sunday, Feb. 8, with more than the usual gusto.

CBS' $500 million-a-year plunge into the NFL and NBC's failed stab at ABC's Monday Night Football package has left the Peacock network without pro football for at least five years.

While its feathers hardly are plucked – NBC still has the rights to five Olympics, Wimbledon, the PGA Tour and Notre Dame football – Michael Jordan of the Chicago Bulls and his fellow dribblers and dunkers are now even more important to NBC.

That is reflected in the network's new four-year, $1.75 billion deal to televise NBA games. It is part of a $2.64 billion total package that includes cable channel TNT, which also was ousted from the NFL fraternity.

But what happens to the NBA – and NBC's huge investment – if Jordan, the league's biggest star, retires after this season as many expect? It is a hot topic at this year's All-Star Game.

Bob Costas, who succeeded Marv Albert as NBC's top basketball play-by-play announcer and calls the All-Star Game with former NBA stars Isiah Thomas and Bill Walton, doesn't hesitate to address the issue.

Costas says Bulls head coach Phil Jackson seemed to be only half-kidding when he raised the possibility of Jordan becoming player-coach for the Bulls next season, while Jackson heads to New York to become head coach of the Knicks, a move that has been discussed and even encouraged by Jackson.

Thomas, who played for the Detroit Pistons and came to NBC after a stint as the general manager of the Toronto Raptors, points out that Bill Russell succeeded in a dual role for the Boston Celtics, and that Jordan might like the challenge.

But does that mean Jordan's game is slipping?

"I'm supposed to be an analyst and know what to look for, but he does it all," Thomas says. "I don't see (any) weakness in Jordan's game."

Greg Gumbel, NBC's No. 2 NBA play-by-play man, says Jordan has given a clear indication he will retire after this season. But Gumbel isn't fretting over the NBA's future.

"Everyone was worried what would happen after Larry Bird and Magic Johnson left ... but someone always comes along," he says, possibly referring to Kobe Bryant of the Los Angeles Lakers.

Bird, the former Celtics great and first-year coach of the Indiana Pacers, has led his team to one of the best records in the Eastern Conference, something that has Walton, a former Celtics teammate, excited.

"His Pacers have the best chance in the East to unseat Chicago," he claims.

While there are many changes taking place in the NBA, Costas appears certain of one thing:

"As long as Jordan is in the equation, the Bulls will draw a higher rating than all the other teams," he says. "Most Americans want to see Michael, but he is likely to retire after this season."

Dean Martin

Q: What was the 1960s movie starring Frank Sinatra, Dean Martin, Sammy Davis Jr. and Joey Bishop? It had a Western or cavalry setting. Was it Sergeants 3? –Linda Zito, Salt Lake City.

A: Yes, that was the name of that 1962 pseudo-remake of Gunga Din.

Q: A group of us would like any information you can supply on actor Guy Williams. I think he and I attended the same high school (George Washington in New York) in the early 1940s. Did he make any movies in addition to his Zorro films? –Marie Lucas, Lafayette, Ind.

A: There is a chance you went to school with Williams, Marie. He was born in New York on Jan. 14, 1924, which would have placed him in high school during the early 1940s.

While Williams is fondly remembered for playing Zorro in two movies and a TV series and for his final role as professor John Robinson on TV's Lost in Space, the actor had a checkered film career. He had small roles in mainly B movies before his Zorro TV series made him a star in 1957.

Between Zorro and Lost in Space, he made only three movies: Disney's The Prince and the Pauper, Damon and Pythias and the swashbuckler Captain Sindbad.

Williams died of a heart attack on May 7, 1989, in Buenos Aires, Argentina.

Q: Whatever happened to Martha Hyer? –James B. Hill via e-mail.

A: Born in Fort Worth, Texas, in 1924, Hyer was a lovely, talented actress who nevertheless wound up making mostly mediocre movies.

She made her movie debut at age 11 in Thunder Mountain and hit her stride in the late 1950s, when she appeared in such films as My Man Godfrey and Some Came Running.

Her quality of roles declined in the 1960s, and she began to withdraw from the limelight after her 1965 marriage to film producer Hal B. Wallis (Becket, Dark Victory). Her last acting credit to date was the little-known Day of the Wolves in 1973, after which she turned to writing. Under the pen name Martin Julien, she wrote the screenplay for the film Rooster Cogburn.

Q: Why isn't Lovejoy Mysteries on A&E anymore? –L. Andrews via e-mail.

A: Lovejoy was a British production. A&E aired all the original episodes made in England, then ran repeats for several years.

A: The Evening Star (1996).

Shape 2000 Personal Weight Loss Center

Lorena Rodeheaver, independent owner and counselor of Shape 2000 Personal Weight Loss Center, opened her business five months ago at 12978 Garrett Highway, Suite 201, in Oakland.

Rodeheaver and counselor Kathleen Green offers private counseling, supplements, diet plans, vitamins, protein bars, and maintenance plans for clients after they stabilize their weight loss.

"I've previously worked for a weight loss company and am familiar with weight loss capabilities," said Rodeheaver. "I am from Garrett County and I'm interested in keeping a personal weight loss facility available to people in the area."

Shape 2000 offers monitoring of weight loss in addition to private counseling, and unlike group weigh-ins and meetings, Shape 2000 focuses on individual needs.

Rodeheaver said she would like to see interested people come in for a consultation. "It's important to me that those on our program become successful at weight loss and discover that they can achieve their own personal goal."

Those interested in contacting Shape 2000 Personal Weight Loss Center may call 301-334-3785.

DNR's Website Undergoes Change

DNR Online is getting a new address. Starting immediately, those searching for information and services from the Maryland Department of Natural Resources (DNR) can get assistance by visiting the department's website using its new Internet address: http://www.dnr.state.md.us.

"DNR Online is using the Internet as a cost-effective communications tool which is visited by thousands of people each month," said DNR Secretary John R. Griffin. "The leadership and vision of Governor Parris N. Glendening in the fields of education and technology resulted in our embracing this new and exciting form of outreach."

Visitors to DNR's website get to choose from 96 online brochures featuring parks, forests, and wildlife management areas. There are maps, photographs, and information regarding activities, accessibility information, and even a listing of which parks allow pets. There is information on the Chesapeake Bay, coastal bays, and streams. The fisheries section carries the Maryland Fishing Report, which is read by approximately 1,000 people per week.

There is an online service center where visitors can find their local hunting and fishing license agent or print out a hunting or fishing license application on the spot and mail it within minutes.

For those interested in trees and forests, Griffin says they will find the most comprehensive resources at DNR Online. Areas to be expanded and developed include wildlife, critical areas, educational resources, biodiversity, and landowner resources.

"People visiting the DNR website in 1998 will see new and exciting additions, such as an Information Resources Center (Library), an online natural resources bookstore, and multimedia videos through a sponsorship with Comcast Online. In the future, more user interaction will be incorporated," Griffin said.

"Our goal is to expand service to the people of Maryland and to those who enjoy our precious natural resources," said Gene Deems, DNR's manager of information technology. "As we have built our Internet website, we stayed focused on two areas—expanding service and saving money."

Deems said the weekly newsletter format has been "a resounding success," saving the department substantial printing, postage, and personnel costs, while expanding service to 24 hours.

"DNR Online's success can be measured by the thousands of e-mails asking for help or thanking the department for the service. The site has been a success thanks to the hundreds of businesses and individuals who help the department spread its messages by linking to content within DNR's website," Deems said.

A new honor bestowed this week is from America Online (AOL), which now features the new DNR website on its America's Parks Forum. DNR's site is accessible to AOL's 11 million members for the next two weeks and will remain a standing resource link afterwards. Persons may visit DNR Online on AOL's "America's Parks Forum" using keyword "outdoors" or using any web browser type in the address: http://www.dnr.state.md.us.

Cumberland Man Pleads Guilty To Prescription Fraud

A Cumberland man pleaded guilty to one count of prescription fraud in Garrett County District Court proceedings last week after an investigation by the Garrett County Narcotics Task Force had resulted in his arrest in December on 28 counts of the same charge.

Michael Shawn Goodfellow, 31, was handed a 4-month suspended sentence and placed on two years of supervised probation by Judge Ralph M. Burnett. Goodfellow, who had initially been under investigation for prescription fraud allegations in Allegany County, was also implicated in connection with forged and altered prescriptions for the painkillers Darvocet and Propoxyphene, and the antibiotic Trimox at several pharmacies across Garrett County. The other 27 counts of prescription fraud were not prosecuted by the state's attorney's office.

In other district court news, an Oakland man was sentenced to three months in jail after pleading guilty to a charge of misdemeanor theft.

Melvin Ray Howell III, 21, had been arrested by sheriff's deputies in December after a woman staying in the same residence reported a theft of $58 from her purse. She told deputies that she had awakened early one morning to find Howell in her room, telling her that he was adjusting her radio. When she later arose and began morning preparations, she found that the cash from her purse, which had been next to the radio on the dresser, was missing. When questioned by deputies, Howell reportedly admitted to taking the money.

The judge handed Howell a six-month sentence, three months of which was suspended, placed him on two years of supervised probation, and ordered him to pay his victim restitution of the full $58.

William Owen Frazee, 22, Friendsville, was handed a probation before judgment (PBJ) and a 30-day suspended sentence after pleading guilty to a second-degree assault charge. Frazee had been arrested by sheriff's deputies in October for allegedly having consensual sex with a 15-year-old female. An additional charge of third-degree sex offense was not prosecuted. The PBJ ruling means that the case will not reflect a criminal record if Frazee complies with the terms of his one year of unsupervised probation.

Von William Johnson, 52, Oakland, was handed a stet ruling with the condition that he complete 20 hours of community service. The Oakland City Police had filed charges against Johnson of two counts of disorderly conduct and one count of endangering himself while consuming alcohol.

Johnson had been arrested in December by a police officer who had noticed him and a companion walking in traffic in the street. When the officer offered to give the pair a ride home, Johnson allegedly grew belligerent and loudly argued with the officer, while his companion reportedly maintained a stoic demeanor throughout the affair. Johnson was placed under arrest, at which point he reportedly began complaining of chest pains and asked to be taken to Garrett County Memorial Hospital. Once there, he allegedly argued with the doctor and staff much in the same fashion as he had done with the officer, and once the examination revealed no health problems he was released back into the officer's custody and was transported to the jail.

Gloria Muscalli, 20, Hudson, Fla., was handed a stet ruling after a hearing on a charge of fraudulently converting leased goods to her own use. Muscalli had been arrested in October after she had failed to make rental payments for five consecutive months on a set of bunk beds she had leased from the Family Rental Center in Oakland, chalking up an outstanding balance of nearly $700. The stet ruling included the conditions that she return the bunk beds as soon as possible and pay the Family Rental Center $200 within the next month.

Ormonde Tarion Steinle O'Carrol, 23, Friendsville, was found in violation of probation stemming from previous DWI and malicious destruction of property convictions. His probation before judgment ruling was stricken, and a 48-hour sentence was reimposed.

Timothy Ray Poindexter, 31, Grantsville, was found in violation of probation stemming from a previous conviction on two counts of second-degree assault. His probation was revoked and terminated, and a 10-month sentence was reimposed.

Jody Lynn Crosco, 26, Oakland, was granted a motion to revise a sentence that stemmed from a previous conviction for second-degree assault. His sentence was revised to reflect a PBJ.

DWI Hearings

Several driving while intoxicated (DWI) and driving while under the influence of alcohol and/or drugs (DUI) cases were heard in district court over the past two weeks.

Samuel Irven Leith, 47, Thurmont, pleaded guilty to DUI and was fined $455, handed a one-year sentence with all but four months suspended, and placed on two years of supervised probation.

Jeremy Paul Lewis, 24, Mtn. Lake Park, pleaded guilty to DUI and was fined $255, handed a 30-day sentence with all but 96 hours suspended, placed on one year of supervised probation, and ordered to complete 40 hours of community service.

James Delford Oliver, 48, Mtn. Lake Park, pleaded guilty to DWI and was fined $200, handed a 60-day sentence with all but seven days suspended, placed on one year of supervised probation, and ordered to complete 40 hours of community service.

Michael Lee Kitzmiller, 21, Grantsville, pleaded guilty to DWI and was fined $155, handed a 30-day suspended sentence, placed on one year of supervised probation, and ordered to complete 40 hours of community service.

Betty Jean Mink, 43, Deer Park, pleaded guilty to DWI and was handed a PBJ, fined $100, handed a 30-day suspended sentence, placed on one year of supervised probation, and ordered to complete 40 hours of community service.

Dennis Lee Funk, 37, Terra Alta, W.Va., who faced a DWI charge, was handed a stet ruling with the condition that he complete 40 hours of community service.

Samuel James Wagner, 22, Accident, was found in violation of his DWI probation and handed a 30-day reimposed sentence with his probation revoked as well.

David Charles Hoadley, 48, Swanton, and Donald Leighton Kelley, 38, Stonewood, W.Va., were both found in violation of their respective DWI probations, and each was handed a 96-hour reimposed sentence.

Rodney Gene Guthrie, 31, Mtn. Lake Park, received a sentence modification wherein his DWI charge was revised to reflect a charge of DUI instead.

Phillip Andrew Dice, 40, Grantsville, was granted a sentence revision to reflect time already served for his DWI conviction.

Paul Thomas Turner, 30, Lonaconing, was deemed not guilty of DWI.

Finally Kenneth Earl Tasker, 31, Oakland, failed to appear for his violation of DWI probation hearing. The judge issued a bench warrant for his arrest that stipulated a $1,000 bond.

Direct Deposit Tax Refunds Sent By State

Maryland state taxpayers have already received nearly $13 million in state and local tax refunds, according to Maryland State Comptroller Louis L. Goldstein, including the first-ever Maryland refunds made by direct deposit into taxpayers' bank accounts. "This year, for the first time, taxpayers who file their returns electronically through professional tax preparers are able to have their refunds deposited directly into their bank accounts," he said.

Direct deposit refunds should be in taxpayers' bank accounts within two days after the electronic return is received. "Electronic filing guarantees a quick paper refund check, but direct deposit is even faster," Goldstein said.

As of last Wednesday, the comptroller's office had already issued more than 25,000 refunds with a total value of $12.8 million. Included in the processing were 1,700 direct deposits. "Our electronic filing program continues to grow as taxpayers take advantage of the paperless processing and direct deposit convenience," Goldstein said, as he pointed to a 23 percent increase in the number of electronic filings over the same date a year ago.

The pace of filing will dramatically increase in the next two weeks as taxpayers receive W-2 statements and 1099 forms needed to complete their tax returns, according to Goldstein. "About 75 percent of taxpayers get refunds, and most of them file as soon as they have the necessary documents," he said. "More than one-third of all returns are filed in early February."

Taxpayers with questions or needing forms can get help at the comptroller's website, www.com.state.md.us or by E-mail at taxhelp@comp.state.md.us. Telephone help is available Mondays through Fridays, 8 a.m to 5 p.m., at 1-800-MD-TAXES. State tax forms are available through the Forms-by-Fax system at 410-974-3299 as well as in local libraries and many post offices.

"We'll even complete your Maryland income tax return for you, free of charge," Goldstein offered, "if you bring a completed federal return and your W-2 statements to any of our 20 taxpayer service offices listed on the back of the Maryland tax booklet and in local telephone directories."

Antiques

Modern figurines usually are made to resemble the more-beautiful-than-life people envisioned by the artist. Lovely women with flowing dresses from earlier times, American Indians dressed in colorful costumes and heroic men dressed for battle are popular subjects.

In the 18th and 19th centuries, figurines displayed in a home usually pictured a famous politician, actor, military hero or member of a royal family, or a character from fiction.

The 19th century family had only a few black-and-white drawings, so the ceramics of the day were the best images to be had.

One popular subject was William Shakespeare, the playwright and poet who lived from 1564 to 1616. Although Shakespeare's plays are still popular, few new statues are being made of the man. The many pictures found in books, on television and on the Internet make historical images easy to find.

The Staffordshire potters in England made many different Shakespeare figures. In the 1850s, Shakespeare was portrayed leaning on a pile of books. The books were piled on a pedestal surrounded by the heads of the rulers of England, copying a monument erected in Westminster Abbey in 1741.

By the 1860s, potters simplified the figure, and the pillar was a plain hexahedron. The figure often had the name "Shakespeare" written on the base. The potter usually assumed the owner of the figurine would recognize the bearded gentleman leaning on the books.

All Staffordshire figurines are popular with collectors. Many copies have been made in recent years.

Q. The bottom of my electric coffeepot is marked "Porcelier." The pot is made of china with a decal of flowers on it. Do you have any information on the company?

A. The Porcelier Manufacturing Co. worked in East Liverpool, Ohio, and South Greenberg, Pa., from 1927 through 1954. It made vitrified china teapots, bowls, cups, sugars, creamers and small electric appliances.

Porcelier pieces are becoming popular with collectors.

Home Tips

EMERGENCY STRAINER — If the kitchen sink is missing its strainer, in a pinch, put a sheet or two of paper toweling over the hole and then pour SLOWLY. The toweling will hold the solids while allowing the liquid to go down the hole. When done, simply pick up the toweling with its contents and throw it away. This has worked many times for me. Barbara B., Belimore, N.Y.

MAKE IT YOURSELF — Take a 3x5" plain index card and cut it into three equal pieces. Paste a return-address label on each, add your telephone number (optional) and you have three business cards. Jerry K., Orlando, Fla.

FLOWER HOLDERS — There were many times during my years as a grade-school teacher when I wished for pretty vases.

Children tend to bring you flowers without vases, so there you stand without the best way to show them off. Also, there are many ways in a classroom to use the right vase for the occasion.

Anyone with vases to spare could put them on a table in any teachers' lounge and watch them disappear within minutes. Julia R., Youngstown, Ohio

Biography®

HELEN HUNT: MAD ABOUT HER

With the Oscar buzz that's surrounded "As Good As It Gets," Helen Hunt may have propelled herself to the next stage, as a leading actress in serious films. James Brooks' new romantic comedy revolves around the intersecting lives of three New Yorkers — a cantankerous, dysfunctional novelist (Jack Nicholson), the gay artist who lives across the hall (Greg Kinnear) and a single mother with a seriously asthmatic son (Hunt) — and the unlikely bond that forms between them.

Brooks was originally looking for an older woman to play Carol but, on hearing Hunt, then 31, read for the part, he decided to take a chance. The challenge of the role excited Hunt who tries to avoid stereotypical "traditional wife" parts. Consider 'The Waterdance," where she played a woman trying to support her newly-paralyzed boyfriend, "Kiss of Death's" alcoholic wife or "Twister's" tornado-chasing scientist.

The daughter of a director and a photographer, Hunt, featured on the cover of February's Biography magazine, was always part of the arts world. By age 9, she was cast by a friend of her father's in a TV movie. For the next dozen years, she knocked around TV land, then alternated between movies and the stage.

Lamenting the one-dimensional quality of most women's parts, Hunt almost turned down sight unseen the career-defining role of independent, intense Jamie Buchman on "Mad About You." Then she read the script and the rest, as they say, is history.

Hunt helped make Jamie into a real person — charming and witty, but also sarcastic, pessimistic, dismissive and occasionally mean-spirited. Her comic skills earned her two Emmys for Best Actress in a Comedy Series. At some point, probably this year or next, Hunt acknowledges, "Mad About You" will end, which will leave "spaces for other things." As Hunt has shown, the sky's the limit.

Northern High School Students Of The Month Selected

The Northern High School Student Council and American Trust Bank recently announced the Students of the Month for December. They are: Kristin Lander, Brandon Patton, Craig Kamp, and Jenny Kolbe.

Kristin Lander, a freshman, is the daughter of George and Joyce Lander of Accident. She is a member of the band and the junior varsity basketball team. She is active in youth choir and is the secretary of her youth group at the Bear Creek Church of the Brethren. Kristin enjoys skiing, swimming, playing the piano, babysitting, and traveling. As a continuous honor roll student, Kristin was awarded a Success in School recognition.

Brandon Patton, a sophomore, is the son of Curtis and Ruby Patton of Accident. He is involved in the carpentry program at Northern and is a member of the Auto Mechanics Club. He enjoys maintaining a backhoe and dozer and riding three-wheelers in his spare time. He has been recognized as a Success in School student and is currently employed at the Accident Garage.

Craig Kamp, a junior, is the son of Steve and Sharon Kamp of Lonaconing. He plays basketball and runs track for Northern, and enjoys biking and fishing in his spare time.

Jenny Kolbe, a senior, is the daughter of William and Cynthia Kolbe of Bittinger. She plays soccer for Northern, as one of only two girls on the team. She is a member of the Catholic Regional Youth Ministries of Western Maryland and is active in the Parish Council.

NMS Students To Choose Courses For High School

Northern Middle School students will soon be selecting the direction that their high school studies will take. From the menu of available courses, youngsters will choose a program that most reflects their interests and possible career directions for the future.

Counseling and administrative staffs from Northern Middle and High schools will be advisor/participants in the scheduling process for next year. Eighth grade students will develop a four-year plan for their education at Northern High School, principal Martin Green said. "Parents will be an integral part of the important process through conferences with high and/or middle school personnel," he noted.

High school students will begin the same process within the next month. "Parents should discuss with their children the course requests and plans for next year," Green stated.

Parents who have questions concerning this process or graduation requirements may call the school guidance personnel at 301-746-8669 or 301-895-5434.

Grant Program Targets Small Watershed Areas

Sections of Garrett County could profit from a grant program announced last week in Annapolis. The initiative will fund projects developed by groups based in the Chesapeake Bay watershed.

The Chesapeake Bay Program, in partnership with the Alliance for the Chesapeake Bay, has launched this program to award grants for environmental and restoration projects. "Applicants may apply for funding for a wide range of projects, from protecting fish habitat to restoring forest buffers, to creating low-impact recreation sites," said Fran Flanigan, executive director for the Alliance for the Chesapeake Bay.

Applications are currently available, and proposals are due April 1. Any non-profit group organized for the purpose of watershed protection, recreation, community improvement, or similar purposes, or any local government in the Bay watershed in Maryland, Pennsylvania, and the District of Columbia is eligible.

Funding for this 1998 program was made possible through the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency and the Chesapeake Bay Program. Grants will be administered by the Alliance for the Chesapeake Bay, a regional non-profit organization.

For more information or to obtain application packets persons may call 1-410-377-6270, or access the website at www.chesapeakebay.net/bayprogram.

Preference will be given to on-the-ground projects that support goals such as reducing nutrient and toxic pollution, protecting habitat, restoring fisheries, and promoting sustainable patterns of development. "Every project, while directly benefiting the community, also will move us closer to restoring the Bay and its rivers," Flanigan stated.

Schools Receiving Maryland Taxes Course Materials

"While their parents are dealing with W-2s and tax forms, high school students will get some tax education of their own from special course materials that will help them understand their civic responsibility later in life," said Maryland State Comptroller Louis L. Goldstein.

The comptroller's office is providing about 1,300 high school teachers and resource personnel with materials designed to help students and teachers understand Maryland state and local taxes. The module explains the different taxes levied by the state and local governments and demonstrates how to complete simple Maryland income tax forms. Included in the course module are case studies, sample tax forms, a tax table, and other information to help students understand how state and local taxes are collected.

"We prepared this course material to be used in conjunction with the 'Understanding Taxes' course, which has been provided by the Internal Revenue Service for many years," Goldstein said. "This is the ninth year we've provided this material to Maryland teachers to use in government, business, math, or history classes."

One important goal of the Understanding Maryland Taxes program is to help income-earning students understand that they are generally subject to the same filing requirements as other single taxpayers. However, students with part-time jobs who expect to have less than $6,950 in income for 1998 and do not have interest or other income that will put them over the $6,950 limit are not required to have Maryland income tax withheld from their pay. "These students can get special exemption forms from high school counselors and college placement offices," he said.

The comptroller reminded students who had Maryland income tax withheld in 1997 that they can file Form 123 to claim a state tax refund if their incomes were below the $6,800 filing requirement. Form 123 has only five lines to fill in and takes just minutes to complete.

Teachers can get the Maryland state and local tax course module by contacting the comptroller's Public Affairs Office, Box 466, Goldstein Treasury Building, Annapolis, MD 21404-0466, telephone: 410-974-3885.

Frazee Competing For Crown Of Md. Junior Miss

Brandi Frazee, daughter of Brenda Frazee of Friendsville, will be among the competitors in Maryland's Junior Miss 1998 Scholarship Program in Frederick this Saturday evening. The 7 p.m. event at Urbana High School is part of a nationwide endeavor to honor and reward the country's outstanding high school young women for their achievements, and leads to the 41st National Junior Miss Finals to be held in Mobile, Ala., in June.

A student at Northern High School, Frazee is a member of the National Honor Society, the drum major with the Huskies marching band, and statistician with the volleyball and basketball teams. Over the past three years she has volunteered with the Blind Skier Program at the Wisp. Some of her hobbies include snow skiing, water skiing, and bowling. Frazee plans to attend college to study physical therapy.

In addition to the state title and the opportunity to compete at the national finals, Frazee and her competitors will be trying for cash scholarships as well as tuition scholarships to numerous nationwide colleges and universities, including Western Maryland College. The state Junior Miss who eventually wins the title of America's Junior Miss will receive a $30,000 scholarship to use at the college of her choice. Altogether, approximately $43 million in college scholarships and awards is presented annually to contestants at the state and national levels.

Tickets for Saturday evening's program are $5 in advance and can be purchased from program participants or by calling 301-682-5270. Tickets will also be available at the door. All proceeds will be used toward program scholarships.

WARM THE CHILDREN

Providing Area Winters Clothing for Needy Children

As a result of the generosity shown by over 150 donors to this campaign, a total of 118 children were accompanied to Treasure Island over the past two months, where they chose their own new coats, hats, boots, sweaters, and other warm clothing. The kids ranged in age from 6 months to 17 years.

This campaign benefited them completely because for what ever reason they are in need, it is by no fault of their own. And every penny donated -- totaling over $9,000 -- went directly to the campaign. There were no overhead costs! This is the first year The Republican has coordinated Warm the Children, and the response was overwhelming. Next year will be even more impressive, we are sure.

We thank our generous donors, we thank our wonderful volunteer shoppers, and we thank Ken Schmidt, manager of Treasure Island, and his staff for being so supportive of the program. We express our gratitude to the employees of the local school system who aided tremendously in the process of identifying families in need. We thank the great people at the Garrett County Social Services Department, namely Don Hanlin, Tom Ryan, Cathy Mills, Pat Hayes, and Pat Lloyd.

It is [illegible] to be able to provide these children with warm clothing free of charge, and we are thankful for the opportunity.

New Local Guard Unit Bound For Puerto Rico

Detachment 2, 243rd Combat Support Element (CSE) Maryland Army National Guard, Oakland, will be traveling to Puerto Rico for training from Feb. 27 to March 1. The new unit is commanded by Cpt. Stuart Mellon of Baltimore and Attachment Commander 2Lt. David Vick, and the overseas expedition is the unit's award for winning the State Recruiting and Retention Award for 1997.

The trip will give the local guardsmen an opportunity to train with the Puerto Rican National Guard in the construction of a berm, especially valuable for equipment operators. "We have many new soldiers who have experience with equipment only during active duty or in military schools," said 2Lt. Vick. "This will be our first training opportunity as a new unit to give our (equipment) operators real-life hands-on experience."

WWF Hails Smart Growth Initiative In Nationai Press

The World Wildlife Fund (WWF) recently recognized Maryland's innovative Smart Growth and Neighborhood Conservation initiative as a "Gift to the Earth" as part of the international organization's "Living Planet Campaign."

In quarter-page advertisements that appeared in the Friday, Jan. 30, editions of both The New York Times and The Washington Post, WWF praised the Smart Growth initiative, the new Rural Legacy Program, and the $200 million Conservation Reserve Enhancement Program, a federal-state partnership program designed to reduce nutrient pollution and conserve farmland in Maryland over the next 15 years.

"Under the leadership of Governor Parris Glendening, Maryland has initiated strong action to protect the Chesapeake Bay watershed from the threats of suburban sprawl and agricultural runoff," WWF stated in its advertisements, which are part of a campaign designed to highlight the struggle to protect the world's most outstanding wildlife and wild places on the eve of a new century.

The Chesapeake Bay watershed is one of 200 ecosystems around the globe targeted for protection by WWF because of the rich and unique array of species and habitats in those ecosystems that are found in few other places on earth. In a countdown that began 1,000 days before the turn of the century, every 100 days WWF has highlighted "bold and extraordinary actions to protect the world's most outstanding natural spaces and species," according to a press release from the governor's office.

"We are thrilled that the World Wildlife Fund is giving international recognition to our Smart Growth initiative," said Governor Glendening. "For the program to be hailed as a 'Gift to the Earth' by an organization as prestigious as the World Wildlife Fund reaffirms our belief that Smart Growth will have lasting importance in protecting our wildlife and other natural resources while [simultaneously] preserving Maryland's envied quality of life."

William Eichbaum, WWF vice president for U.S. programs and global threats, said "Governor Glendening's 'Gift to the Earth' represents an extraordinary pledge of funds and energy that will help protect Maryland's most valuable natural resources. These progressive initiatives work because they combine incentives for development in existing communities with disincentives for sprawl development, along with voluntary land preservation programs."

Maryland Department of Natural Resources secretary John R. Griffin called WWF recognition "a much appreciated acknowledgment of the success of Maryland's comprehensive approach to land conservation, and our continuing progress in protecting all our cultural and natural resources."

The full text of the WWF advertisement regarding the Maryland programs reads as follows: "Under the leadership of Governor Parris Glendening, Maryland has initiated strong action to protect the Chesapeake Bay watershed from the threats of suburban sprawl and agricultural runoff. Through the State's Smart Growth, Rural Legacy and Conservation Enhancement Reserve Programs, Maryland will have innovative new tools to direct development to meet habitat conservation needs on agricultural and forest lands. Inhabitants of the Chesapeake Bay, which is among the world's most biologically productive marine ecoregions, include the Atlantic blue crab and rockfish, numerous species of ducks, the great blue heron, and the magnificent osprey and bald eagle."

In addition to the Maryland programs, WWF also used its January 30 advertisements to formally recognize the federal government's purchase of 50,000 acres of sugar cane lands in the Florida Everglades, and an effort by the East African government of Zanzibar to set aside a 180-square mile bay as an officially protected marine ecosystem.

CONNECTING OAKLAND TO NEW YORK - A model of the Brooklyn Bridge was made by Garrett County woodworker Bernie Ravitz to commemorate the 100th anniversary of the joining of the independent community of Brooklyn to Manhattan as one the five boroughs. Ravitz, a former New York resident, said his grandfather, Selig Berman, was among the first to walk across the bridge on opening day in 1883. The toll at the time was one cent. The tower height of the bridge is 275 feet; the span between towers is 1,595 feet; the cables are 16 inches thick; and the width of the structure is 80 feet. The model is on display at the Ruth Enlow Library, Oakland, during the month of February.

Forum Slated For Victims Of Crime, Family Violence

Representatives from several agencies will hold a public forum to provide information on services available to victims of crime and/or family violence. The meeting will take place at Town Hall in Grantsville, Friday, Feb. 13, from 10 a.m. until noon and 1-4 p.m. The informational meeting is part of the Hot-Spot Community Outreach initiative.

Carolyn Hegeman, Victim Witness Coordinator in the office of the State's Attorney for Garrett County, has organized a panel for this forum that will include representatives from Domestic Violence/Sexual Assault Resource Center, Garrett County Department of Social Services, Garrett County Sheriff's Office, Parole and Probation, and the State's Attorney's Office.

The panel will offer information and answer questions about assistance for victims of violence, the criminal justice system, and the Grantsville Neighborhood Crimewatch, Hegeman said. "This program will be ongoing. We want to reach people and help them," she added.

Anyone in the Grantsville area who would like to get more information on this outreach program may contact Carolyn Hegeman by calling 301-895-3188.

Child Advocacy Pushes For Hike In Cigarette Tax

The Maryland Children's Initiative, on Tuesday, called for a $1.50 increase in Maryland's cigarette tax to reduce teen smoking and provide funding for needed pro-child programs. The Initiative, which includes the Smoke Free Maryland Coalition, the Safe and Sound Campaign, Maryland State Teachers Association, and Advocates for Children and Youth, pledged to fight for the tax increase and alert voters during the fall elections where each candidate stands on the issue.

More than 150 community, medical, and student organizations from across the state have endorsed the Initiative to date.

Michaeline Fedder, a Smoke Free Maryland board member, said, "This is the first time in our country that a $1.50 cigarette tax increase is being seriously proposed at the state level, and the first time in Maryland that such powerful and important organizations have come together to make this a priority issue."

Fedder read a letter from former Surgeon General and Maryland resident Dr. C. Everett Koop enthusiastically endorsing the Initiative. Dr. Koop said, "Maryland can be the very first state to demonstrate the leadership to seriously consider the kind of cigarette tax increase which will really make a difference in reducing teen smoking."

Michael Butera, executive director of the Maryland State Teachers Association/NEA, announced that the 48,000-member state teachers union would work hard to enact the initiative. "We will help mobilize the more than 70% of Maryland voters that, polls show, support increasing the cigarette tax to pay for programs like better reading instruction in public schools," he said.

Jan Jackson, executive director of Advocates for Children and Youth, also pledged strong support for the initiative from the state's leading child advocacy organization. "By raising the cigarette tax, we can help keep kids off cigarettes, and we can afford programs like supervised after-school activities for children," Jackson said.

Hathaway Ferebee, one of Baltimore's premier organizers and current director of the Safe and Sound Campaign (a grass-roots coalition working to improve the lives of Baltimore City's children), noted that there was strong support for the initiative in Baltimore City and across the state. "We are going to build a powerful statewide coalition and make sure candidates for governor and the general assembly know that their constituents overwhelmingly support the initiative," he said.

Notice of Election

There will be an election in the town of Friendsville to elect a mayor and three council members. The election will be held at the town hall Tuesday, February 10, 1998, between the hours of 11 a.m. to 7 p.m.

WINTER RULES MXZ6 70

It's black. It's yellow. It stings.

Ouch! That's what anyone who's competed against the Ski-Doo MXZ670 sled usually says. it's a great cross-country machine that's led the industry and out on the trails. This year, its front suspension, handle bars and new plastic skis are based on the race-proven, limited edition MXZx440LC. All together...it's one mean machine.

Farming In Maryland.....

Regulations Threaten Future Of Agriculture

For America's farmers and ranchers to flourish in the 21st century, federal and state governments must refrain from imposing knee-jerk regulations on agriculture to address perceived problems. That's the message American Farm Bureau Federation President Dean Kleckner delivered at a recent Purdue University symposium on agriculture's future.

Kleckner said public sentiment could hold the key to lessening government's overregulation of agriculture. It's up to farmers and ranchers, he said, to show Americans how efficient modern agriculture has become in feeding the world. And it's vital for non-farmers to understand the need for a healthy, prosperous agricultural community.

"U.S. farmers recognize that cultivating non-farmer trust and confidence is as important to our business as any of our other farming activities," Kleckner said.

Creating public awareness of modern farm practices, and getting teachers to add agriculture to their core history or economics lessons, will help urban residents gain a better grasp of agriculture.

"By keeping people informed of our latest innovations, as well as our continuing good management practices, farmers hope to instill confidence and a sense of security," he said.

America's farmers and ranchers have a unique opportunity to tap into an expanding world market. Under the Federal Agricultural Improvement and Reform Act, farmers now can produce according to consumer demand, according to Kleckner.

"Farmers are working more closely with processors and marketers to more closely meet the needs of consumers," said Kleckner. "In the U.S., farmers are into a phase where agricultural production on the farm is closely tied to the processor's understanding of what consumers want to buy.

USDA Unveils Milk Marketing Order Reform Proposal

Agriculture Secretary Dan Glickman recently released the Agriculture Department's proposal for reform of the federal milk marketing order program.

While Farm Bureau and other farm organizations are still analyzing the document, it appears to address many of the issues in a manner suggested by Farm Bureau's Order Reform Working Group, according to American Farm Bureau Federation dairy specialist Ken Olson.

"The proposal is the result of extensive work by USDA's Agricultural Marketing Service and demonstrates a good faith effort to propose some innovative ideas in changing federal orders," Olson said.

The Farm Bureau working group will meet soon to discuss the proposal and develop comments from the organization. The working group also will meet with other dairy industry representatives in an effort to coordinate responses to USDA on the order reform proposal.

The following are some commonly asked questions and answers on the proposal, prepared by USDA.

Q: Why did USDA undertake this reform effort?

A: Consolidation of federal milk orders was mandated by the 1996 farm bill, which restricts the number of milk orders to no fewer than 10 and no more than 14. Consolidation is required by April 4, 1999. The bill also authorized the agriculture secretary to fundamentally revisit all issues related to milk marketing orders.

Q: What is a federal milk order?

A: A milk order is a regulation voluntarily initiated and approved by a majority of producers in an area, which places requirements on the first buyers or handlers of milk from dairy farmers. One of those restrictions is that handlers must pay an assigned minimum price according to how milk is utilized. Milk is priced under a classified pricing plan that divides milk into classes according to use. Dairy farmers receive a uniform price that reflects the use value to handlers, who are regulated under the same order. Also, a milk order requires that all payments by handlers be pooled and the same average price is paid to individual dairy farmers or a cooperative association.

Q: Who is regulated by a federal milk order?

A: All milk used in eggnog will be Class I. At present, only milk used in low-fat eggnog is Class I. Also, milk used in cream cheese will be Class II, rather than Class III. Finally, a new Class IV, which would replace Class III-A, would include all milk used to make butter and any dried milk.

Q: What happens next?

A: The public has 60 days to comment. USDA will then consider all public input and finalize a rule. A referendum will be held on the implementation of the new milk orders, with a two-thirds majority necessary for passage. A hearing on the issue of flooring the BFP will be held in Washington, D.C., on Feb. 17.

A: Milk handlers are the only persons regulated, not farmers. Handlers generally are processors who distribute fluid milk products in a designated marketing area.

Q: How were the proposed marketing area boundaries determined?

A: An analysis of distribution and procurement patterns was developed to determine which order areas were most closely related. Proposals and comments submitted by the public also were considered.

Q: What Class I pricing plan does the proposed rule recommend?

A: The proposed rule offers two options for reforming the Class I (fluid milk) pricing surface. Both options recognize a location-value of milk—that is, the cost involved with transporting milk. Option 1A is a set of Class I prices that vary by location (called a "price surface"), which closely reflects the current pricing structure, but makes adjustments for recent changes in economic conditions.

The more market-oriented Option 1B, which is the administration's preferred alternative, still provides minimum prices for higher valued fluid use, while relying more on the market to generate higher prices when needed to attract a sufficient supply of milk to market.

Q: What is the basic formula price (BFP)?

A: The basic formula price is used to determine order prices for milk used in manufactured products and the minimum Class I and II prices for milk pooled under the federal orders. The current BFP is based on a survey of prices paid for manufacturing grade (Grade B) milk by plants in Minnesota and Wisconsin, updated monthly.

Q: Why does the BFP need to be replaced?

A: The continuing decline in the volume of Grade B milk produced in the Upper Midwest and nationally suggests that the current pricing system may no longer be a statistically reliable indicator of the value of milk used in manufactured products.

Q: How would the proposed BFP work?

A: The proposed BFP replacement would be based on a multiple component pricing system that would: determine butterfat prices per pound for milk used in Classes II, III and IV from a butter price; determine protein and other solids prices for milk used in Class III products from cheese and whey prices; determine a non-fat solids price for milk used in Class IV products from non-fat dry milk product prices; compute a Class I price mover from a six-month declining average of the higher of the Class III or Class IV skim milk prices for the second preceding month and add a fixed Class I differential to determine a Class I price for the second following month; and compute the Class II skim milk price by adding 70 cents to the Class IV skim milk price.

Q: How is milk classified under a milk order?

A: Milk is classified according to its use by a handler. At present, generally, fluid milk products are Class I; soft, spoonable products are Class II; hard cheeses and butter are Class III; and non-fat dry milk is Class III-A.

Q: How will these classifications change under the proposed rule?

Conference To Examine Ways For Mid-Atlantic Ag To Survive, Prosper

U.S. Congressman Wayne Gilchrest of Maryland will headline a two-day conference on the economic and environmental future of mid-Atlantic agriculture that is expected to draw scores of farmers and agriculture groups, agencies, educators and researchers to the Eastern Shore of Maryland in March.

Titled "Ag Alternatives '98 — Farming for a Better Tomorrow," the conference on March 3 and 4 in the main auditorium of Chesapeake College in Wye Mills will focus on agriculture in Maryland and Delaware and how it can meet the growing economic and environmental challenges it faces. The Future Harvest Project, a four-year-old effort by local farmers and residents, agricultural and environmental groups, to foster and promote the economic, environmental and social sustainability of area agriculture, is sponsoring the event.

"Today food is expected not only to be affordable but also to be produced in a safe and environmentally responsible way," said Michael Heller, Future Harvest Project director. "To that end, this conference will provide information not only on innovative production and marketing options available to farmers, but also on new and improved farming practices and techniques that safeguard the quality of our soil, water, air and other natural resources."

Gilchrest, who has long championed farmland protection and other agricultural conservation issues in the U.S. Congress, will speak on "Stewardship and Land Ethics in Our Farming and Natural Environment." Other prominent speakers and their topics will be: Drs. Russ Brinsfield and Ken Staver of the University of Maryland Wye Research and Education Center on the controversial issue of "Nitrogen and Phosphorous Transport from Agriculture to the Bay"; Dr. Fred Magdoff, professor of agronomy at the University of Vermont and one of the nation's most respected soil scientists on "Soil Quality and Soil Health"; Ann Harvey Yonkers, Washington Post food writer, farmers' market manager, and distributor of fresh fruits and vegetables, who will moderate a panel (four growers and a chef) discussion on "Successful Direct Marketing — What Really Works"; Dr. Michael Kemp, Chesapeake Bay water quality expert and University of Maryland professor, on agriculture's impact on the Bay; and Tim Bowser, co-chair of the national Campaign for Sustainable Agriculture and executive director of the Pennsylvania Association of Sustainable Agriculture, on the new directions of agriculture and formation of a local organization to help shape its future here.

Other topics to be addressed include the latest environmentally safe farming production practices for organic grains and vegetables.

The conference is open to the public. Registration is $40, including lunch on both days. Interested registrants should contact Robin Haggie at the Chesapeake Wildlife Heritage, 410-822-5100, or Mark Davis at Delaware State University, 302-739-6946, or send a $40 check c/o Chesapeake Wildlife Heritage, PO Box 1745, Easton, MD 21601. Registration deadline is February 25.

Chesapeake College is in Wye Mills, Maryland, on the Eastern shore, 90 minutes east of Wasington, D.C., about seven miles from the 301 and 50 split, just off 50. Parking is available.

Farm Bureau Renews Call For Estate Tax Repeal

Saying the federal estate tax continues to pose a threat to the well-being of America's family farming and ranching operations, Farm Bureau last week renewed its call for all-out repeal of the punitive "death tax."

"Last year's Taxpayer Relief Act made cuts in estate taxes that are helpful to agricultural producers, but it stopped short of ending death taxes that can destroy a family business," said Carl Loop Jr., American Farm Bureau Federation vice president and Florida Farm Bureau president.

Loop testified before the House Ways and Means Committee, telling members that the estate tax is unfair to farmers and ranchers. Loop told the panel that his flourishing nursery and greenhouse business is one of the family-owned operations threatened by the tax.

"My son and daughter want to continue our family business and I would like to pass it on to them," Loop told the committee. "For the last five years, I have been working with attorneys to plan for my death. After hours of worry and large attorney fees I still don't know if my estate tax plan will save our family business."

Loop said he is not alone in his fear of the federal estate tax. He noted that 99 percent of the nation's farms and ranches are family owned, controlled, and operated. And with the average age of the nation's producers pushing 60, the time for transfer of many of these operations to younger generations is quickly approaching, he told the panel. Without action to repeal the estate tax, the ramifications on American agriculture will be enormous, Loop said.

"Inflation has increased the value of both our land and equipment to the point that my family would have to sell part of the nursery to pay death taxes," Loop said.

"It seems to me and my family that Loop's Nursery and Greenhouses Inc. is worth much more to our community and the government as an ongoing business, when compared to the amount of a one-time estate tax payment," he said. "If my family is forced out of business by death taxes, everything that I have worked for will be lost. My family will lose its livelihood, 85-plus families (employed by the business) will lose their incomes and the community will lose a valuable part of its business base.

"We do not understand why the government wants to penalize us for being successful."

HACCP Inspection System Takes Effect At Large Processing Plants

A major new meat and poultry inspection program, called Hazard Analysis and Critical Control Points (HACCP), was implemented at the nation's 312 largest meat and poultry plants last week. Farm Bureau supports the program and believes it will further increase the safety of America's food supply.

Dennis Stolte, American Farm Bureau Federation senior governmental relations director, said the program is aimed at preventing problems before they occur and is based on common sense.

Stolte said the system will help "identify risks, to make changes to reduce risks and provide some kind of accountability in the form of records" to ensure that the actions taken reduce the threats of foodborne pathogens.

"We're talking about identifying areas in the (meat or poultry) plant where you have a high risk of food-borne pathogens," Stolte said. "HACCP is aimed at reducing, to the lowest degree possible, health hazards from meat and poultry pathogens."

Under the new system, each plant will operate under an HACCP plan designed to prevent contamination of meat or poultry. In addition, plants will continue to maintain the standard operating procedures for sanitation and slaughter and will test for generic E. coli. USDA's Food Safety and Inspection Service will collect samples to ensure that plants are reducing and controlling the amount of meat or poultry that is contaminated with salmonella.

Strengthening the nation's food safety regulations has been in the works since a 1993 outbreak of food-borne illness caused by the E. coli 0157:H7 pathogen. The HACCP approach is a system of process control that was developed by the National Aeronautics and Space Administration in preparation for space flight and has been adopted by many industries.

The program will require processing plant employees to keep records verifying that plants are following procedures to prevent hazards and ensure food safety. The records of microbial testing compiled by the plant for generic E. coli and by USDA for salmonella will provide data that will show if products are meeting performance standards established by the agency.

"This is a revolutionary change in the way meat and poultry is inspected that, if implemented properly, we think will make some big differences in the risk to consumers," Stolte said.

The 312 largest processing plants account for 75 percent of livestock slaughtered in the United States. The HACCP plan will be phased in over two years in the remaining 6,100 plants.

Horse Salve Eases Arthritis Pain

LOUISVILLE KY. – An ingredient derived from hot peppers that decreases inflamation in racehorse's legs, has now been approved by government researchers for human use. The ingredient has been formulated into a product called ARTH-Rx®. ARTH-Rx comes in a strength designed for humans. Researchers are excited and say the formula can relieve arthritis pain for millions.

Developed by the Phillips Gulf Corporation. ARTH-Rx is a breakthrough in the treatment of painful disorders ranging from minor aches and pains to more serious conditions such as arthritis, bursitis, rheumatism, tendonitis, backache and more.

Although the mechanism by which ARTH-Rx works to relieve pain is not totally clear, scientists suggest that pain is relieved because ARTH-Rx intercepts the messeger substance that send pain signals to the brain.

ARTH-Rx is available in a convenient roll-on applicator without a prescription. According to a spokesperson for the company, due to the overwhelming demand for ARTH-Rx, supplies are sometimes limited. ARTH-Rx can also be ordered by calling 1-800-729-8446.

ARTH-Rx is available at:

Schlosnagle Seeks Re-Election As Friendsville Mayor

Spencer R. Schlosnagle, the mayor of Friendsville, recently announced his intention to seek another term as that community's chief executive. The youngest mayor to ever be elected in the state of Maryland, Schlosnagle is a graduate of Northern High School. He attended Garrett Community College majoring in business administration and Frostburg State University majoring in political science.

Schlosnagle has served on numerous local boards and committees. He is the past president of the Governor's Youth Advisory Council, served as Garrett County's municipal representative on the Tri-County Council for Western Maryland Inc., is a member of the Grace Lutheran Church and past president of the church council. Mayor Schlosnagle has also served on the American Red Cross Board of Directors, the Democratic Central Committee for Garrett County, and the Friendsville Town Council.

In Schlosnagle's tenure as mayor, during which time he has never missed a meeting, numerous projects have been accomplished for the town. The mayor cited cooperation of the town council and local citizens as a major component in achieving several of his goals. "I value the input of our local citizens and pledge to put forth my best efforts to address their concerns," he stated. Most recently, the town has purchased over 20 new Christmas decorations. Contributions for this civic project came from organizations, churches, local businesses, and individuals, who donated nearly $4,000. "It is almost unbelievable what can be accomplished when we all work together to achieve a common goal," said Schlosnagle.

The mayor stated that the town council and he are proactive in seeing that town streets and sidewalks are maintained and repaired in timely manner. "We care about the health and safety of both the residents of Friendsville and visitors to our community, and the condition of our streets and sidewalks is an important concern relative to that safety."

Schlosnagle said that he has worked to have the local sheriff's office and the Maryland State Police be more active in patrolling in Friendsville. "The town has an excellent working relationship with these two law enforcement agencies," according to the mayor.

Crediting the cooperative efforts of the town and the Garrett County Sanitary District Inc., Scholsnagle pointed out that numerous stormdrain repairs and upgrades have recently been completed within the town.

Mayor Schlosnagle and the town council have worked for over a year to secure a new physician for the town, he said. This desire for local medical coverage recently became a reality when Garrett Medical Group located a nurse practitioner, supported by two physicians, at the Friendsville office of Garrett Medical Group.

"Community pride is evident everyday in our little town," Schlosnagle stated, "and it really reaches a high point during our annual 'Clean Up — Paint Up Week,' sponsored by the mayor and council. It's wonderful to see so many citizens working together to beautify Friendsville," he said.

Schlosnagle went on to state that, along with the town council, he has sought community input for future development work at the Friendsville Community Park. Several new projects are planned for the park this spring through a funding grant of $42,000 from the state's Program Open Space agency. A master development plan for the park will be forthcoming in the near future. This plan, according to the mayor, will incorporate many of the ideas proposed by local citizens at the public meetings concerning park development.

Some future goals of Mayor Schlosnagle are to continue working with Garrett County Community Action Committee Inc. to establish a new senior/community center facility in town, to address the potential flooding concerns along Bear Creek and the Youghiogheny River, and to continue to provide the best municipal services possible.

Mayor Schlosnagle stated that the town's financial picture is in the strongest fiscal condition in recent years. Funds have been set aside for various capital improvement projects, while this administration has once again lowered the municipal tax rate. "Our town is heading in the right direction for a bright future for our citizens," the mayor said. "My desire is to remain as Friendsville's chief executive and to provide for the needs of our residents to make this a better community. Working together we can continue to build hope for a bright future for Friendsville as we enter the 21st century," he concluded.

Herb Is Effective As An Antidepressant

A herbal drug used as a medical remedy since the middle ages and popular in Germany for sleep and anxiety problems also is effective as an antidepressant. The medicine is sold in this country as St. John's Wort Extract. The active ingredient in St. John's Wort Extract is hypericum perforatum. The plant from which hypericum is obtained is known as goat weed, rosin rose, and amber touch-and-heal. The antidepressant properties of St. John's Wort Extract are thought to be due to its ability to inhibit an enzyme called MAO, the same mechanism by which some prescription medicines exert their effects.

According to a recent review of studies, St. John's Wort Extract was about equal to the effectiveness of prescription antidepressant medicines. There has been criticism of these studies, however, due to the different doses and types of hypericum taken. More research is needed to determine the exact role of this agent and its long-term effectiveness as an antidepressant.

King Seeks Election To Friendsville Town Council Seat

Frani King has announced her candidacy for Friendsville town council seat. "I would like the opportunity to hold this office and offer input with an innovative approach to town government," she said.

The plank that King put forth in her statement listed her priorities as making the senior citizen's center become a reality, working with county law enforcement offices to get more police protection in the community, seeing that more sidewalk and drainage problems are completed, involvement of children in decorating the town at Christmas time, and monthly dinners sponsored by different groups.

King also emphasized that "definitely, the Town Park is a major priority on my list. I want to help to get the park improved, and repair what is already there," she said.

"I would like for the Mayor and Council to meet with Garrett Sanitation to try and get the [currently allowed] amount of gallons per month . . . to be increased by one or two thousand gallons a month at no additional cost," King proposed. "I know when I use the allotted amount what a hardship that is for someone with a family."

King's statement also included a challenge to "improve relationships" within the town. "I would like to see all of our different groups, community organizations, churches, school, etc., interact with each group to improve relationships toward each other. I would like our town groups and businesses to help create more ways for our middle and high school students to get Community Service hours, to beautify our town, etc.," she said.

"I know money is tight and we can make no promises except to work with our mayor and fellow council persons to do the best with what we have to work with.

"Your vote will be greatly appreciated," King concluded. "I look forward to working with all of you. Your concerns are my concerns."

PRESCRIPTIONS: NEW STRATEGIES FOR REVITALIZING DEMOCRATIC INSTITUTIONS

We, as citizens, must revitalize our democratic system. We must make our government more accountable, more responsive, and more representative. We must convince our fellow citizens to take part in civic life themselves and we must provide the information, skills, and civic organizations essential to effective participation. And we must each participate fully and actively ourselves. These are the aims of the League's "Making Democracy Work" campaign.

For many of the key indicators, we know what will work. The prescriptions are clear. As part of the "Making Democracy Work" campaign, the League at every level—national, state, and local—is applying these and other innovative techniques to reinvigorate democracy in communities across the country. These are a sampling of the goals and strategies of the campaign at the national level that are detailed in full in the report:

- Increase voter turnout. A combination of one-on-one contact and information that helps people understand the importance of elections to their everyday lives works to increase voter participation. Our goal is to increase voter turnout to 70 percent of the eligible population by the year 2008. The League, working with other concerned organizations, will accomplish that goal through aggressive and extensive programs at the national, state, and local levels to contact potential voters, ask for their participation, and provide the information they need.
- Reform campaign finance. The League will pursue both short- and long-term goals. Over the short-term, we will work to correct the most egregious abuses of the current system with achievable, incremental reforms. Over the longer term, we will work for fundamental reform, including public financing. Again, we know what works. Several states, using traditional grassroots activism and political pragmatism, have successfully reformed campaign finance at the state level. We will employ those same practical strategies to pass reform at the national level.
- Expand civic education and knowledge. The League's experience shows that what works to educate and inform citizens is to democratize information—to make it as accessible as possible to the largest number of people. The League will identify the specific skills and information citizens need to participate effectively in public life and develop programming to meet those needs. Using new technologies as well as traditional grassroots training and education, we will provide understandable, unbiased information about issues, elections, and the workings of government that citizens of all ages can use to take responsible civic action.
- Enhance diversity of representation. To reach our goal of increasing the number of women and minorities running for elective office in each future election, the League, which has long served as a training-ground for women, will pursue two proven strategies: hands-on training and encouragement. In a coordinated effort with other organizations working with minority and women candidates, we will provide informational resources and guidance for community-based training for potential candidates across the country. This "Running and Winning" program will also include a high school leadership program aimed at encouraging girls to pursue leadership roles in public life.
- Build civic participation. Citizens need to see that they can have an impact on their community and their government—that their ideas and their contributions matter. People also need opportunities to join with others in addressing common concerns. The League will be working to equip citizens and community leaders with the skills they need to participate effectively themselves and with volunteer and community organizations.

As an organization that thrives on civic participation by informed and dedicated citizens throughout the country, the League of Women Voters recognizes that it has an important stake—and an important role to play—in getting Americans more involved in their communities, at the ballot box, in public policy debates, and in government deliberations at all levels. We also recognize that no one organization, nor any group of organizations, can accomplish these tasks alone. Millions of individual citizens, other concerned organizations, and the League must work together across the country to plant the seeds for sustained community-wide collaborations and greater citizen participation.

Just as the key indicators show that our democracy is not healthy, the goals and strategies briefly outlined here mark a path toward a revitalized democracy. We call on all concerned Americans, on other organizations and volunteer associations, to join us in this multi-faceted effort.

Democracy is a promise, not a guarantee. It is a promise that each of us, as citizens, makes to one another. To participate. To debate. To vote. Democracy means engaging in the struggle to find the common good. We in the League are determined to engage in this struggle and we are determined to make democracy work.

Chastity Workshop Slated Feb. 14 At Crisis Center

A Valentine's Day (Feb. 14) Chastity Workshop will be held at the Mountain Top Crisis Pregnancy Center (MTCPC) with the purpose of encouraging youth, age 12 and older, to choose chastity as their lifestyle. The center is located at 111 Alderson Street in Loch Lynn.

The workshop will begin with the parent/adult session from 9:30 to 11:30 a.m. This portion of the day is for all parents, grandparents, educators, mentors, coaches, and all other individuals who are influential to young people. The discussion will focus on dating, courtship, how to talk to young people about sex, and how to handle various situations, according to a spokesperson.

The second session, slated for noon until 3 p.m., will be for girls age 12 and older. The third part of the workshop will be for boys age 12 and older and will take place from 3 to 4 p.m. In these sessions, the discussions will focus on the meaning of chastity, dating, waiting for marriage, how to say "no," and the "safe-sex lie."

The classes will be taught by Carol Peracchio, a MTCPC volunteer.

Persons interested in attending the workshop should register by calling MTCPC at 301-334-1058 before Feb. 14. Space is limited.

Brenda Gank Is GCMH Employee Award Winner

Housekeeper Brenda Gank was named Garrett County Memorial Hospital's Employees' Choice Award recipient for the month of January.

Ms. Gank, who has been employed at Garrett Memorial for the past 13 years, began her career in the laundry department before transferring to housekeeping. "Brenda is always ready to lend a helping hand," said Tom Dunbar, director of housekeeping and laundry services at the hospital. "If I ever need her to help out in an emergency situation, she never refuses. With her experience in both the laundry and housekeeping departments, she can work between the two departments when needed and willingly does so."

Gank resides in the Oakland area with her husband Darvin and their son.

Seats Remain For Garden Club Trip To Philly Show

Next Monday, Feb. 9, is the deadline to secure a reservation for an overnight bus trip planned by the Mtn. Spaces on the bus, which departs on Monday, March 2, and returns the next evening, are available on a a first-come basis to any persons interested in attending.

This year's theme for the Philadelphia Flower Show will herald the coming of spring with a French motif, La Passion du Jardin (The Passion of the Garden.) Sculpted gardens, elaborate landscapes, and floral artistry will fill 10 acres at the "nationally acclaimed show."

For further information or to make bus reservations, interested persons may contact either Lois Sherrard at 301-746-7008 or Peggy Nagel at 1-304-789-5555.

Volunteers Needed For Phone Call Reassurance Effort

Community Action's Area Agency on Aging is seeking volunteers for its telephone reassurance program. Through this service, brief phone calls are made daily by trained volunteers to elderly, isolated senior citizens to verify their well-being.

"The Agency on Aging is in the process of revamping the Telephone Reassurance Service (TRS)," a AAA spokeswoman said. The agency will continue to coordinate this effort, but other groups will be assuming responsibilities as well.

Several local agencies have united with the AAA to provide the service to elderly residents. The Oakland Police, Seniors and Law Enforcement Together (S.A.L.T.), and the Garrett County Sheriff's Office have joined AAA's efforts to expand the program, she said.

Information on the elderly participants is kept on file, including two emergency phone numbers that are used in the event the volunteer cannot reach the participant. As a last resort, law enforcement officers from either the sheriff's office or the Oakland City Police will be dispatched for a well-being check, the spokeswoman noted.

"Although TRS has always been a viable AAA program, volunteer recruitment has continued to be a problem. Now that S.A.L.T. has agreed to become a sponsor and to promote TRS, we hope to identify more volunteers to assist with the program," she said.

Individuals wishing to volunteer or businesses which would allow employees to act as callers during work hours are asked to call AAA at 301-334-9431 or 1-888-877-8403 (toll free).

Lake Park, has been named to the dean's list at Bucknell University in Lewisburg, Pa., for outstanding academic achievement during the fall semester. Renovation Topic Of Discussion At Flowery Vale Ctr.

An informal meeting was held Monday evening between Duane Yoder, executive director of Garrett County Community Action, and several Accident residents. The topic of discussion was remodeling of the Flowery Vale Senior Citizens Center.

The old Accident School, which houses the center, is owned and operated by Community Action. The center occupies a portion of the building and the rest is divided into apartments.

Renovating or remodeling the center would result in better use of the space available, Yoder explained. "We could have Tressler Lutheran Services, the owner of the Mtn. Glade Adult Medical Day Care in Oakland, use part of the facility," he said.

Currently, Mtn. Glade has clients in the northern end of the county who must be transported to Oakland for services.

Yoder said the types of changes being considered are minimal. "We would put in a folding door that would divide the space and install a wheel chair shower. Those would really be the only changes," he noted.

Tressler Lutheran Center would pay rent to use the space in Flowery Vale. These funds could then be used to offset the cost to Community Action of operating the facility.

Flowery Vale is currently used for senior dinners, senior classes and social activities, and a variety of community events, including an annual art exhibit. "The changes wouldn't prevent future use of the center by the community," Yoder said.

One of the residents present suggested to Yoder that a representative from Tressler Lutheran Center attend a public town meeting in Accident to discuss the project and to answer questions.

Oakland Church Notes Visit From Mission Family

St. Paul's United Methodist Church, Oakland, will welcome Ron and Cathy Whitlatch, missionaries to Argentina, on Thursday, Feb. 12. The Whitlatches are missionaries with the General Board of Global Ministries, assigned to Argentina Evangelical Methodist Church, as pastors in the city of Mendoza.

In addition to his duties as pastor of the central church, Ron serves in the congregation's mission project in the Barrio Patron Santiago, where Cathy also pastors a new congregation. Cathy serves as chaplain at the church's Alberto Schweitzer school, where she provides pastoral care to 450 primary and secondary students, teachers, and staff.

Patron Santiago is a community of laborers who have been highly affected by the economic changes in Argentina. Unemployment, poverty, crime, and social problems are increasing in the area.

United Methodists are the first to establish a church in the barrio to address the social and spiritual needs. In addition to providing space for worship and Christian education, the church strives to better the social situation of those who live there.

This is Ron's third term of service in Argentina. He is a member of the WV Conference, where he served as a pastor before being assigned to Argentina in 1983. He also served as "peace with justice" educator in the Rocky Mountain Conference from 1992-1995. Cathy previously taught math at Kermit High School, W.Va., and Hawthorne High and Eastern Christian High schools, both in New Jersey.

The Whitlatches will be accompanied by their three children: Meg, age 18, Hays, age 15 and Alberto, age 12. St. Paul's United Methodist Church invites all members of the community to attend a slide presentation by the Whitlatches.

There will be a covered dish dinner beginning at 6:15 p.m. in Fellowship Hall, followed by the slide program at 7:00 p.m.

Scholarship Info Available From Updated Pamphlet

With the college application season in full swing, families are now facing the dilemma of how to pay for tuition, room and board, text books, lab fees, and other expenses. Skyrocketing costs coupled with cutbacks of government grants and college assistance are putting extra strain on family budgets and assets. As a result many families are relying on burdensome debt to finance their children's education.

The good news is that there are nearly 400,000 scholarship and grant sources now available to help students pay for college costs. Over 80% of these scholarships do not depend on family need or high grades but are awarded based on factors such as the student's interests, activities, field of study, age, ethnic background or parent's work or military service.

According to the U.S. Department of Education and financial aid experts, many students are missing out on the financial assistance opportunities available to them simply because they are not aware of the scholarship process and where to find scholarships that can help them. "Students who take the initiative to find out what sources they qualify for are usually successful in funding either part or all of their education," financial aid personnel have stated.

Now through the resources of the National Academic Funding Advisory (NAFA), an updated and expanded publication for 1998 is available which provides important information for all students seeking financial assistance, how to use the new tax changes to save money on educational expenses, and where to secure direct scholarship money.

For information on how to receive academic funding and scholarships for college, graduate school or trade school, send a No. 10 self addressed, double stamped envelope plus $2 to cover handling to the National Academic Funding Advisory (NAFA), 188 Summer Street Dept. M1, Portsmouth, NH 03801.

PUBLIC NOTICES

PUBLIC NOTICE

The Maryland Mining Program will submit an application to the U.S. Department of the Interior, Office of Surface Mining, for the funding of an abandoned coal mine reclamation project. The funding will be in accordance with Title IV, Section 405 of Public Law 95-87, Surface Mining Control and Reclamation Act of 1977.

Qualification for Federal Funding under Title IV is contingent on an approved State Surface Coal Mining Regulatory Program and a State Abandoned Mine Lands Reclamation Plan. Maryland has received Office of Surface Mining approval of both programs. Project funding will originate from the Abandoned Mine Reclamation Fund, administered by the Office of Surface Mining.

It is the goal of the Maryland Abandoned Mine Reclamation Program to promote the reclamation of abandoned coal mine areas in Maryland that have been left in an inadequately reclaimed condition and endanger the safety of the public, degrade the quality of the environment, and/or diminish the beneficial use of land and water resources.

Comments are being solicited on the relative priority of the project listed below and/or any other abandoned mine problems in the Maryland Coal Region. The Bureau of Mines requests information from the public concerning abandoned mine problems that pose a potential threat to the public health and safety or severely degrades the environment.

A public meeting concerning the proposed project will be held as follows:

Wednesday, February 18, 1998
7:00 P.M.
Maryland Bureau of Mines
160 South Water Street,
Rm 107
Frostburg, MD 21532

Further information concerning the proposed project can be obtained by contacting Mr. John Eilers, Land and Water Restoration Section, Maryland Bureau of Mines, 160 South Water St., Frostburg, Md 21532, 301-689-8020, x 304. Written comments concerning this project and the Maryland Abandoned Mine Reclamation Program will be received at the public hearing and until Wednesday, March 4, 1998. Address all comments to the Maryland Bureau of Mines, Attention: Mr. John Eilers.

The following is a general description of the proposed reclamation project, including the location, County, nearest town or physical feature, and nature of the problem:

1. OAK HILL LANDSLIDE STABILIZATION PROJECT

Location: Approximately 1 mile north of Lonaconing, Allegany County along the west side of the stream channel of George's Creek.

Problem: An abandoned coal refuse pile located adjacent to George's Creek is sliding into the stream channel, posing an obstruction to stream flow and threatening the health and safety of nearby residents.

DESSERT BAR

The Aurora United Methodist Youth Group, Teens Living for Christ, will hold a Valentine Dessert Bar Sunday, Feb. 15, from 2 to 4 p.m., at the Aurora United Methodist Memorial Building. A donation of $3 per adult and $1.50 for children 12 years and younger will be collected at the door.

BUS TRIP TO GETTYSBURG

Aid Association for Lutherans Branch 9783 is sponsoring a bus trip to Gettysburg, Pa., to tour the battlefield area, and also the Gettysburg Lutheran Seminary, on April 18. The bus will leave at 7 a.m. from St. Paul's Lutheran Church in Aurora, and the cost for the trip will be $20 each if at least 42 people go. If fewer, the cost will be $25 each. The cost does not include meals.

Those interested in making this trip are asked to call Delores Stemple at 735-5187 as soon as possible. Payment must be made by March 1.

PICTURE PRESENTED

An 8 by 10 inch reproduction of the Aurora High School Class of 1952 was taken to the Aurora School on January 21 by Richard Lantz of Mtn. Lake Park, secretary of that class. The presentation was made to David Toothman, principal, who said that this was the first class picture to be presented to the school. He expressed his appreciation for the presentation and also a desire to provide a place for these pictures to be displayed. The picture is presently in the school library.

This is an on-going project of the Aurora alumni and, in fact, is not the first picture received since all were destroyed by the fire which burned most of the old school contents. There are pictures still needed for classes of 1939, 1951, 1954, 1964, 1968, 1969, 1973, 1977, 1941 and 1942. Anyone having an original picture is asked to contact James Slawter, 735-3531, at Aurora, or a local member of this class so that a copy can be made. It is hoped that they may be displayed somewhere in the new school.

CRAFT FAIR

Union Ambulance is planning to have a table at the craft fair on April 4 from 10 a.m. until 3 p.m. at the squad hall in Aurora. Anyone who wishes to make something for sale is encouraged to do so. Baked goods, in addition to craft items of decorative or useful value, will be available for sale. Organizations may reserve tables by contacting either Delores Stemple, 735-5187, or Ellen Harsh 735-5468, and the cost is $10 each.

DEATHS NOTED

Elma (Wotring) Hardesty, 87, Aurora, died January 28 at the home of her niece and nephew, Anna Mae and William "Bink" Sisler.

A daughter of the late George and Ada Wotring of Aurora, she was married to Ted L. Hardesty who preceded her in death.

She is survived by two sisters, Grace Ayers of North Versailles, Pa., and Margaret McDaniel, Cumberland; and two brothers, Junior "Monk" Wotring of Davis and William Wotring of Arthurdale.

Mergil (McWilliams) Fike, 89, died February 1 at Cortland Acres Nursing Home, where she had resided for the past 12 years. One daughter, Maxine Martin, and her husband, Lee Martin, Aurora, survive.

Delores Jean Bee of Fingerboard Rd., Oakland, died January 31 in a Cumberland hospital. She had been a patient there for about a week. Her mother, Mildred Ark Knotts Stemple of Aurora, is among the survivors.

AURORA SCHOOL

Personnel at the Aurora School are accepting Campbell and Swanson product labels, and General Mills Box Tops for Education, the latter of which may be sent in prior to February 20 to receive double bonus points, provided a Valentine, either bought or handmade, is stapled to it.

Youth league basketball for February 6 schedules Patti Wilt vs. Buddy Fauber; Shari Mauldin vs. Mack Radford; and Allen Strawser vs. Brian Wilt. Games begin at 6 p.m. Scheduled for February 8, beginning at 1 p.m., are Mack Radford vs. Jack Snyder; Mike Rocha/Chris Conrad vs Alan Wilt; Stacey Rocha vs. Derrick Radford; Alan Snyder vs. Brian Corbin; and Rick Myers vs. John Mauldin.

Fourth grade instructor is Karen Toothman who reports her students have recently studied many different versions of the "Cinderella" story. They have also made school displays about the rainforest and some for The Terra Alta Bank. They continue to collect money to be sent to their adopted school partner.

Alternate to Math Field Day from the sixth grade is Lauren Roth.

PERSONAL MENTION

Maxine Hauser of Aurora received word of the death on January 29 of her aunt, Merle Close, 97, in a Canton, Ohio, nursing home. She was born at St. George, a daughter of the late Solomon and Sarah Dumire. Her husband, Duncan Close, preceded in death, as did two daughters, Mary and Betty. Surviving is one daughter, Roseanne Close of Canton; one son, James Close, Mesa, Ariz.; and four grandchildren. Services and interment were in Canton.

John Parsons of Aurora was a visitor last week with Carl and Jan Shaffer at Grove City, Ohio.

Homer Fike of Eglon was taken Saturday morning to Garrett County Memorial Hospital, but was able to return later to his home.

DNR Responds As Dog Attacks Deer On Ice

An unusual call was received Monday by the Department of Natural Resources concerning a dog attacking a deer on the frozen surface of Deep Creek Lake. Rangers Darrell Riley and Jamie Adams of Deep Creek Lake Recreation Area responded to the scene in the area of the Route 219 bridge shortly after 9:10 a.m.

According to Paul Durham, manager of Deep Creek Lake Recreation Area, a black dog had apparently chased a deer out onto the ice. Once there, the deer's footing became unstable and the dog was able to attack and bring down the animal. At the time the call was received and the rangers responded, the deer was alive.

The dog was chased off by the rangers; however, the deer died.

Shortly afterwards, Durham said, a call came from Garrett Central that a dog was chasing a fawn on the ice at Deep Creek Lake. Upon responding to the scene, rangers found that it was the same black dog, encountered earlier, which was attacking the fawn.

Dressed in ice rescue suits, the rangers attempted to separate the dog from the fawn through verbal commands. The dog was chased to shore, but returned. Following procedure, the rangers destroyed the dog.

The fawn reportedly ran to the woods but was observed to be bleeding.

WEBBED WADDLERS WARILY WALK ON WATER — Frozen water, that is. These Canada geese were caught by staff photographer John McEwen as they tested the thickness of the ice, obviously dense enough to support the fair-sized birds. The geese seem to be everywhere this season, honking along overhead as they fly in their characteristic V formations. This area is south to them, even though the winters are not always mild. In fact, the weather trend in Garrett County has been somewhat consistently cold and wintery, as is appropriate for this time of year. Today's precipitation has waffled from snow to rain and back to snow again. The temperatures are to remain low and flurries are expected for the next few days. Enjoy your time above the water line, geese, just for a little change of pace.

Water, Sewer Rates Will Not Be Increased

Wendell Beitzel, administrator for the Garrett County Sanitary District, recently announced that no county water or sewer rate increases will be recommended for 1998. Beitzel said the stable rate achievement is attributed to an increase in number of water and sewer customers, as well as "good oversight by the Sanitary Commission, efficient management practices, and dedicated employees."

The Garrett County Sanitary District was the first county water and sewer authority in Maryland to establish a universal rate for all users on the various water and sewer systems under its control. Beitzel said the sanitary commission engaged the services of a professional utility rate consulting firm, John Mayer Associates of Milwaukee, Wisc., to help establish the uniform rate schedule in 1991. Since that time, the commission has engaged the services of the consultant to review the audited financial records of the sanitary district each year to assess the need to adjust water and sewer rates.

Beitzel said the utility rate consultant, John Mayer, recently completed his review of the Garrett County Sanitary District's audited financial report for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1997. In the report, Mayer noted that no change in either water and sewer rates appears necessary at this time.

Water and sewer rate adjustments are reviewed each year by the sanitary commission to make sure the revenue is adequate to fund the sanitary district's operations. The sanitary district owns and operates all of the public water and sewer treatment facilities in Garrett County except for those in Grantsville, Oakland, and Accident.

"This is the first time in the nearly 17 years that I have been administrator of the sanitary district that we have not experienced a need to adjust water and sewer rates to keep pace with operational cost and to build up reserve funds for system or component replacement," Beitzel commented.

"I'M TOEING THE LINE; WILL YOU BE MINE?" asks Seth Holler sweetly, as he helps WKHJ and the Junior Woman's Civic Club get the word out about this Saturday's "Dance for Romance." The annual event, which will be held at the Elks Lodge in Oakland, will this year benefit Our Town Theatre and The Republican newspaper's Warm the Children Fund. Tickets are $30 per couple and $15 per single guest. (All must be 21 or older to attend.) The tickets are available at the following pharmacies: Englander's, Proudfoot's, and Deep Creek, as well as at Arrowhead. The doors will open at 8 p.m. on Saturday, and the band Spektra will provide music for dancing from 9 p.m. until 1 a.m. A cash bar will be available. All proceeds will benefit the two charities mentioned. Bare-toed Seth invites everyone to dance for romance with their best valentines. (He's the son of proud parents Danny and Debbie Holler.)

Town Re-Elects Schlosnagle In Landslide Vote

About 80% of the registered voters in Friendsville cast ballots in the municipal elections on Tuesday, re-electing Mayor Spencer R. Schlosnagle with 142 votes, and selecting council members Carroll M. Forsyth with 131 votes, Francis King with 121 votes, and Robert Sipus with 138 votes.

Herschel Allen III, who also ran for mayor, pulled in 45 votes while incumbent council member James W. Lininger took 85 votes.

There were several write-in candidates in addition to those pre-printed on the ballot.

"I was overwhelmed," Schlosnagle admitted Wednesday morning as he described the events of the election. "People came to vote in a steady stream all day," he said. "We are pleased and thankful to those who turned out to vote," he added.

Schlosnagle was first elected to serve in the municipal government about 14 years ago. About 50 well-wishers gathered after the polls closed to celebrate his re-election at Twila's Old Mill Restaurant in Friendsville.

GOBA Members Discuss Business Needs Of Town At Annual Meeting

The annual meeting of the Greater Oakland Business Association (GOBA) was held Tuesday evening with about 25 members in attendance. The business leaders, joined by Mayor Asa McCain, focused their discussion on the future for Oakland. The meeting was two-fold, with the first half focused on a review of GOBA's past year's activities and the second half dedicated to the business leaders' hopes for Oakland's next five years.

Mikal McCartney, president of GOBA, presented the overview of the organization's year of activities. She reviewed the Mountain Arts Pavilion project, which was a joint effort of GOBA, the Garrett County Chamber of Commerce, and the Garrett County Arts Council. Seed money was awarded by the Appalachian Regional Commission.

The purpose of the project was to provide a location for local artisans to display and sell their work. It was established in an empty warehouse across from the Oakland train station and was in operation from late August until Oct. 12, 1997. The project involved 27 artists and 12 craftsmen, with displays of paintings, sculpture, glass-making, leather working, spinning, weaving, basket making, bobbin lace, pottery, and various types of wood working.

McCartney reviewed the parking lot beautification program, for which GOBA formed a design committee in August 1996. The goals were to plan "green space" into the parking area to make it more aesthetically pleasing and to visually tie the parking area and the Mountain Fresh Pavilion with the downtown shopping district.

The phases of this project began with re-paving the lot, which was done in October 1996 by the town of Oakland, with partial funding from GOBA. The second phase — landscaping work — was adopted by the Oakland Rotary Club, which completed the work in June 1997. The third phase is the construction of a brick walkway, which has yet to come to fruition. GOBA has tentative plans to engage in a fund-raising project of selling commemorative bricks, McCartney said.

Another project of GOBA was the summer concert series, held throughout July and August 1997. The series, which was funded in part by the local arts council, featured local musicians performing on the courthouse plaza for six consecutive Wednesday evenings. The purpose, McCartney said, was to provide free family enjoyment and to showcase local talent.

The second annual Artist Street Fair took place in late August, co-sponsored by radio station WKHJ and underwritten again by the arts council. This event took place near the historic train station and featured numerous local artists and their work.

GOBA's Retail Committee produced a brochure that is both a shoppers' guide and a historic map of the town. It was first published in May 1996 and was reprinted with some changes in May 1997. It serves as a promotional piece, McCartney said, and is distributed to tourists at Deep Creek Lake, Alpine Lake, and Canaan Valley.

An important function for GOBA last year, McCartney continued, was the town's hosting of the Maryland Downtown Development Association (MDDA) Conference, held in late September. Individuals from towns all over the state of Maryland attended the two-day event. Robert Gibbs, the president of the Small Town Revitalization Planning Group, attended the session and toured the downtown area, offering his advice to several downtown retailers.

Sebold Tosses Hat Into Race For Commissioner

Charlotte Sebold, Sang Run, has announced that she will be seeking the 1998 Republican nomination for Garrett County commissioner in District 3. This position is currently held by Wayne Johnson.

Sebold is serving her sixth year as an at-large member of the Garrett County Board of Education.

"I have been very proud to serve as a member of the Garrett County Board of Education for the past 6 years and I know that the knowledge and experience that I have acquired will be of great benefit in the position of commissioner," the candidate said.

Sebold has served as president and vice president during her tenure on the education board. She is now serving on seven local committees and two state committees for the board.

"I find committee work to be a very important part of my job. A lot of valuable information is acquired by attending and participating in committee meetings. I feel that elected officials owe it to the public to make well-informed decisions when representing

Tickets For EYM Production Of "Charlie Brown" Now On Sale

Tickets for the Ecumenical Youth Ministry's production of "You're A Good Man, Charlie Brown" are selling "briskly," according to EYM director Lynn Broderick.

The musical, based on the comic strip "Peanuts," premiered on the Broadway stage in 1967. Actor Gary Burghoff, who later appeared as Radar in the television comedy/drama "MASH," starred as Charlie Brown. A production note from the director's manual states that the "time of the play is a typical day in the life of Charlie Brown, from Valentine's Day to the baseball season, from wild optimism to utter despair, all mixed in with the lives of his friends, both human and non-human."

"The play is pure magic!" stated Broderick.

The EYM productions of "Godspell" and "Joseph and the Amazing Technicolor Dreamcoat" played to sold-out audiences in 1996 and 1997. In addition, the EYM music ensembles have touched the lives of over 10,000 people in performances of Christian music in Garrett County, as well as many other locations in the tri-state area.

The "Charlie Brown" ensemble, composed of 34 actors, 14 orchestra members, and five technicians, has been in rehearsal since January 20. The musical numbers range from a kazoo band rendition of the title song, "You're A Good Man, Charlie Brown," to the jazzy "Suppertime" number, in which Snoopy and a chorus of dancers celebrate the canine's favorite time of the day, to the finale, "Happiness," in which author Clark Gesner weaves the ideas of comic strip artist Charles Schultz into a melody about cherishing the simple things in life.

Tickets can be purchased daily at St. Mark's Lutheran Church (301-334-2668), Monday through Thursday, from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. and from members of the cast, crew, and orchestra. Tickets are $5 each.

The production will run locally for two weekends—February 27-28 and March 1, 6, and 7—and all

BOE Votes To Change Middle School Curriculum, NHS Sports

Changes in the middle school curriculum and deletion of the cross country program at Northern High School were among the issues that the Garrett County Board of Education voted on at their meeting Tuesday night.

Middle School Curriculum

Middle school curriculum will include reading enrichment and enhanced technology courses but will not lose music or foreign language. A year after its introduction, a recommendation on re-alignment of the middle school course of studies was approved unanimously.

Scott Hollingsworth, a member of the Middle School Study Committee, reported on the findings and recommendations of the group.

The committee, composed of 16 representatives of the community, recognized and accepted the differences in Northern and Southern middle schools' scheduling modes. "The two middle schools do not need to be identical," the report advises.

To accommodate the differences, the committee recommends minimum requirements. "One school may choose to exceed the minimum while the other may choose to stay at the minimum," it continues.

The recommended minimum for band and chorus is three days per week for each of three years. The band and chorus personnel were consulted and approved of the plan.

The recommended minimum of general music is six weeks per year for one of three years. The committee noted that this was believed to be insufficient but all that would be possible under current staffing.

Computer/Technology classes would be scheduled for all students a minimum of six weeks for two of the three years.

A minimum of six weeks per year for two of the three years would be required for foreign language. The committee recommended a comparative language approach in this course. The committee also reported that some members felt that the minimum agreed upon was low and that it reflected a significant reduction in the current program at Northern Middle School.

Board members stated their appreciation for the efforts and accomplishments of the committee.

Member Rodney Durst questioned the feasibility of the plan. "How difficult will it be to implement this?" he asked. Dr. Brenda McCartney, director of curriculum development PreK—8, said she had discussed this with administrators and staff involved. "We think we can make it work," she noted.

Last March a recommendation was made to the board by the administration that reading enrichment and computer class time be added by cutting the foreign language program and reducing the band and chorus programs.

Response from the public resulted in the board tabling the issue pending review and recommendation by a committee.

Cross Country

On recommendation from the School Activities Committee, the board voted to delete cross country from the roster of sports available to students at Northern High School.

Speaking on behalf of the committee, Martin Green, principal of Northern, explained that the size of the school was a significant factor in this determination. "We did our best to field a team this year," he said. But it had been a difficult proposition for the school which has a student population of a little less than 600.

WELCOME TO YOUGH GLADES ELEMENTARY - The much anticipated opening day of the new elementary school finally arrived yesterday. Principal Lindsay Stenton greeted the students at the door and helped them to find their new classrooms. Making sure that all the all buses were running on schedule, Arthur Refosco, director of transportation for Garrett County schools, was also on hand for the big first day. Children from Loch Lynn and Red House elementary schools have come together to form the student body of the new facility, off 219 south of Oakland.

School Budget Meeting Slated, Public Invited

Dr. Wendell Teets, superintendent of Garrett County schools, has scheduled a public meeting for review of the FY 1999 school budget that he will present to the board of education for consideration.

The meeting will be held on Thursday, Feb. 19, 7 p.m., in the Continuing Education Building at Garrett Community College.

The board will be working on the budget for several weeks during a series of meetings and work sessions.

For more information, persons may contact the ARC at 1-800-732-0383.

Man Sentenced To Four Months In Assault Case

An Oakland man was convicted of second-degree assault after he had entered a not guilty plea to the charge in last week's Garrett County District Court proceedings.

Michael Eugene Armstrong, 21, received a six-month sentence, of which two months were suspended, was fined $200, placed on one year of supervised probation, and ordered to complete 30 hours of community service by Judge Ralph M. Burnett. An additional charge of first-degree assault was not prosecuted by the state's attorney's office.

The state's case against Armstrong stemmed from his arrest by Garrett County sheriff's deputies after he and several other subjects allegedly forced their way into the trailer where Christopher Friend resided in the 3400 block of Maryland Highway. The July incident left Friend and another subject in the house at the time of the alleged assault, James Dillsworth, suffering from a variety injuries requiring medical attention which were reportedly inflicted by Armstrong and his companions.

In other district court news, Charles Edward Friend, 58, Oakland, pleaded guilty to a charge of disorderly conduct in each of two separate hearings. In November sheriff's deputies arrested Friend on two occasions, once for lying in the roadway on Route 39, and the other for lying in the roadway on the Crellin Mine Road. In both instances he was reportedly intoxicated at the time of his arrest.

The judge handed Friend a total sentence of four months in jail after the two convictions.

Casey Vaughn Patton, 19, Oakland, pleaded guilty to disorderly conduct and was handed a 60-day jail sentence, stemming from his December arrest by the Oakland City Police. The police officer had been questioning Patton in reference to a report that he had been throwing rocks at the Garrett County Courthouse when Patton reportedly erupted into a loud denial iaced with profanity. The incident occurred in the full view and hearing of bystanders gathered on Third Street.

Michael Wayne Wilburn, 36, Grantsville, pleaded guilty to disturbing the peace and was handed a 30-day sentence. He had been arrested in August by troopers of the Maryland State Police for yelling profanities on a Jennings street at 3:00 in the morning. An additional charge of disorderly conduct was not prosecuted. Wilburn was also found in violation of his probation on a previous driving while intoxicated (DWI) probation, and that original sentence was reimposed.

Thomas Willard Friend, 41, Oakland, pleaded guilty to second-degree assault and was handed a 90-day sentence with all but four days suspended, fined $100, placed on one year of supervised probation, and ordered to complete 20 hours of community service. In December Friend allegedly struck his girlfriend, Dinah Hebb, in the face during a domestic altercation and was arrested by sheriff's deputies.

David Dewayne Stanton, 29, McHenry, pleaded guilty to second-degree assault and was handed a 30-day sentence with all but seven days suspended, and placed on one year of supervised probation. Stanton had been arrested by sheriff's deputies in December after allegedly punching his girlfriend, Christina Savage, in the face with his fist several times during a domestic altercation.

Melvin Ray Howell III, 21, Oakland, was found to be in violation of probation stemming from a previous felony theft conviction. His probation was terminated and a one-year jail sentence was reimposed.

Jerame Adam Sines, 18, Friendsville, pleaded guilty to a marijuana possession charge and was handed a probation before judgment (PBJ), fined $100, placed on one year of supervised probation, and ordered to complete 20 hours of community service. Sines was arrested by state troopers in July after an anonymous caller reported that Sines was allegedly selling marijuana on a Friendsvilie street. He was apprehended at Chestnut and First streets and found to be carrying a baggie of marijuana that also contained a partially burnt marijuana cigarette. An additional charge of possession of drug paraphernalia was not prosecuted. The PBJ ruling means that the case will not reflect a conviction if Sines complies with all the terms of his probation agreement.

Samuel Ray VanSickle, 33, Accident, pleaded guilty to a charge of making a false statement to a police officer and was handed a PBJ, fined $200, and placed on six months of unsupervised probation. He was arrested in December by state troopers after they determined that he had falsely reported that his car had been stolen in October.

Zachary David Plate, 19, Stonewood, W.Va., was handed a PBJ with a probation length of one day after pleading guilty to disorderly conduct charge. State troopers had arrested Plate in December at the Wisp Resort Hotel after he had taken a set of car keys from another guest, and refused to return them even after repeated requests from the trooper himself. Plate's behavior during the incident was described as loud and profane.

A charge of illegally carrying a handgun faced by Timothy Lee Kelly, 42, New Florence, Pa., was placed on the stet docket. Kelly had been arrested in December by sheriff's deputies when he allegedly brought a gun to the courtroom door of Garrett County Circuit Court at the time of a hearing involving family members of his. The sheriff's office had been alerted that he might attempt to carry a gun into the courtroom, and when Kelly saw the extra police presence on the scene he reportedly took the loaded gun down to the front counter of the jail and turned it in for safekeeping.

Michael Allen Dewitt, 23, Oakland, was found not guilty of a charge of second-degree assault when the alleged victim of a domestic assault refused to testify against him.

Howard William Finzel, 30, Grantsville, was found not guilty of a charge of second-degree assault.

DWI & DUI Hearings

Several cases involving driving while intoxicated (DWI) charges and driving under the influence of alcohol and/or drugs charges were heard in district court recently.

Shannon Leroy Lee, 19, Mtn. Lake Park, pleaded guilty to DWI and was fined $155, was handed a six-month sentence, three months of which were suspended, placed on one year of supervised probation, and ordered to complete 40 hours of community service.

Timothy Wayne Arnold Sr., 44, Mtn. Lake Park, pleaded guilty to DUI and was fined $100, handed a 30-day suspended sentence, placed on one year of supervised probation, and ordered to complete 30 hours of community service.

A previous DWI sentence for Gregory Arthur Jones, 32, was revised to reflect a PBJ.

A previous DWI sentence for Ronald Edward Crosby, 36, was revised to terminate his home detention.

A WARM WELCOME awaited students arriving at the new Yough Glades Elementary School when it opened yesterday. After several delays, the classrooms were ready, and everything was in place. Arthur Refosco, director of county school transportation, in the photo top left, met the arriving buses and Principal Lindsay Stanton welcomed the excited youngster as they came into their new school. While waiting in lines to be taken to wherever they belongs, the children chatted with classmates and looked around, taking in the many new sights. The students had toured the school before opening day, but they still found many things to pique their curiosity. The breakfast cereal bowls, in the photo below, were also lined up and waiting for the arrival of the children. It was day of excitement and discovery for everyone involved.

Dick Sanders In Running For County Sheriff

Garrett County Sheriff P. Richard "Dick" Sanders Jr. has announced the filing of his candidacy for the office of sheriff for Garrett County, on the Republican ballot. Sheriff Sanders has served as Sheriff since his appointment to that position by Governor Parris N. Glendening on November 3. The sheriff and his wife Joanie reside in the Pleasant Valley area .

As the chief law enforcement officer in Garrett County, Sanders currently supervises 35 employees and oversees the daily operations of the sheriff's office and the Garrett County Detention Center. Having served as chief deputy since December 3, 1994, Sanders said that he has come to know the geographic areas of the county and many of its citizens on a personal level. He went on to say that he has established a good working relationship with the Maryland State Police, the Garrett County commissioners and other county agencies, which he feels enables him to provide the best quality service possible to the citizens of the county.

Sanders began his career in law enforcement with the Maryland State Police in 1961, and retired at the rank of lieutenant after 23 years of service. During that period of time, he served at the Frederick, Hagerstown and Cumberland Barracks, the Maryland State Police Aviation Division, and as commander of the McHenry Detachment of State Police. After retirement he continued his investigative services as an investigator for the Maryland Public Defender's Office in Garrett County for 10 years.

Sanders said that his law enforcement experience of the last 36 years provides him with a thorough understanding of the criminal justice system, state criminal statutes, and the Maryland vehicle code, as well as the local county ordinances. He commented that his expertise as a supervisor and later as an administrator with the state police and Garrett County Sheriff's Office would be instrumental in maintaining the stability and integrity of the office. One of his ongoing projects is planning for the establishment of the Garrett Bureau of Investigation, an investigative unit comprised of investigators from the sheriff's office, Maryland State Police and the Garrett Co. State's Attorney's office.

Sanders also stressed that he is committed to providing a variety of public service programs to the citizens. "I realize the importance of programs like the S.A.L.T. program for senior citizens of our communities and especially, the DARE (Drug Abuse Resistance Education) program for our youth. It is extremely essential that we reach out to our children by continuing and enhancing these drug education programs for them."

THE GRAND OPENING OF THE OAKLAND BRANCH of Farmers and Merchants Bank and Trust was marked by a ribbon-cutting ceremony recently. Wielding the scissors in front of the business at Third and Oak streets, surrounded by onlookers and well-wishers, are: James Prado, senior vice president and regional executive for F&M; Garrett County Commissioners Gary Fratz, Wayne Wilt, and Wayne Johnson; Jeff McCauley, commercial loan officer at the Oakland F&M office; Asa McCain, Oakland mayor; and William Reuter, F&M's chairman of the board, president and chief executive officer.

Two Given Jail Time In Circuit Court Proceedings

Two local men were ordered to jail in separate cases presided over by James Sherbin, judge of Garrett County Circuit Court. One faced an assault charge and the other DWI (driving while intoxicated.)

Jack A. Kight, 20, Mtn. Lake Park, pleaded guilty to second degree assault and Sherbin sent him to jail for 60 days. He also levied a fine of $250, according to the court report.

Kight allegedly attacked Robert Swiger at the Garrett County Fairgrounds in August 1997. The defendant was also accused of harassing the victim for several months.

Weldon K. Nicholas, 39, Oakland, entered guilty pleas in October to the charges of DWI and driving with a revoked license. For DWI, Sherbin sentenced him to one year in jail and fined him $1,000. For the second charge, the judge ordered an additional six months of jail.

Nicholas was stopped on April 17, 1997, along Rt. 39, by an officer of the Garrett County Sheriff's Office, who subsequently charged him with the offenses. The defendant apparently had a past record of similar charges.

A case against a Mount Storm, W.Va., man was not prosecuted, according to the court document, by order of the state's attorney. The defendant was Lynwood C. Sharpless, 41, who had been charged with theft.

The department's Domestic Violence Awareness program is also an important part of his commitment for the future, according to the sheriff. "With the increase of domestic violence incidents, it is even more important now that this office maintain the same professional level of service to our citizens and maintain the highest level of training for our officers," he said.

"Perhaps my most important goal is to interact with the citizens of this county," Sanders concluded. "I want to continue reaching out to the people in our communities, to talk to them, and to have a better understanding of their problems so that we can better address solutions to those problems."

WHOPPING WARM THE CHILDREN BILL PAID — A final bill for over $9,000 was paid this week to Treasure Island for the charges made in The Republican newspaper's Warm the Children project. In all, 122 children in need received new winter clothing from the department store over the past few months, with donations surpassing $9,300. The Treasure Island staff assisted in the project by keeping a running tab on the purchases, giving a discount on the items, and by helping the volunteers and families during the shopping trips. Over 150 people and/or businesses donated money to the fund, and nearly 50 people offered to volunteer shop. "It was a fantastic first year," said Mary McEwen, coordinator of the newspaper's project. "We never expected to have such a resounding response." The campaign will begin again this year in September, she said. "We expect it to be even more successful this fall." McEwen is pictured as she presents the payment check to Kenny Schmidt, manager of Treasure Island. Schmidt said he and his staff were pleased with the success of the project and that they will be happy to take part again.

A Shining Star...

Voter apathy and a general lack of pride in one's community/state/nation is a problem throughout our country, as a minority of citizens exercise the right and privilege to decide referendum issues and select who will serve in elected positions. Sometimes, particularly in municipal elections, it is downright embarrassing, when only 15 or 20 percent of the town's registered voters show up at the polls. Rarely is voter turnout much over 50 percent.

But we have, right here in Garrett County, a shining star of how it should be, and that is the town of Friendsville, where over 80 percent of its registered voters turned out on Tuesday to elect a mayor and three councilpersons. Two dozen of those people, or about 10 percent of the total number of registered voters, took the extra time to pick up, fill out, and submit an absentee ballot.

Some may contend that it was because there was competition in the race, both for mayor (two candidates) and for council seats, for which four persons were running to fill three seats. However, Friendsville's history shows that the majority of its voters respond even when the races are uncontested. In fact, in the last uncontested race, some 90 percent voted, and the election supervisor had to send out for more ballots before the polls closed that day.

This kind of response at the polls is indicative of the level of pride Friendsville residents have in their town, and it is both refreshing and commendable. Yes, Friendsville, like any town --- small or large — has its share of problems, controversies, and pettiness. A community is human. But under the leadership of its mayor, Spencer Schlosnagle, various councilpersons, and many other volunteers committed to improving the quality of life there, the town has been able to deal with individual differences and accomplish much.

The residents work side by side every year in a town-wide clean-up; they have a wonderful park; they have some of the most active, productive clubs and organizations (e.g., Lions, Rotary, Community Women, senior citizens); they have worked hard and in harmony to secure various monies for needed town projects (water treatment, flood control, etc.); their Friendsville Days celebration and fiddlers' competition are major successes every year; their school is important to them and plays a major role in the community; they have a museum; they have special holiday events;... The town literally wreaks with pride.

Thank you, Friendsvillians, for showing the rest of us what can be accompiished when the majority gets involved, works together, and takes such tremendous pride in their home town.

Letters to the Editor

To the Editor:

I would like to thank Congressman Roscoe Bartlett publicly for his direct intervention into the application for permanent residency for Sang Hyuck Bang and his family. The dedication of his office staff in seeing this complicated problem through to successful completion was a super human effort.

The Bangs are immigrants from Korea, and have been a great blessing to the congregation of Chapelgate Presbyterian Church and me personally. The cohesive family unit, work ethics, and strong faith/walk demonstrated have been such a beacon, even in times when they least felt that the attempts at attaining their family's resident alien status would be successful.

I would like to single out Deborah Hamrick, his staff assistant. Deborah doggedly pursued every possible avenue and involved or directed the Bangs to every person that might shed light or substance to their combined efforts.

Without Bartlett's (and his staff's) efforts, I am positive that the Bangs would not have had the opportunity to stay in the United states. It is wonderful to experience through these events in the Bangs' life what an incredibly wonderful privilege it is to live in the United states.

My being born in this country and never having to fight for this privilege had dulled the blessing that I take for granted. If we all had to fight to be citizens, things would be very different. We don't see the blessings that we take for granted.

Thank you for your dedicated service to your constituents.

Sincerely,
Jerry Canfield

To the Editor:

I am writing this letter in regard to the cartoon you had in your paper of the president. I have never seen anything so disgusting in my life. This world is getting in a bad shape when you stoop this low. I bet there have been times when you should have had a lock on your fly.

Louise Knotts

Dear Louise,

On those occasions when all four of my children are simultaneously driving my wife and me crazy, I think that you may be right.

To the Editor:

Recently I was very fortunate to receive post-operative care from our Garrett County Home Health Agency. Sharon Buckel, Peggy Chappell, and Kathy Eiswert of the Oakland team provided excellent medical care, advice, and genuine concern. They made my recovery much less worrisome and stressful. They provided very necessary services in a very pleasant atmosphere. I am grateful for the services that they provide.

I was not surprised. Our Home Health Agency's Grantsville team has cared for my parents following several hospital stays. They, too, exhibited the same capable and caring attitude while providing desperately needed services.

I urge area residents to use and support our Garrett County Health Department's home health services. They not only make recoveries shorter, but also allow patients to recover in their own home or the home of a loved one. Their mission is to see that patients receive quality care and proper attention. They achieve that and much more. They greatly reduce or eliminate the burden on the taxpayer due to their working knowledge of health insurance, medicare, and coordination of those benefits.

I hope that our elected officials, as well as our Garrett County health officer, recognize the value of home health services, and do what is necessary to continue their services.

Sincerely,
Tom Gearhart

We would like to thank the elderly gentleman we met in the woods at Herrington Manor last weekend. We were enjoying cross-country skiing when we crossed paths with him. We talked for a while and found out what true spirit is all about.

After telling us about his own youthful experience skiing (one day) and working for Glenn L. Martin and living in our home town of Baltimore during World War II, he apologized be-

by Mary Sincell McEwen

Observing the growth of three little boys is an eye-opening experience, to say the least. My husband and I glow with pride over our kindergartner's good report card, we get lumps in our throat when the 3-year-old tells us he loves us, and we laugh out loud at the 2-year-old's dancing technique. We also make noises come up out of our necks that are unrecognizable (known as "yelling at the children"), we literally grind our teeth as we tell them for the gazillionth time to stop hitting each other, and we get into what seem to be important conversations about why one should not put Milk Duds in the fish tank or balance one's full dinner plate on the back of the couch.

So, as this life unfolds, I've been thinking about human behavior. What if we never changed our ways of dealing with life? What if we all still acted like 3-year-olds? (Okay, I know everyone reading this knows an adult or two who does indeed act like that, but just disregard them for a while.) If we did continue our childish behaviors, a day could go like this:

Mr. Smith, a clean-cut, 30-ish, tall business man, wearing a suit and carrying a briefcase, comes in to work. There are doughnuts on a plate for everyone to share.

"Awww! I don't like peanut butter ones," Smith wails plaintively. "Are there any plain ones?" Someone informs him there are no plain ones and he might really like a PB one if he tries it, but he screams back that he knows he doesn't like peanut butter, he HATES peanut butter, it makes him THROW UP, and he slides down the wall, making himself boneless, until he is a crumpled pile on the floor. He sits there frowning rigidly for about 15 minutes until he forgets why he's mad.

Later in the day, his secretary comes into his office.

"Mr. Smith?" she starts.

"I'm not Mr. Smith. I'm the blue Power Morpher," he informs her.

"All right, Mr. Blue Power Morpher," she says, resignedly playing along, "you have a visitor." Another man enters, says hello, and holds out his hand in greeting. Mr. Smith eyes him for a minute, frowns, and announces: "I don't like you." The secretary blushes. "Oh, now, Mr. Smith, you don't mean that!"

"I am the blue. POWER. *MORPHER!" Smith yells. The man, Mr. Jones, responds by pushing Smith down by his face and calling him a doofus. A wrestling match ensues, ties flying and jackets jostled. A table is knocked over and a lamp shatters. Jones and Smith say simultaneously: "He did it!" and at least one of them starts to cry.

Later. The two men are working at a computer, perhaps designing some great building or mapping out some great plan. Their elbows brush against each other's by chance.

"Shut up. You touched me."

"You shut up. And give me the mouse. It's my turn."

"Please don't say 'shut up,'" the secretary says quietly from the doorway.

"It's not your turn. You had it for a long time and I just got it."

Jones then pushes Smith down by the face and Smith whacks Jones with the mouse. Both cry. The secretary says they are going to drive her completely insane soon.

Still later. The men are joined by a third guy. Jones and Smith suddenly become very close and work to exclude the newcomer, whom we'll call Mr. Doe. Doe reacts to the exclusion with apparent calm, and then unabashedly walks swiftly past both of them with his arm out, cracking them both on the forehead. They shout "HEY!" and rub their heads. Doe smiles. "You guys are really dumb," he announces. He then produces three Power Morpher action figures from his briefcase and shows all indications of sharing them. Jones and Smith are now his very best friends. The secretary rests while she can.

The three men go to the bank to discuss lending options. They are informed that they will have to wait a few minutes to see the representative. They complain lustily and Jones lies down on his back on the floor. Smith takes this time to systematically strip down to his underwear and T-shirt, claiming that his clothes "hurt" him. Meanwhile, Jones has become invisible lying there on his back, apparently unable to hear or see anything. When the banker can see them at last, Jones remains motionless. Doe nudges him with his foot, to no avail. Smith grabs his arm and tries to pull him up, but only drags him vainly around in a circle. Jones is apparently in a trance of some sort. Then the banker cagily offers fruit gummy snacks and Jones wakes up immediately, fully recovered.

The banker's secretary crosses her arms and whispers to another secretary that if those three were her bosses, they'd never act like that in public. Smith, after regarding her for a moment, asks her if she meant for her hair to look like that.

Can you teli I've been home a lot this winter? I think I need a nap.

THE DEATH SENTENCE

The following is a true story.

A couple had a baby that they could not keep, so they put the child up for adoption. An extremely affluent and powerful family adopted the infant boy, and he was brought up in the lap of luxury. His adoptive parents and their families provided every advantage that anyone could hope for.

The boy grew into manhood. He had been schooled to take his place in society. He was sensitive, too, and had what we would call "a social conscience."

One day he saw one of his father's employees taking advantage of a poor man. Outraged, the adopted son of privilege struck the employee and killed him. He was immediately afraid, for he knew that the law would allow no mercy to be shown him. He hid the body, and hoped thereby to have hidden the crime.

Not long afterwards he saw two poor men arguing with one another. He tried to intervene, and frightened the men so badly that they thought he was going to kill one or both of them as he had his father's worker before.

At that point, the adopted son of privilege realized that his earlier crime was becoming known, and that sooner or later law officers would hear of it. Before there was a chance of being arrested, he fled, and went to a country that had no extradition treaty with his native land.

While in exile he underwent a conversion experience. He was born again. His life was completely transformed from what it was. No longer was he the arrogant young man ready to wield his physical power at a whim. He entered into a deep relationship with God, and accepted a special calling from God.

At great personal risk he returned to his homeland, and there commenced one of the great religious and social movements of human history. He died in old age with the goal of his mission within sight.

This man was Moses, the man to whom God gave the Ten Commandments, one of which reads, "Thou shalt not kill." In the pages of what is often called "the law of Moses" there is set forth the principle of "an eye for an eye and a tooth for a tooth" and that if a man takes a life he shall pay for it with his own.

Moses, however, received a different and older form of punishment, one that can lead to redemption. He received the sentence which God himself meted out to the first murderer, Cain. That sentence was to be driven from human society and to live as a fugitive and vagabond. God put a mark on Cain, in fact, to prevent anyone from killing him—to thwart all those who would justly sentence him to death.

What would the world be like today if Moses had been sentenced to death as he so richly deserved? Some would argue that God would merely have chosen another person to do the work of Moses. I am not so sure, for I see many works, great and small, that go undone today because the people whom God has called to them do not do them. What if it had been so with Moses?

There would have been no exodus from Egypt, no Ten Commandments, no formation of Israel as a nation called into the holiness of God, no David or Solomon, no Jerusalem as a holy city, no Psalms or Job or books of the prophets, no concept of Messiah and therefore no historical concept for God to enter the world to save it, no crucifixion or resurrection of Christ, no conversion of Paul, no message of forgiveness and undeserved grace to free the world from tyranny.

In other words, without Moses there would be no Bible, nor the message it contains, no Judaism, no Christianity, and therefore, also no concept of freedom and democracy.

So much light has shone down through 3,000 years of human history because one who deserved the death sentence didn't get it. What might have flowed from Karla Faye Tucker sentenced to life we shall never know.

Delegate Edwards Discusses Bills Affecting County

Delegate George Edwards in a telephone interview yesterday outlined some of bills he is sponsoring that directly affect Garrett County. They are among the 35 bills that the delegate is supporting along with several other delegates at this year's General Assembly in Annapolis.

HB 596

House Bill 596 concerns the county position of clerk, currently held by Lamont Pagenhardt. The bill changes the title from clerk to county administrator, and also alters the appointment tenure of the position.

The appointment, made by the Garrett County Commissioners, is to be for four years and should run concurrently with the terms of the commissioners, not extending for longer than six months past the installation of the elected officials.

"This just helps bring that position more in line with the commissioners' terms," Edwards explains. "And the new title of administrator is a better definition of what that job entails."

House Bill 600 allows for the county's treasurer to assert that office's foreclosure power on individuals who are delinquent in paying their municipal taxes.

"Right now, the treasurer publishes the names of those individuals who are behind on their taxes, both county and municipal," Edwards said. "Those people get their county taxes paid and the pressure is off. But if they don't pay their municipal taxes, there is really no recourse for the towns. This bill would give the treasurer the authority to foreclose if the town lets her know that someone has continued to fail to pay his town taxes."

HB 146

House Bill 146 would create a state debt for a grant to the Garrett County Memorial Hospital. The money would be used to improve the coronary intensive care unit, the step-down unit, and the primary medical and surgical area, Edwards said.

The delegate explained that this proposed project has already passed the approval of the Maryland Hospital Association, which is a good indication that it will be approved in the General Assembly. The hospital association, in essence, screens the many hospital improvement proposals before they go on to the assembly, Edwards said. There is a cap of $5 million on all such debts and the association helps to pare down the number of proposals submitted.

Governor Proclaims Maryland Engineers Week, Feb. 22-28

To honor hard-working Marylanders and promote engineering education and mentoring programs, Governor Parris N. Glendening this week declared February 22-28 as Maryland Engineers Week.

The week, which is also honoring engineers across the country, is designed to increase the public's awareness and appreciation of the engineering profession and to encourage children to learn more about the many careers available in the engineering field.

"Maryland has thousands of engineers who design and build everything from the information superhighway to the hundreds of miles of roads and highways we use everyday," said Glendening. "As we continue to face more and more technological challenges, we will look to Maryland's engineers for answers. Maryland Engineers Week is one way we can thank these men and women."

During the designated week, State Highway Administration (SHA) engineers will participate in a variety of activities—including talking to student groups and providing tours for classes—to help create an interest in engineering, math, and science. SHA is a partner in the TRAnsportation and Civil engineering (TRAC) Program. TRAC, which operates in Maryland's high schools, introduces students to civil engineering and transportation issues through hands-on activities and experiments.

In the past several years, SHA engineers have received a long list of national and state award-winning accomplishments. SHA was recently honored with a number of new construction, historical preservation, and bridge design awards, according to a report from that administration.

Chicken Manure To Be Used As Fuel Source

State officials are preparing to use poultry waste as a fuel source at the Eastern Correctional Institution (ECI) on the Eastern Shore, Governor Parris N. Glendening announced this week. Once this technology is implemented, local chicken farmers could sell manure that could be burned in ECI boilers, according to the governor.

In response to the state's emerging pfiesteria crisis, the governor directed Maryland Environmental Service (MES) last September to conduct a feasibility study to explore the potential of using poultry waste as a fuel source at the correctional facility. That recently completed draft study indicates there is a high probability that it would be economically and environmentally feasible to utilize this technology, perhaps within the year.

"I am very encouraged by the results of this study and the likelihood that we will be able to pursue this technology as another solution to help us fight pfiesteria and improve water quality," Glendening said.

Currently, boilers at the ECI facility in Westover burn wood chips as a fuel to produce steam and electricity for the entire prison complex. Under an existing contract, wood chips are purchased from a vendor and burned in those boilers.

Under the plan outlined by Governor Glendening, existing ECI boilers will be retrofitted to burn poultry waste. If the technology proves successful, the state will install an additional low-pressure boiler sometime during the next four years and replacements for the existing boilers in approximately 10 years that will be able to burn poultry waste.

"This is an exciting opportunity for the state to partner with the agriculture industry to provide economically viable and environmentally friendly solutions to address manure management," said Maryland Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. "Bud" Virts.

Glendening said a team of state agencies—including MES, the Maryland Department of the Environment, the Maryland Department of Natural Resources, the Maryland Department of Agriculture, and the Maryland Department of Public Safety and Correctional Services—will all work together to ensure that all state and federal environmental and air quality regulations are met.

Governor Seeks Structure Change For Senior Service

Governor Parris N. Glendening has introduced legislation at the General Assembly that will elevate the Maryland Office on Aging to a principal department within the executive branch of state government. The office has since 1975 functioned as an independent agency at the cabinet level. The proposals are SB 176 and HB 269.

Under the new name of Department of Aging, the state's leading aging advocacy agency would become the 16th member of the governor's cabinet.

"Changing the Office of Aging to a department is not just a cosmetic change," Glendening recently stated to more than 700 seniors during his speech at the United Seniors of Maryland Legislative Rally in Annapolis. "This legislation represents a fundamental shift in the nature of senior services in Maryland, and seniors ought to have a place at the table when the state cabinet makes important policy decisions."

If passed, the bills will become effective July 1, 1998, and the Department of Aging will join other principal departments such as transportation, human resources, health and mental hygiene, natural resources, and environment.

Maryland's 60+ population is projected to grow from more than 774,000 in 1998 to nearly 1,400,000 in the year 2020.

HB 269 was heard by the Commerce and Government Matters Committee on Tuesday, and SB 176 was heard by the Senate Finance Committee on Wednesday, according to a report from the governor.

Maxwell Arrested For Oak Grove Tavern Incidents

William Robert Maxwell, the owner and operator of Billy Bob's Oak Grove Tavern in the 3300 block of Hutton Road, was arrested for the second time in as many months by the Garrett County Sheriff's Office on Tuesday. In addition to previous gambling-related charges, Maxwell, 52, Mtn. Lake Park, now faces charges of one count of contributing to a child in need of supervision or assistance and three counts of providing alcohol to a person under the age of 21.

The arrest warrant served by sheriff's deputies on Maxwell states that during late November or early December a 14-year-old female was in the Oak Grove Tavern as a guest of the dancers. Maxwell reportedly advised that she had to wear the same apparel as the dancers, at which point a bikini top and shorts were produced for her to wear, and Maxwell allegedly approached her and asked her to dance for the assembled audience. When she refused he gave her one or more shots of an unspecified alcoholic beverage, according to the charging statement, and told her that "this would loosen (her) up." The girl drank what Maxwell allegedly gave her and then got up on the bar and danced, stripping to the bikini top and g-string underwear.

The warrant goes on to allege that in August Maxwell provided an alcoholic beverage to a 19-year-old dancer and in December he provided an alcoholic beverage to a 20-year-old male.

After an appearance before the district court commissioner, Maxwell was released on a $1,000 unsecured bond.

In other sheriff's office news, a Corinth, W.Va., man was arrested by deputies Tuesday morning after they reportedly witnessed him urinating in public along Hutton Road.

David Edwin Liller, 36, was arrested after a deputy observed him staggering along the side of Hutton Road at 11:30 a.m. on Tuesday. As the deputy turned his vehicle around to check, Liller reportedly began urinating on the side of the road in full view of passing westbound traffic. After he finished he was placed under arrest, at which point he became verbally abusive to the deputy. He was charged with indecent exposure and disorderly intoxication.

A theft from a residence in the 5200 block of Hutton Road is under investigation by the sheriff's office. Several appliances were stolen from the home on Saturday, with no apparent signs of forced entry. The stolen items are: a 13-inch General Electric color television, valued at $149; a Symphonic brand VCR with remote, model number SV206G, valued at $79; and a Black&Decker Spacemaker can opener, brand new and still in the box, valued at $39.

Deputies are also investigating a recent report of a boat trailer theft that occurred between July 1995 and October 1997. The maroon tandom axle 1986 Haul-Rite boat trailer was in storage on Thousand Acres Road at the time of the theft, according to the owner.

A shoplifting incident at Treasure Island on Sunday resulted in the arrest of Frank Victor Calvert Jr., 20, Kingwood. Calvert was charged with misdemeanor theft after he was apprehended in the parking lot with an $11 cassette tape that he allegedly did not pay for. He was subsequently released on a $100 bond.

Francis Wade Hinebaugh, 49, Oakland, was arrested recently for violating an ex parte order. He was subsequently released on his own recognizance.

Adorable Adoptables

"OH, GIVE US A HOME," plead these two little creatures, currently being housed at the Garrett County Animal Shelter. At left is a friendly domestic long-hair male cat who's housebroken and in need of a lap to curl up on. The shivery chihuahua at right is a 4-year-old female. She's shy and scared — can anyone offer her some TLC? Persons interested in adopting these or any of the many animals waiting at the shelter may call the facility at 301-334-3553.

cause he was having some difficulty in speaking, although we had no problem understanding him. He went on to relate that although he was suffering from cancer, and wasn't supposed to be doing too much, he loved the walks in the woods, and had shoveled the snow around his house, despite the warning from his doctors.

His friendliness typifies all that we love about Western Maryland. His spirit was inspirational. He was going about his life, dealing with its difficulties in stride. Suddenly all of our own problems seemed pale by comparison. We finished our trip with a renewed sense of enthusiasm.

Whoever he was, we want to thank him for making our day a little brighter. May he live many more happy and healthy years and hold that spirit which all of us hope to have.

To the Editor:

As the legislative session is in full swing, keeping up to date on the status of the state, regional and local bills that will impact our community and making sure that we let our representatives and the representatives of bills we support know that we appreciate all of their hard work can be a full time job.

Recently, a delegation of women who represented the Garrett County Commission for Women and the Garrett County Business and Professional Women attended several days of legislative briefings and met with representatives who supported the Women's Legislative Agenda.

The Agenda covered an array of topics from requiring insurers to provide coverage for contraceptive drugs and devices to implementing a Maryland earned income credit to offset the burden of regressive taxes felt by persons in non-living-wage jobs. There was one legislative item, State Child Health Insurance Program, that had made it to the forefront in a number of agenda packages and is supported by the LWVMD, AAWU, BPW of MD, Legislative Agenda for Maryland Women and the Commission for Women.

Due to the 1997 Balanced Budget Act, Maryland became eligible as of October 1, 1997, to take advantage of a federal draw down of 60+ million dollars each year for a total of 297 million over the next five years. Maryland is required to develop an implementation plan that complies with the federal dictates and must do so quickly to avoid losing substantial funding. According to the American Academy of Pediatrics, Maryland should provide the maximum federal match to cover children birth to age 19, or pregnant or up to 2 months postpartum to 200% of the federal poverty level (FPL) or $32,072 for a family of four.

There are an estimated 168,000 uninsured children in Maryland and an estimated 1,669 uninsured children in Garrett County. In addition, there are children currently being provided services through the Maryland Kids Count waiver who will lose these preventative services when HCFA does not renew the waiver but who would qualify for SCHIP if Maryland maximizes the federal dollars.

State program planning efforts must supplement and not supplant current programs. Public health advocates are recommending that Maryland use the monies to expand Medicaid. This offers the best benefit package for children, it would not require a duplication of administrative infrastructure, and it has oversight capability that could be extended to include additional stakeholders. Additionally, this expansion will provide opportunities to negotiate with insurers for optimal coverage for participants. Flexibility to provide outreach and special projects with the 10% flex funds is an area that supports options for local initiatives and pilots.

In future years, the federal law also allows for family coverage as long as this program is cost effective and does not supplant employer coverage. This could, for example, offer specialty services to the parents of children in foster care in order to facilitate reunification.

Advocates for women and children are encouraging the public to get involved by calling their local legislators and requesting they support HB 97/SB 85.

To the Editor:

When I set up the first youth soccer meeting in April of 1990, thoughts of two varsity soccer teams were not on the drawing board. We set our sights on high school soccer, but did not imagine a girls' team could be a reality this soon.

Girls' soccer in our county has exploded and the kudos begin with Ron Petrella, Larry Brush, Bill Pope and Cathy Menker, who formed a U-16 traveling team under the umbrella of Mountaintop Soccer Association in the spring of 1997.

Anyone who read the sports' section of The Republican two weeks ago learned that Ron and Cathy have continued coaching and their U-12 and U-16 Arsenal Girls' Teams gave an outstanding effort at a recent tournament in Bridgeport, W.Va.

Last year a Girls' Soccer Committee formed to lay the groundwork for approval of varsity soccer. Thanks to the tireless efforts of Ron Petrella, Larry Bruch, Cathy Menker, Sharon Teats, Charlie Teets, Sheila Reeves, Robert Ulino, Mary Jane Berry, Rex Archer, Sheila Butler, Robin Storms, Camilla Rawe, and Marcie Beiler, the girls' teams will be a reality this fall at Northern and Southern high schools. Commendations are also in order for the high school principals, athletic directors, Activities Review Committee, and the Board of Education, who had the foresight and decision making power to add another varsity sport giving opportunity to girls who would never or should never choose to play on a high school boys' team.

Soccer in modern day Garrett County began with 100 youth players in 1990; varsity soccer began in 1993 and now girls' varsity in 1998. This is Crown #3 in the Triple Crown! A crown that every girl who wants to play high school soccer and every parent who helped her get there should be proud to wear!

What's next? A community soccer park? (In the works.) An indoor soccer arena? Soccer continues to grow at a phenomenal rate in the U.S., and Garrett County is not about to be left in the dust.

Settlement Conferences Change "I'll See You In Court!" To "Let's Talk This Out"

Discourage litigation; persuade your neighbors to compromise whenever you can. Point out to them how the nominal winner is often the real loser in fees and expenses and waste of time. As a peacemaker, the lawyer has a superior opportunity of being a good man. There will still be business enough.
-Abraham Lincoln, from Notes on the Practice of Law

Disputes are a fact of life. From the earliest days of the human race, people have sought a way to settle their disagreements, whether dueling with fists, swords, or pistols, or through the counsel of chiefs, kings, and clan elders. In today's world, lawyers verbally spar before a judge, jousting with words and jabbing with legal arguments, seeking advantage for their client's case and weakness in the opposition. At the conclusion of the trial there is a winner, and of course, a loser.

Yet, as lawyer Abe Lincoln implied over a century ago, often there is no real winner in fees, expenses, and time.

In Garrett County there is another way.

On the second floor of the courthouse complex, retired circuit court judge Fred Thayer conducts Settlement Conferences, which brings both sides of civil lawsuits to a table in his office to do something even older (if only for a short while) than disputing over differences — talking them out.

Seated across the table in his office on a recent afternoon, Thayer spent a recent afternoon outlining the Settlement Conference program. The simple surroundings of his quarters helped illustrate the difference between facilitated negotiations there and courtroom combat in the imposing caverness of the Circuit Court's chamber, where he held sway from the judge's bench for over two decades. Thayer's easy-going manner, ideal for a mediator of disputes, is partner to a razor-sharp legal mind that draws on a half century of legal experience.

"Only about half of the counties in Maryland utilize Settlement Conferences," Thayer said, "with Garrett County the only one west of Frederick to use them. I give Circuit Court Judge James Sherbin credit for having the foresight to implement this program here, a program that helps the litigants save their hard-earned money and gets them to a quicker settlement of legal disputes. It works in other counties, and it's working here in Garrett County."

In a settlement conference, Thayer, a neutral party representing no one, tries to have both sides agree on a mutually satisfying settlement before the case goes to court. He points out that if the opposing sides can to come to an agreement without the case going to court, there are actually three winners — the two parties and the county.

"As far as the county is concerned," Thayer explained, "Settlement conferences free up the court docket (schedule) by cutting down on the number of cases that get settled 'on the courtroom steps,' which tie up the docket until the last minute. This makes the docket more flexible and allows more room for cases that need to go to trial.

"Settlement conferences also save money for the county, because paying citizens for jury duty, and all the other expenses of running a court, can add up.

"Third, conferences can save the litigants on both sides a lot of money. We all know that lawsuits cost real money, and the most expensive part of the process is taking the case to trial," Thayer said.

A case has to involve a civil dispute to be eligible for a settlement conference; criminal cases must go through the standard courtroom trial procedure. Thayer scans the docket and reads through the civil cases to see which ones could potentially be settled by a face-to-face meeting, and schedules those for settlement conferences.

Most of the disputes that go to settlement conference are personal injury cases, often involving claims for injuries sustained in automobile accidents; real estate property disputes resulting from boundary line conflicts; workman's compensation matters; and divorce property settlements and child support cases. (Divorces and child custody cases are not handled by Thayer either.)

The process of a settlement conference is rather simple compared to a full-blown courtroom trial. "I've already studied the case file and looked up the pertinent laws, if necessary. Both sets of clients and lawyers are required to be there, preferably in person, although a conference telephone call is possible if someone is out of town.

"We begin the conference informally," Thayer said. "With both sides present, I'll have the lawyer for the plaintiff tell me what they believe the case is about and what they hope to accomplish. Then it's the turn of the defense to present their side. That way both sides know where the other stands, which is the first step towards settling any matter.

"I also hold a 'pop quiz,' where I give each of the lawyers a slip of paper to have them write down for my eyes only the last offer or demand they made, what authority their client has given them to settle the case out of court, and what action they would recommend to their client to settle the case. This lets me know what we have to work with, and gives me a pretty fair idea of whether or not the case can actually be settled," he said.

"If I think there's a hope of getting the case settled, then I'll ask the defense to leave the room and speak to the plaintiff and his lawyer and tell them what their options are as I see things. If the plaintiff seems open to a settlement, we discuss his chances of success based on my 20-plus years on the bench as a trial judge. Next, I'll excuse the plaintiff's side and bring in the defense and repeat the process. After that I'll ask the lawyers for both sides to negotiate with each other in private, without their clients nor myself present.

"After their negotiations the lawyers come back to me and say one of three things: we can settle this right now; we're pretty close and feel we can settle if given time — if so we will schedule a 'reset' conference for within a week of the trial date to see if we can iron things out; and third, we are just too far apart to settle this, and the case will go on to trial as scheduled," said Thayer.

As an illustration, Thayer provided some dollar figures from cases that were recently settled at his table. One recent conference demand from a plaintiff was $75,000; the defense countered with an offer of $25,000. The plaintiff turned down the offer, the case went to court, and the verdict returned with an order for a $20,000 settlement; in effect, the plaintiff lost $5,000 by not settling out of court, which doesn't include the additional legal fees for the courtroom arguments of his lawyer.

A second case involved a conference demand for $7,000; the defense offered $5,000. Thayer recommended that the plaintiff accept the offer, but he turned it down. The jury eventually awarded the plaintiff $3,900, over $1,000 less than he was offered at the conference.

The past year's case load bears out the success of the Settlement Conference Program, still in its infancy. "In 1997," Thayer said, "our first year of operation, we were able to settle 71 percent of the cases that came to Settlement Conference. Those cases did not have to go to court for trial, and did not cost the county $490 per day for jury duty. The net savings to the county for jury duty alone was over $19,000, while the cost of the program was $6,400, a net savings to the county of over $12,000. This net savings doesn't include the proportional cost to the county of providing other court-related services, such as heat, light, maintenance, bailiff, staff, supplies and so forth."

The court's schedule benefits as well. It takes an average of six months for a civil case to make it through the system to a verdict, and every case settled out of court and removed from the docket speeds things up for everyone. "Approximately 800 civil cases are filed in Circuit Court every year," Thayer said, "and because we are a one-judge county, if we could settle a case 30-45 days prior to trial, it frees up the docket for scheduling cases that actually require a judge and jury."

"Settlement Conferences are a simple idea that is an advancement in our local legal system," Thayer concluded. "Judge Sherbin implemented it, and the local legal bar makes it work because the lawyers are willing to use it. It's a successful team effort."

In de-escalating conflict, enouraging negotiation, and bringing people to the table to work out their differences among themselves, Garrett County's Settlement Conference Program puts into practice Lincoln's adage: "As a peacemaker, the lawyer has a superior opportunity of being a good man."

Read. Then Recycle.

TALK IS CHEAP, compared to combat in court, that is. Retired Garrett County Circuit Court Judge Fred Thayer, second from left, is the mediator for the county's Settlement Conference Program, which attempts to resolve civil legal disputes without going to trial. To Thayer's right is David Martin, who attends each meeting in his official capacity as Clerk of the Circuit Court. Settlement Conferences, a relatively new innovation in the local legal system, save the county, and the citizens embroiled in civil disputes, thousands of dollars and many hours.

AABB Awards Accreditation To Garrett Memorial

Garrett County Memorial Hospital has been granted accreditation by the American Association of Blood Banks (AABB), according to E. Noel Thompson, MD, medical director of Garrett Memorial's laboratory.

Accreditation follows an intensive on-site inspection by specially trained representatives of the association and establishes that the level of medical, technical, and administrative performance within the facility meets or exceeds the standards set by the AABB. By successfully meeting these requirements, Garrett Memorial joins more than 2,000 similar facilities across the United States and abroad that have earned AABB accreditation.

"The AABB's inspection and accreditation procedures are voluntary," Walter Donalson, CHE, president and CEO of Garrett Memorial, explained. "Garrett Memorial has sought AABB accreditation because this program assists facilities around the country in achieving excellence by promoting a level of professional and medical expertise that contributes to quality performance."

ACCREDITATION from the American Association of Blood Banks (AABB) was received recently by Garrett County Memorial Hospital. Performing compatibility testing in the hospital laboratory's blood banking area, above, is Stacy Graves, medical laboratory technician. "Achieving excellence through accreditation promotes a level of professional and medical expertise that contributes to quality performance," stated Walter Donalson, CHE, president and CEO of Garrett Memorial. See story for details.

Since 1958, the AABB has been engaged in the voluntary inspection and accreditation of blood banks and transfusion services. The Inspection and Accreditation Program assists blood banks and transfusion services in determining whether methods, procedures, personnel knowledge, equipment, and the physical plant meet established requirements. The minimum requirements for accreditation of blood banks and transfusion services are based primarily on the AABB's Standards for Blood Banks and Transfusion Services. The AABB's Committee on Inspection and Accreditation assures compliance with these criteria before granting accreditation. These standards not only set the level of professional proficiency for blood banks and transfusion services in the United States, but also provide the basis of practice for similar facilities around the world.

Established in 1947, the AABB is the professional society for approximately 2,400 community, regional, and Red Cross blood centers, hospital-based blood banks and transfusion services, and over 8,800 individuals engaged in blood banking and transfusion medicine. Its member facilities are responsible for collecting virtually all of the nation's blood supply and for transfusing more than 80 percent of the blood used for patient care in the United States. The AABB sets standards, inspects and accredits blood collection and transfusion facilities, and provides continuing education and information.

A variety of other athletic options remains and will include the new girls' soccer team to be introduced this year. "We're just not big enough to support all the sports," Green said.

Students at Northern who may wish to train on their own would still have the option to compete as individuals in state competitions. The example was cited by Green of a previous student who trained individually in golf and competed at the state level.

Others Issues

Among the other items considered by the board were guidelines being developed for entrance into the prekindergarten program and a grant for the community learning centers program.

Guidelines For PreK

Dr. McCartney presented an outline of the process that will be used in selecting the children who will attend the PreK classes in county schools beginning fall of 1998.

Required by the Maryland State Department of Education, this selection process must follow the prescribed criteria.

Though not yet approved by the state, the Garrett County procedure would include a questionnaire. There would criteria for automatic enrollment and a prioritized criteria for others.

Details of the procedure will be available once approved by the state.

Community Centers Grant

Dr. McCartney said she is fielding a committee to apply for a $100,000 grant through the 21st Century Community Leaning Centers Program. Northern and Southern middle schools are interested in pursuing the funding, she said.

The Learning Centers at the schools would be open 3:30—6 p.m. and offer an assortment of educational and cultural services, and could include members of the community beyond the student body.

The grant application will be developed with input from several agencies.

WRAPPING UP GCC CAREERS - The Garrett Community College sophomores pictured here will be playing their final regular-season game for the Lakers this Saturday at home against Charles County CC. "I hope everyone takes the opportunity to come to our final home game of the season to see these young men play," stated Laker coach Dennis Gibson. "They have been great to work with over the past two years. They have been both dedicated and hard-working in the classroom and on the court, which is a big part of our team's success." The Lakers will be going for their 18th victory of the season Saturday before entering the Maryland JUCO Tournament Feb. 19-22 at Baltimore City CC.

Lakers Defeated By Essex, Then Top Potomac State, Anne Arundel

After a disappointing 76-65 defeat Saturday evening by host Essex CC, the Garrett Community College men's team got back on the winning track by topping visiting Potomac State College Monday, 87-78, and then defeating Anne Arundel CC last night in McHenry, 83-75. The Lakers are now 17-7 overall and will entertain Charles County CC this Saturday in their final home contest of the season.

The Lakers held a 19-10 lead early in Saturday's game with Essex before falling behind by four, 34-30, by halftime. Garrett rallied in the second half and finally took the lead, 50-49. The lead changed sides a few times, but Essex slowly pulled away to record the win. The Lakers were hampered by some cases of the flu, plus some "minor disciplinary problems," according to a team spokesman.

Michael Fields led the Lakers' scoring with 22 points, 10 rebounds, and three steals, while Jerome Adams, who was one of those affected by the flu, finished with 14 points.

Also hitting 22 points was James Lewis for Essex, Antoine Martin was right behind with 21, Abdul Williams netted 17, and Dennis Clark finished with 10 points and 13 rebounds.

The Lakers were outrebounded by a 46-35 margin.

In Monday's home game with Potomac State, the Lakers built a comfortable lead in the first half, allowed the Catamounts to cut the margin to just five points midway through the second half, and then held on to record their 16th win.

After a tie in the opening minutes of the contest, the Lakers built a 43-28 lead by halftime. Their biggest lead of the game was a minute into the second half (46-28) before Potomac State began to come back. An 8-0 run by the visitors cut the Lakers' advantage to 57-52 with 9:44 remaining, but the Catamounts would get no closer.

Fields again led the Lakers' effort with 22 points, 13 rebounds, and five assists. Jerome Adams hit 20 points and Lionell Sewell finished with 16 points and four steals.

Pacing the Catamounts was Fred Jackson with 20 points, seven rebounds, six steals, and four assists. Theodore Green contributed 16 points and Chad Branson scored 15. It was the 18th defeat in 21 starts for Potomac State.

Jerome Adams had another big game for the Lakers last night, as he pumped in 31 points on nine buckets and eight of nine free throws. Five of his field goals came from three-point range.

The Lakers trailed at halftime, 42-39, but took a 51-50 lead with 16:07 remaining in the game and never relinquished it. It was a 9-0 spurt, led by Adams and Rob Wheeler, that put Garrett on top for good.

Eric Papcun had one of his best games of the season for the Lakers, as he finished with 18 points, Wheeler netted 16, and Lionell Sewell pulled down nine rebounds. Adams also recorded four steals.

Leading Anne Arundel with a game-high 35 points was Carlos Evans, who also pulled down 10 rebounds and dished out five assists. Marques Mack and Jeff Miller also reached double figures with 11 and 10 points, respectively.

Playing in their final home game for the Lakers this Saturday will be sophomores Jerome Adams, Jimmy Pamepinto, Lance Loya, and Rick Berkley. The Lakers will prepare next week for the Maryland JUCO Tournament, which will be played Feb. 19-22 at Baltimore City CC. That will be followed by the Region XX Tournament, to be played at Hagerstown Junior College Feb. 26-28.

Garrett Women Whip Cecil For 11th Victory

The women's basketball team of Garrett Community College recorded its 11th win in 18 games last Friday afternoon by defeating host Cecil Community College, 63-49.

Despite playing with sore knees, Garrett's Chrissy Lambert led the Lakers in scoring and rebounding with 15 points and 13 boards, while Marika Washington provided 12 points, eight assists, and four steals. Keyshia Monroe also had a double-double night with 11 points and 11 rebounds, and Stephanie Quattro also scored 11 points.

The Lakers assumed control of the game early and held a 32-20 lead.

K. Miller led Cecil in scoring with 18 points. J. Shane finished with 10.

It was the second straight physical game for the Lakers, who had topped Allegany two days prior, 64-48. "We had too very physical games in three days," stated Ann Wellham, Laker coach, "so we looking forward to some time off."

The Lakers got some time off to recover, since their game with Harford that was slated for Tuesday was cancelled after it was learned that Harford had dropped its program. The Garrett women will return to action this Saturday at home against Montgomery-Takoma Park, with tip-off set for 5 p.m.

GCC Ski Team Fourth Place In Conference

The ski team of Garrett Community College moved from sixth to fourth place in the Allegheny Conference of the U.S. Collegiate Association rankings by virtue of the Lakers' effort in a competition on their "home" slope, the Wisp, this past weekend.

Leading the GCC team was E.J. Scofield, who finished second in the giant slalom and third in the slalom. Scott Doolan placed 15th, Bobby Gray was 16th, and Mike Sassano was 29th in the slalom. In the giant slalom, Gray finished 13th, Doolan was 22nd, and Sassano finished 33rd out of 93 racers.

The U.S. Naval Academy team is currently leading the conference, followed by Penn State, West Virginia University, GCC, and Bucknell. The Lakers will compete again this weekend in the conference championships, to be hosted by Seven Springs Resort.

Huskies Defeated By Wildcats, Mountaineers; Top Meyersdale

The Northern High boys' varsity played three games in four days and finished 1-2 for the week, as the Huskies were defeated by visiting Westmar on Friday, 69-59, stopped host Meyersdale on Monday, 58-50, and then fell to visiting Beall on Tuesday, 60-51. The results left Coach Mike Friend's team with a 5-13 overall mark.

The first half against Beall on Friday was close, as the Huskies rallied from a 15-8 deficit going into the second period and took a 27-25 lead into the locker room at halftime. But the Mountaineers slowly took the momentum back in the third stanza by out-scoring the Huskies by a 19-12 margin and building a 44-39 advantage by the end of the quarter.

Ryan Raley led the Beall rally by scoring 10 of his game-high total of 20 in the third period. Todd Merbaugh recorded 13 points and six steals for the Mountaineers and Nick Marsh finished with 12 points and seven rebounds. Raley also pulled down seven boards.

The Huskies were paced in scoring by Dustin Long with 18 points, Scott Sisler with 12, and Craig Kamp with 11.

The win was only the second in 15 games for the Mountaineers.

The Northern junior varsity won the preliminary game, 47-43, behind an 18-point effort by Tim Umbel. Jeremy Smith paced the Beall jayvees and led all scorers by netting 21 points.

Dustin Long led the Northern varsity Monday night to its victory over Meyersdale, as he poured in 27 points, pulled down 20 rebounds, and blocked six shots.

The Huskies moved out to a 15-6 lead by the end of the first quarter and never looked back. They held a comfortable 37-13 lead at halftime and were on top by a 46-28 spread going into the final period.

Kamp also reached double figures with 12 points.

Chris Witt and Nate Meyers each recorded 13 points to lead the Lions, while Greg Troutman also reached double figures with 10 points.

The Northern jayvees were stopped in the first game, 32-25, as Guy Woods scored 13 of the Meyersdale junior varsity's points. Greg Speicher and Tim Umbel each scored six for the Huskies.

The Northern varsity never got on track Tuesday night in their Western Maryland Interscholastic League contest against Westmar, as the Huskies found themselves down 23-8 by the end of the first quarter. The Wildcats were on top 37-18 at halftime and held a commanding 54-34 advantage at the end of the third period.

Joey Langham and Troy Morris led Westmar (7-9 and 5-5 WMIL) in scoring with 21 and 20 points, respectively.

Dustin Long recorded a game-high 25 points for the Huskies, grabbed 11 rebounds, and blocked six shots, while Kamp netted 11 points and Rob Dozier finished with 10 points and nine rebounds.

The junior varsity game was decided in overtime, with the Northern jayvees going down to a 41-34 defeat. David Ziler and Ricky Parrish each scored 10 points to lead the Westmar junior varsity and Russell Lawson paced Northern with nine points.

The Huskies will be back in action this Friday at home against Salisbury. They will travel to Bishop Walsh next Tuesday.

Andrews Paces Rams Past Beall For Sixth Straight

A 23-point performance by John Andrews paced the Southern High School boys' varsity to a 69-54 victory over host Beall Tuesday night, giving the Rams their sixth straight win, a 12-6 overall record, and a 9-2 mark in the Western Maryland Interscholastic League standings.

Andrews, the junior point guard on Coach Tom Bosley's team, hit eight field goals and five of seven free throws, while teammate Mike Paesani also reached double figures with 13 points.

The Rams allowed the Mountaineers to stay in the game through the first half, as they led by just five at the end of the first quarter, 17-12, and were up by seven at halftime, 37-30. They stretched their lead to 10 points, 49-39, by the end of the third stanza, and then out-scored their host team by a 20-15 margin in the fourth quarter.

Leading Beall (3-14, 1-8 WMIL) was Todd Merbaugh, who recorded 18 points. Ryan Raley also reached double figures with 12.

The Southern junior varsity continued to enjoy its winning season by coasting over the Beall jayvees in the preliminary game, 52-30. Dustin Liller and Mike Browning scored 16 and 11 points, respectively, to lead Southern, while Jeremy Smith and Jimmy Johnson each netted a dozen points for the Mountaineers.

The Rams, currently ranked second in the area, will play their remaining four regular-season games on their home court, starting with Tucker County this Friday night and Fort Hill next Tuesday. Southern has a 7-1 record so far this season on its home floor.

Ram Freshmen Fall To Falcons, Defeat Tucker

The freshman boys' basketball team of Southern High School was edged by host Frankfort on Saturday, 52-49, but the Rams came back to record a 44-33 victory over visiting Tucker County Monday night and up their record to 12-5. Coach Jon Hegeman's team was slated to play Northern last night in Oakland, but results of that contest were not received this morning.

After a 12-12 tie at the end of the first period against Frankfort, the Rams fell behind in the second quarter and trailed by five at halftime, 27-22. Southern cut the Falcons' lead to three points by the end of the third stanza, but could get no closer.

Jamie Bosley and Ryan Ewing combined for 27 of the Rams' points, while Keith Steyer and Justin DiSimone led defensively and Bryan Panther pulled down six rebounds. The Rams had defeated the Falcons handily earlier in the season.

"This was one of our poorest efforts of the season," stated Coach Hegeman. "We just never got into the flow of the game."

The Rams never trailed in their game with Tucker County on Monday. Ryan Ewing and Jamie Bosley each scored 10 points, and Steve Eiswert and Josh Sharon paced the defensive game.

Justin Hamrick led the Mountain Lions with a game-high 18 points.

"Our defense limited their offense to low-percentage shots," Hegeman said.

Rams Falter In Decisive Losses To Tucker And Alco

After opening this week's action with a sixth-place ranking in area high school play, the Southern girls' basketball team saw its season take a decided downturn as it dropped two games by wide margins. With an 8-9 record, the Rams have two regular season games remaining on their schedule, a Feb. 18 home matchup against Preston County, while a road trip to Beall is slated for the following evening.

In dominating the Rams by a score of 72-38 Thursday night in Oakland, the Tucker County Mountain Lions showed why they are currently ranked number one in West Virginia Class AA play and have a shot at a "three-peat" in the state championships. Tucker, which had lost only one game going into the contest, led at all four buzzers, 20-7 at the end of the first quarter, 41-18 at the half, and 57-29 at the opening of the final stanza.

Jessica Saturday led Southern with 15 points, while Bridget Miller contributed nine points. Tucker's Alisha McKune led all scorers with 22 points, followed close behind by Sarah Hamrick's 21 points.

Southern's fortunes saw no improvement Monday night at Allegany, as the Rams were trounced 60-39. The physical contest left players at both ends of the court bruised and battered, with Allegany racking up 23 fouls and Southern 19 fouls. Five players fouled out on the evening.

Foul whistles notwithstanding, the Campers led throughout the contest. Allegany held a 16-5 margin at the close of the first quarter, a 27-17 halftime lead, and a 46-28 advantage at the close of the third period.

Southern connected on only nine field goals, three from Bridget Miller, the Rams leading scorer for the night. Liz Paesani followed with 10 points, and Michelle Teter scored seven points. Allegany's Cassie Murray hit for 21 points and Tracey Little added 16 for the fourth-ranked Campers.

Allegany took the junior varsity contest by a 47-32 margin. The Rams' Charlena Reeves led all scorers with 17 points, while Ashley Rickelman scored 16 points for the Campers.

Southern Mat Club Members Compete Again

Smithfield, Pa., was the site of a youth wrestling tournament Saturday in which nine members of the Southern Mat Club competed and captured a total of 13 trophies. The local grapplers won 33 of 44 bouts in their respective age/weight classes.

Five of the trophies garnered were first-place awards. They were won by: Justin Ratliff (age 7-8/60 pounds), who won all four of his matches; Nathan Sines (9-10/75), who won his third championship in the past four weeks; Geoff Tressler (13-15/105), who earned his first title of the season by defeating a wrestler who had defeated him two weeks ago; and David Ratliff, who placed first in two divisions (9-10/65 and 11-12/65).

Earning second places were Nick Tressler (7-8/45) and Scott Wildesen (11-12/80). Winning third-place trophies were: Justin Ratliff (7-8/65), Jeremy Gregory (9-10/70), Scott Wildesen (9-10/80), and, with two third places, Jason Weeks (11-12/90 and 11-12/95). Daniel Carr (7-8/60) earned a fourth-place trophy.

"These kids proved they can compete with anybody," stated Coach Dave Taylor, who said that there were over 200 wrestlers from four states in the event. "I am extremely pleased that we can take nine wrestlers to a tournament in Pennsylvania and bring home so many trophies. Each one of the boys gave it everything he had, and it paid off."

Special Olympic Winter Games Slated At Wisp

The eyes of many spectators around the world focused on Nagano, Japan, as the Winter Olympics got underway last week. Another Olympic event is about to begin and it is scheduled in Garrett County. The Special Olympics Maryland Winter Games will be held at the Wisp Ski Resort, McHenry, Feb. 22-24.

Nearly 130 athletes will compete in Alpine, cross-country, and modified-Alpine events. Alpine events will include slalom and giant slalom, and glide and super-glide. Cross-country competitors will undertake the 50, 100, and 500 meter, 1K, 3K, and 3 x 1K relay. The modified Alpine is for athletes with mobility impairments, Miriam Weinstein, speaking for the Special Olympics, explained.

Opening ceremonies will begin on Sunday, Feb. 22, at 7:30 p.m. with the parade of athletes. A ski and snowboard demonstration and the law enforcement torch run ski parade will follow. "The evening will be capped off with a mountain top fireworks display," Weinstein said.

Athletes will receive medals and ribbons following each sports event. Closing ceremonies featuring the presentation of the Athlete Sportsmanship Awards will begin at 2:30 p.m. on Tuesday, Feb. 24.

Winter Games is one of the several statewide tournaments that Special Olympics Maryland hosts each year. The is the sixth consecutive year that the Wisp has donated use of its mountain for the games. Motor City Toyota of Cumberland is the presenting sponsor and the American Legion/Department of Maryland is the champion sponsor for the games in McHenry.

Support sponsors for the event include the Mid-Atlantic Food Dealers Association, Wisp Resort, Remsberg Tents, and the Garrett County Chamber of Commerce.

"The public is invited to attend all events, including the opening and closing ceremonies, free of charge," Weinstein noted.

Anyone interested in getting more information about Special Olympics may call 1-800-541-7544 (Maryland only) or 1-410-290-7611.

ing column. Jill Speicher added 9 points on three three-pointers. Donna Skidmore led Beall with nine points.

The Huskies' jayvee took a 26-21 victory behind 20 points from Heather Nugent. Beall's Nikki Williams scored 13 points.

Against the Indians at the Igloo last night, Arnold and Brenneman did not receive the same amount of assistance from their teammates, and it showed in the 15-point defeat. Although the pair tallied 17 points and 16 points respectively, Speicher was the only other Husky to find the nets as she contributed six points. Heather Abucevicz scored 20 for Mt. Savage and Mary Beth Kennell added 16 points.

The Huskies trailed throughtout the evening, as the Indians led 12-4 at the end of the first quarter, 27-15 at the half, and 43-24 at the opening of the final stanza.

A home stand in the coming week has Northern hosting Westmar on Monday and Bishop Walsh on Thursday.

tion (SOS) Committee, formed by GOBA in August 1996, has been working to raise funds and increase awareness about the town's effort to purchase the Oakland train station, currently owned by CSX. SOS became incorporated as a non-profit group last year and now functions under its own board of directors, McCartney said.

McCain later noted that the town is slated to close on the train station deal at the end of this month. The cost is approximately $150,000 and SOS has raised about $25,000. The mayor said an effort to seek contributions from corporations and businesses will begin soon.

GOBA will become involved in the Main Street Maryland Project, McCartney said, and has already appointed a six-member board of directors. The first task for this group is to outline a job description for a project manager, and then hire this individual, who will coordinate the efforts of the town and GOBA in promoting Oakland.

Oakland's Future

Town visibility, customer attraction, and overall aesthetics appeared to be high priorities of the business leaders, who in the second portion of the meeting gave their views on what is needed in Oakland in the next five years.

Ken Perrin, postmaster of the Oakland Post Office, gave a report on Robert Gibbs's view of the town. Gibbs said he was impressed by many features of the town, including the brick sidewalk work, the lampposts, and landscaping. He suggested that the reinstitution of two-way traffic be considered to increase customer access. He also suggested the setting of site development standards so that future buildings in the historic area of the town be built in keeping with the historic flavor of the area.

Perrin reported that Gibbs said the proposed by-pass around Oakland has advantages and disadvantages, although he maintained that a by-pass, "if done right, will not kill a town." GOBA members currently appear to be divided on this issue, with some in favor of the by-pass construction and others skeptical of its supposed benefits.

Gibbs also recommended that the town take over the duty of clearing the sidewalks of snow. Some businesses are able to completely clear the areas in front of their stores, but other stores do not have the manpower to complete the job. If the town took on the work, Gibbs felt that the more consistent clean-up would be beneficial to all of downtown.

Gibbs strongly recommended that the retail stores highlight brand-name displays and make them clearly visible to the passing public.

"There are multi-million dollar advertising campaigns for these products, and a simple small display of these products in full view of the public could help our local businesses enormously," Perrin said.

He also noted that the most concentrated shopping time for most Americans occurs on Sunday afternoons or after 5 p.m. on weekdays. Most local stores do not have open hours during these times and should reconsider their schedules, he said.

Overall, Gibbs was apparently impressed by Oakland and said that the area has a "leg up" on several small towns he has visited. With the train station project and the continuing effort to beautify and tie together elements of the town, Gibbs felt the currently pursued direction is good.

McCain said the mile-long walking path at the new housing development (the Glades) is being utilized by numerous individuals and that an extension to that walk is planned. Eventually the walkway will extend to the Mountain Fresh Pavilion, around to the George Washington Spring, and back along the road near the site of the old chicken plant.

The mayor also noted that the town council is considering the possibility of getting rid of parking meters and changing over to timed parking signs. This will be tested first along Third Street, he said, and if successful, will be extended throughout the town.

McCain said the Appalachian Crossroads building, to be erected along Third Street next to the Oakland fire hall, will be a good addition to the town, as it

SPHERE

Rated PG-13 - Running time: 2:12

For a movie of a novel written by Michael Crichton with such a capable cast, Sphere is quite a disappointment. This is partly because of its nearly 2½-hour running length, but mainly it's just unfocused and disjointed. The characters in this adaptation by Kurt Wimmer, Stephen Hauser, and Paul Attanasio are all two-dimensional cutouts, and when faced with a life-threatening situation they don't pull together like normal people would do, but continuously bicker over petty differences and conspire against each other.

The story is this: an incredibly huge spacecraft of apparently alien origin has been discovered at the bottom of the ocean, apparently having been there for hundreds of years. So a team of scientists is collected for the top-secret mission of exploring it and retrieving anything on board that might prove scientifically valuable. The most unsettling aspect of the thing, apart from the obvious, is that sensors detect that something onboard is still running.

The team assigned to go make friends with the little green men is made up of five civilians, each with a relevant expertise: Ted the astrophysicist (Liev Schreiber), Harry the mathematician (Samuel L. Jackson), Norman the psychologist (Dustin Hoffman), Beth the marine biologist (Sharon Stone), and Harold the commander (Peter Coyote). Each is recognized as an expert in his field, and they all seem to know and have issues with each other. And there is no shortage of controlled animosity.

When they get into the spacecraft, they discover two things: (1) the remains of human, apparently American astronauts, and (2) a huge, shimmering gold ball, kinda like the one at Epcot Center. Soon, despite being warned not to, Harry touches the sphere and gets sucked in for a few minutes. He is then spat out apparently unharmed, but that's when it really hits the fan.

And that, too, is when the movie breaks down. Up until the point of Harry's adventure, it is interesting, relatively believable, and tight. But for the remaining (interminable) 90 minutes of film, director Barry Levinson seems to have dropped the ball (pun intended) and can't seem to retrieve it. The action moves in fits and starts, with moments of overblown terror interspersed with boring passages of pointless squabbling between the crew. Each character has faults that are identified and harped on ad nauseum by the others. There are 20-minute scenes that appear to go nowhere. And the members of the crew alternate between saving each other's lives and trying to kill each other.

To be fair, this fickle quality of the characters can be explained somewhat by their individual experiences with the sphere, but the main problem here is tempo. There is absolutely no reason for this film to be over 2 hours long. There is (finally) a fascinating and well-edited climax, but the ending is simplified to the point of being ridiculous.

This movie seems to be patterned somewhat after Alien, with the small crew whose confidence in themselves and each other is threatened by a horrific situation, but the difference is direction. In that 1979 classic, Ridley Scott had 5-minute scenes of silence that meant something. In Sphere, Levinson has 20 minute scenes of yammering that mean nothing. ★★

MIDNIGHT IN THE GARDEN OF GOOD AND EVIL

Rated R - Running time: 2:35

In the world of high-society where one's reputation is one's most valuable asset, going to jail may be preferable to having the truth come to light. This theme is illustrated abundantly in John Lee Hancock's rewrite of John Berendt's best-selling book, Midnight in the Garden of Good and Evil. In the genteel southern town of Savannah, Georgia, a wealthy bachelor named Jim Williams (Kevin Spacey) runs the risk of losing much more than his freedom if the crowd turns against him.

This story starts when John Kelso (John Cusack), a New York writer, is commissioned to do a short piece for the society page about a party held at Jim's sprawling estate. The tycoon warmly welcomes John and introduces him to several important people. The inebriated conversations among wealthy women about their husbands having committed suicide strikes John as strange, but when they start brandishing loaded weapons and joking about their aspirations to "kill a man," he is downright intrigued.

When the party's over, the police are called: sure enough, there is a man dead on the Persian rug, and Jim appears to be the killer. While partygoers continue to pass out hors d'oeuvres on the street, the police question the host. John sees that he has a much bigger story on his hands than the society piece. "These people are all heavily armed and drunk," he phones to a friend back home. "New York is boring; I'm staying here for a while." In fact, he's inspired to write a book about the charming but dark atmosphere of deep south soceity.

The ensuing murder trial reveals aspects of Jim's lifestyle and his relationship with the victim (Billy Hanson, played by Jude Law) that he thinks are much more damaging than the fact that he killed the man. And with his new friend scribbling notes every few minutes, he is even more on edge. But the two strike up a deal with the aid of Jim's lawyer, Sonny Seiler (Jack Thompson), and John is allowed to be privy to all information in the case in return for letting them see what he's writing.

The likelihood of an attorney allowing a novelist to eavesdrop on confidential conversations regarding a murder trial is highly questionable, especially in a close-knit southern town when the writer is a New York "yankee." And since John's participation has a major bearing on the case, some might say the whole story falls apart because of that. But if this unlikelihood is allowed, the rest of the story seems plausible and very well executed by the cast and by director Clint Eastwood, usually known for high-intensity action pictures. Spacey is suave and subtle, eminently charming to all. And Cusack is visibly flabbergasted by all the things he sees and experiences in this multi-layered society.

A standout performance is given by The Lady Chablis, a drag queen apparently portraying herself. She has an irresistable charm and an arresting manner about her. She is called in as a star witness by John, because she knows intimate details about Billy and his relationship with Jim. Chablis really steals the show, and adds much needed humor, although not at her expense or that of anyone like her. Her humor is on her own terms, and her sex appeal is undeniable, a counterbalance to the home-spun sensuality of Mandy (Alison Eastwood), the woman John meets and is attracted to.

Another interesting portrayal is that of Minerva (Irma P. Hall), a mysterious practicioner of the dark arts enlisted by Jim to help him deal with the spirit of the man dead at his hand. The cryptic philosophy/maniacal laughter bit is trite, but generally she is real and believable, a well-defined character among many in the multi-faceted cast.

There are moments when the story seems to lose momentum, but it never really drags. Eastwood has offered a good blend of humor and pathos, the mysterious underworld and the mundane machinations of society. ★★★★

BLUES BROTHERS 2000

Aretha Franklin. James Brown. B.B. King. Wilson Pickett. Eric Clapton. Lou Rawls. Isaac Hayes. Bo Diddley. Billy Preston. Dr. John. Clarence Clemons. . . . With a roll call like this, who needs anything else?

When The Blues Brothers came out in 1980, it was a silly movie based on a Saturday Night Live sketch, which also happened to have a pretty good soundtrack. This time, Dan Aykroyd and director John Landis have given up any pretense at plot for an excuse to host the best musical experience on celluloid in this decade. Unlike its predecessor, Blues Brothers 2000 is virtually worthless without the music. But the music's so good, it doesn't matter.

The character of Elwood Blues (Aykroyd) has done a complete about-face since we last saw him. What was always funny about Elwood was his total absence of personality when he was not onstage. He would stand there, stone-faced behind his Ray-Ban G15's, and let his brother Jake (John Belushi) do all the talking. Now the entire exposition of the story rests on Elwood's shoulders, and that is unfortunate. Aykroyd has made him into a yammering busybody like John Ratzenberger's "Cliff" character on Cheers. He's so articulate, it's tragic.

But he's not the only one suffering from a split personality. John Goodman's character, Mighty Mack, can't seem to settle either. Half the time he's a nerdy country boy; the other half, he seems to have taken over Elwood's previous job of monosyllabic blues automaton. And this time there are two other "brothers": Cabel Chamberlain (Joe Morton), a cop who eventually sees the light, and Buster (J. Evan Bonifant), a 10-year-old who probably has fewer than five lines in the movie, but he's definitely got the moves.

Writer Aykroyd has included, in addition to the entire membership of the original band (minus Belushi), familiar elements such as a pointless cop car pileup, a group of Southern good-old-boy terrorists led by Darrell Hammond (Saturday Night Live), and Sister Mary Stigmata (Kathleen Freeman), the nun from the first movie who now wields a switchblade-style baton for whipping the knuckles of transgressors. The addition of a group of Soviet Russians (you heard me) further leads one to believe that this script was written back when Aykroyd was still collecting a regular paycheck from NBC.

But it just doesn't matter. Because this movie is about the music. Aretha Franklin's relaxed-but-sexy version of "Respect" is even better (if that's possible) than her "Think" done for the first movie. B.B. King is at the top of his form as the leader of the all-star blues band against which the Brothers must compete in the final sequence. And this climax, with two dozen of the greatest soul and blues personalities alive, has to be experienced to be believed. I defy anyone to sit still through it. A concert featuring all these R&B greats playing together would cost over 100 bucks for the cheap seats. But you can see them for the price of a movie admission.

Now if you'll excuse me, I have to go stand in line and wait for the soundtrack to come out. ★★★★ benefits of the Simon Pearce glassmaking company moving into the Bausch & Lomb facility. The business leaders seemed to agree that this will most likely positively affect the downtown area, especially if the historic attributes of the town are promoted.

"Americans are looking for small towns," said Judy Devlin, owner and operator of The Book Mark'et. "We have so much to offer here in Oakland. Heritage tourism is far more effective than recreation tourism, and we certainly have the historic element here." Devlin also recommended that GOBA remain aware of such things as the downsizing at banks and changes in county office sites. "These things affect us all in the town," she said. "We need to keep these things in mind. County offices should remain at the county seat."

The business persons were in agreement that more uniform and complete signage is needed throughout the county so that people can find Oakland while visiting the mountaintop. McCain and McCartney said both GOBA and the town have been working in that direction and will continue to pursue this project.

The GOBA officers were all three re-elected at the meeting for the 1998 year, with Mikal McCartney as president, Amy Rudy as vice president, and Scott Hollingsworth as secretary.

McCain also stressed the importance of shopping locally.

"I'm not completely sure of the figures, but it's something like this: spend one dollar at a local store and $.80 goes right back into the community. Spend one dollar at a mall and $.40 comes back to the community. Spend a buck at a super department store, like a Walmart or K-Mart, and only about $.20 comes back. So even if you have to spend 10 or 20 cents more locally, you should know that it benefits your own businesses or schools or town when you do that," the mayor said.

Richard Farmer Will Perform At Mountaintop '98

"Mountaintop '98" will once again headline award-winning vocalist and pianist Richard Allen Farmer, who will perform in concert at "A Festival in Celebration of the Joy of the Lord" lead in the musical worship during this 12th annual getaway conference for men and women to be held March 6-8 at Lakeview Resort in Morgantown, W.Va.

This former pastor and dean of the Chapel at Massachusetts' Gordon College now resides in Dallas. He is in full-time ministry as a Bible expositor and concert artist. As he travels extensively, Rev. Farmer's aim is to "make the Scripture and Christian music come alive for congregations and audiences throughout the world." Following a spring trip to South America, he will have ministered on every continent, but Antarctica. Several recordings of his music have been produced and he has written a hands-on approach book on creativity, It Won't Fly If You Don't Try.

"Richard Allen Farmer has been part of 'Mountaintop' since its inception in 1987 and is always a highlight of the weekend. Not only is he a gifted musician, but he has a delightful sense of humor and is an inspirational communicator. His concert is truly a celebration!" said Anne Gibson Robinson, a Garrett County native and co-founder of Living for Christ Conferences, the nonprofit, nondenominational sponsor.

The featured speaker for this conference is Patrick Morley. Most known as a best-selling author and highly sought-after speaker, Morley began his career as a businessman. He founded Morley Properties, which, during the 1980s, was one of Florida's 100 largest privately held companies. He has attended Reformed Theological Seminary, graduated from the Harvard Business School Owner/President Management Program, and serves on the board of directors of Campus Crusade for Christ. His topic for this weekend event is 'Finding God's Purpose for Your Life."

Conference rates, including all programs, four meals, and two nights' lodging, begin at $157 per person (four to a room). For more information or to register for "Mountaintop '98" by using VISA or MasterCard, persons may call Living for Christ Conferences at 304-455-5322.

A donation of $3 for adults and $1.50 for children 12 years and younger will be collected at the door. The public is welcome.

PIONEERS PLAN 4-H ACTIVITIES

At their February 8 meeting in the Joe and Stacy Fint home, the Aurora Pioneer 4-H Club voted to donate bookends for the Aurora Community Library and to help with the story hour to be held on Saturdays. Plans were made to clean the Beachy Cemetery when the weather becomes better. Those members planning to attend the Teen Leader/Charting Weekend and Dance Camp will receive a scholarship from the club. Rebecca Wotring reported on the planning made for this year's Older Members' Conference.

Devotions were presented by Kendra Durst, Eric Durst, and Jessica Callahan with Kendra reading a poem, "Smile," Eric reading 1 Corinthians 13:1-7, and Jessica reading the poem, "The Oyster." The American pledge was led by Tracy Fields and Rebecca Wotring led the 4-H Pledge.

Adrain Stemple presented the program which mentioned the places visited, the activities done, and the families with whom they lived during the recent trip to Russia, which was also taken by Melissa Callahan and Courtney Fint.

At the Valentine Bake-Off, Judge Willard Harsh placed entries as follows: first place, Jenna Sisler and Tracy Fields; second place, Kimberly Fike, Kaylen Fike, and Kendra Durst; third place, Becca Fint and Meghan Kelly; and fourth place, Scott Fields.

There were 20 members, two leaders and one guest, present.

HOMEMAKERS MEET

Fern Jamison conducted the devotions using a meditation, "The Art of Being Wise," and concluded with prayer.

President Delores Douglas reported that the club had provided gifts for 14 names from the Santa tree. Wilda Stemple and Penny Robinette will be asked to serve on the membership committee, along with Mary Jane Hanline. The quilt to be given to the Mother's Day Shrine in Grafton now has 104 names on it. To add names, persons may contact Janice Tackett. The canned goods brought to the December meeting were given to the Eddie and Reda Sisler family. Ideas for the July open meeting were sought. Planning the Mt. Lions June dinner will be Delores Slawter and Polly Engle.

Ressie Conrad, vice president, selected "New Year Facts" for her special feature.

The next meeting will be Feb. 17 at the squad hall, with Alice Penzo presenting the program, Ressie Conrad the hostess and Janice Tackett in charge of devotions.

Tape-A-Thon To Support Big Brothers, Sisters

Reel Video is sponsoring its third annual Tape-a-Thon for the Garrett County Branch of Big Brothers/Big Sisters. The event will take place Saturday, Feb. 21, at the Midway Plaza location. During the hours of 10 a.m. to 1 p.m., all proceeds from rentals will be donated to Big Brothers/Big Sisters. Little Caesar's pizza will be offered for $1 per slice. Reel Video has recruited local businesses to join the effort to promote a program that supports single-parent families.

Door prize drawings will be held throughout the event. A "Christmas Cats" decorative blanket and color television are among the prizes that will be given away to the customers who come into the store between the hours of 10 a.m. and 1 p.m.

Cathy Clocker of WKHJ Radio will provide a live remote from 10 a.m. to noon.

Big Brothers/Big Sisters is a youth-serving organization, based on a one-to-one relationship between an adult volunteer and a child at risk. Volunteers serving as mentors and role models help youth increase their self-confidence, reach their highest potential, and see themselves, often for the first time, as having happy and successful futures. Big Brothers/Big Sisters currently serves 55 children from single-parent families in Garrett County, 23 of whom are matched with a caring adult volunteer. They are currently seeking 32 volunteers to be matched with one of the "waiting littles."

The Tape-a-Thon assists in promoting community awareness of the Big Brothers/Big Sisters program, recruiting volunteers, and raising funds for the Garrett County branch. Donations can be made at Reel Video. For more information, persons may call Big Brothers/Big Sisters at 301-334-3591.

On Saturday, his granddaughter, Janet and David Skinner of the Washington, D.C. area, came to see him, brought along a big cake and took him out for dinner. On Sunday he was surprised by the Aurora United Methodist Church congregation with the singing of "Happy Birthday" and of a special song dedicated to him during the services, then a carry-in dinner held at the nearby memorial building. Coming to that event was his son Steve Stemple, and friend Marjorie of Elkins, in addition to the local congregation.

Carl Martin of Alabama was home last week to attend services for his grandmother, Mergil Fike, and to visit his parents, Maxine and Lee Martin and his sister and brother-in-law, Mary and Ben Kinser, and family.
